Maybe never again such VALUES!

SOME DAY you'll look back to the summer of 1933 and say: "Imagine! A Goodyear Tire for only $5.00!"

Yet even these remarkable low prices mean nothing unless the tire is built right. Along with these extraordinary prices for the new Pathfinder you get the highest quality in the moderate price field Goodyear has ever attained.

This new Pathfinder is a bigger value than the old Pathfinder. It has the bigger safety margin of FULL CENTER TRACTION—bigger mileage from the 20 PER CENT THICKER TREAD—stouter body of heat-resisting Supertwist Cord—and other improvements that make it a still better buy than the 17,000,000 Pathfinders that went before.

Look at the All-Weather values, also! This great thoroughbred—the finest tire that money can buy—waves an alluring price tag.

Whichever you want—new Pathfinder or All-Weather—remember this: More people are saving money with Goodyears than with any other kind.

PITTSBURGH MERCHANDISE WILL BE SHOWN IN AREA

Is City's First "Away From Home" Exhibit; Tableland went To Pittsburgh Last Year

WILL BE AT SOMERSET, PA.

An exhibition of Pittsburgh merchandise and products in the Allegheny Tableland is to be sponsored by the Allegheny Tableland Council of the Pittsburgh Chamber of Commerce on September 22nd and 23rd, with a preview for invited merchants only on the evening of Thursday, September 21st. Plans for the affair are now being completed by W. P. Benson, chairman of the Tableland Council, and a committee consisting of George R. Aufderheide, of the Arbuthnot Stephenson Company, and H. W. Leonard, of Joseph Horne Company, who announce that space probably will be provided at Somerset for the exhibition.

The exhibition is being held at the earnest request of the pople of the Allegheny Tableland Association, for whom the Chamber of Commerce last year sponsored an agricultural fair in Pittsburgh; and since eight counties are represented in the Association, huge crowds are expected to view Pittsburgh's display. The counties comprising the Tableland and actively associated with the organization are Somerset and Fayette in Pennsylvania; Garrett in Maryland; and Preston, Monongalia, Tucker, Grant, and Mineral, in West Virginia, the combined population of the Tableland proper being about one quarter of a million, according to records of the Tableland Council.

"Pittsburgh has been shown the products of the Tableland," says Benson. "Now we intend to go to them and show what Pittsburgh wholesalers, merchants and industrialists have to offer. We are not going to entice business which belongs to the Tableland; but we do want the Tableland people to buy in Pittsburgh everything they cannot buy in their own stores. They came to us months ago saying that they preferred to trade in Pittsburgh rather than more distant eastern cities. It is up to us to show our goods and cooperate with them."

The exhibition will be formally opened by a reception and preview for merchants of the Tableland on the evening of September 21st, when admittance will be by invitation. The invitations will be issued by the exhibitors.

General admission will be free to every one on Friday and Saturday, September 22nd and 23rd; and each day there will be valuable door prizes as well as first-class entertainment. It is planned to make Saturday afternoon especially interesting for farmers and their families, who might find difficulty in visiting the exhibition earlier.

Prior to the exhibition a truck equipped with public speaking facilities will tour the Tableland with one or more entertainers, to invite the entire district to visit this, Pittsburgh's first away-from-home exhibition.

At the merchants' reception, Benson, who is one of thirty-three invited to write food super-code, will preside at an open forum for the discussion of the problems of groeers, while Aufderheide will meet with dealers of general stores to be of such service as they may desire.

Six Seek Postmastership at Kitzmiller

Schools in County to Open on Wednesday, September 6

Schools of Garrett county, both elementary and high, will open for the 1933-34 term on Wednesday, September 6, according to F. E. Rathbun, county superintendent.

An all-day teachers' meeting will be held in Oakland on Tuesday, September 5, preceding the opening.

Appointment of elementary and high school teachers has not been completed, Mr. Rathbun stated.

PLANS ARE COMPLETE FOR THIRD ANNUAL RAM SHOW

Will Be Held in Oakland on Saturday, August 26, at 2 O'Clock

Plans are completed for the third annual purebred ram show and sale to be held in Oakland, Saturday, August 26th, at 2:00 o'clock p. m., according to County Agent John H. Carter. Sheepmen are expected to gather from all parts of Western Maryland, nearby West Virginia and Pennsylvania.

This year's consignment of purebred rams is drawn from several of the best purbred flocks in Maryland, and includes the following entries:

H. P. Miller, Grantsville, 15 Hampshires and Shropshires; E. D. Stottlemyer, Williamsport, 5 Shropshires; D. D. Meese, Grantsville, 2 Shropshires; Robert B. Rench, Hagerstown, 5 Hampshires.

All of these are purebred yearling rams. It is felt that they are the kind of rams that will add to the reputation of these parts in the production of high class market lambs. Those sheepmen who have obtained purebred rams in former years report that they have been more than satisfied with the good lambs produced by them. They also testify that the ewes by these purebred sires that have been kept in their flocks are sheering from 2 to 5 pounds more wool per head than their mothers produced before them.

All sheepmen are cordially invited to attend, whether they are interested in buying rams or not.

Narrowly Escape Serious Injury When Car Overturns

Blaine Casteel, 20 years old, son of Alvin Casteel, Rosedale, and Floyd Frantz, of Deep Creek, narrowly escaped serious injury Saturday night about ten o'clock when the car in which they were riding left the roadway, mounted an embankment and turned over against a tree on King's Hill, about three miles north of town on Route 37.

Running suddenly into the fog which enveloped the highway at the point of the accident, Casteel applied the brakes of the machine. The car plunged across the roadway, struck a ditch after it had surmounted the banked side of the road and turned a complete somersault, lodging behind a tree six feet above the roadside. Casteel was thrown free of the car and some twenty-five feet forward of it where he struck upon his head and shoulders, sustaining a number of head cuts and numerous body bruises, while Frantz was badly shaken up and was more or less bruised. Neither suffered any broken bones.

The automobile is a complete wreck. Casteel and Frantz were enroute to the latter's home when the accident occurred.

REPEAL WOULD INTENSIFY DEPRESSION, DRYS TOLD

Prohibition Should Be Retained, Ex-Congressman Moore Tells Mt. Lake Park Listeners

OVER 300 ARE PRESENT

Ex-Congressman C. Ellis Moore, of Ohio, speaking before about 300 at the annual meeting of the Anti-Saloon League of Maryland at Mt. Lake Park on Sunday, said that repeal of the eighteenth amendment would "intensify the depression rather than relieve it."

Mr. Moore said there was still a chance to retain the prohibition amendment and the drys should remember that 13 states could keep it in the constitution. "It should remain there even if held by a minimum of States because when we pass out of the depression and return to sanity we'll have the 18th amendment and it then can be enforced."

He argued that drunkenness had greatly decreased during prohibition, that the 18th amendment had rid the country of 170,000 saloons and that its repeal would mean their return.

"One of the most unwarranted statements of the wets is that drinking among young people is general and that they want repeal." Mr. Moore continued. "I find no clamor among the young people for repeal and there is no greater percentage of youthful drinkers now than in pre-prohibition days.

"The wets say they want control of the liquor traffic and ask that it be returned to State control. The liquor traffic can't he entrusted to run itself. They want liquor more than they want the control.

"The wets object to the lack of enforcement. Those in charge of enforcement state that the agitation of the wets has encouraged lawlessness and made the task of enforcement difficult. Can we trust those people to enforce it under State control?"

George W. Crabbe, speaking at the morning meeting, stated that beer had not lived up to claims made by those who fought for it several months ago.

"The wets claimed if breweries were open people would be satisfied and the depression ended. If they were satisfied they would not still be pushing for repeal.

"If beer has contributed to any marked degree for ending the depression I can see no reason for General Johnson of the NRA, Mrs. Johnson, their son and others, to engage in an effort to enforce consummers and producers to fall into line to end the depression.

"Breweries," he concluded, "have not given us normal times. I urge all people of Garrett county to vote against the beer bill and for continuing the 18th amendment at the polls on September 12."

The Gilbert-Brown Boys' Band of Oakland played a concert preceding the afternoon meeting. The sessions were held in the auditorium at the Park with Rev. I. S. Middaugh in charge of the service.

H. V. Leighton's Car Stolen, But Is Found Following Day

A Ford car belonging to H. V. Leighton, Loch Lynn Heights, was stolen from in front of his home Monday night, but was recovered the following day by Mr. Leighton near the Potomac Forest camp.

The car was hidden in the woods and brush and it was only by chance that Mr. Leighton and the forest camp officers discovered it. The car was not damaged.

Several reforestation workers were seen along the Mountain Lake road Monday night endeavoring to thumb their way back to camp. The location of the car in such close proximity to the camp indicates that the men decided to rlde, regardless of how they did it.

Fifty-three Producers Pass Second Potato Inspection

Fifty-three producers of the county who had applied for certification of seed from the University of Maryland Extension service passed the second Inspection which was completed last Friday by Dr. R. A. Jehle, plant pathologist, assisted by J. W. Heuberger.

Three producers discontinued and seven were disqualified, taking 12¾ acres from the total acreage of the first inspection. This leaves 117¼ acres eligible for certification. Wilt and leaf hopper were the causes of disqualification.

FIVE ARE NABBED IN SIX LIQUOR RAIDS IN COUNTY

Five Stills Are Discovered—Whiskey and Mash Are Confiscated and Destroyed

ALL HELD UNDER BOND

A series of raids by Federal Investigators W. R. Harvey and Charles E. Cushaw, of Western Maryland, resulted in the arrest of five Garrett countians and the confiscation and destruction of a large amount of whiskey and mash.

Last Wednesday officers seized a 30-gallon still and a barrel of mash on the farm of Ralph D. Liller, near Sand Run school house. Liller was arrested, charged with manufacture and possession and held under bond of $500.

Officers seized two barrels of mash and distilling equipment in the woods near Bittinger on Thursday and arrested Elmer Wilcy, who was arraigned before Magistrate J. B. Emory and held on charges of manufacture and possession under bond of $500.

Effie M. Garlitz, Avilton, was arrested and held under bond of $500 on similar charges when arraigned before Magistrate C. F. White. Officers said they seized a 30-gallon still, 20 gallons of alleged whiskey, and 150 gallons of mash. Garlitz stated whiskey manufactured at his plant was sold for $2 per gallon.

A 75-gallon still was confiscated at Blue Lick, near Avilton. No one was arrested but operators said there is a suspect under surveillance.

Man Runs With Keg

Officers visited the place of Jeff White, near Highland school, on Friday. White was sitting on the porch. As the officers approached, White ran to the nearby spring house and attempted to dispose of five gallons of whiskey. He was arrested for possession. A search in the woods nearby failed to uncover a still but other equipment used in operating a liquor plant was found. Harvey stated if White had remained on the porch he would still have his whiskey.

Threatened With Death

Daniel Webster Herman, of Hungry Hollow, near Oakland, was arrested on charges of manufacture and possession and held under bond of $500. When officers visited this place they discovered a still being operated in a cave situated in the rear of the kitchen and accessible only through the house. Despite threats of injury or death by Herman and his wife, they destroyed the plant together with 10 gallons of whiskey and 330 gallons of mash. Herman said whiskey was worth $3 a gallon, at which price he had been selling it.

Deputy Sheriff Samuel Cole, this county, accompanied the officers on the raids.

Fire Destroys Barn on Farm of Josephus Harvey

Fire of undetermined origin completely destroyed the large barn on the farm of Josephus Harvey, near Sand Flat, on the Deer Park highway, Tuesday evening about 8:15 o'clock.

According to members of Mr. Harvey's family, who discovered the fire, it seemed to start in or near the granary, located on the threshing floor of the structure. Within a very few minutes the entire structure was in flames.

Some machinery was saved from the building, but about sixty tons of hay and a Jersey bull belonging to Scott Paugh, were burned. Sparks communicated fire to a few shocks of oats standing in a nearby field and these were also consumed.

The Oakland fire department was called but due to a lack of water, the firemen could do nothing to subdue the flames. Wind, blowing from the east, prevented the burning of two dwelling houses nearby.

Graded Schools Second In State For June

Graded schools of the county were second in attendance among the counties of the State for June, with 97.3 per cent. Two-teacher schools of the county stood fourth among those of the State with 97.3, while elementary schools also stood fourth with 96.6 per cent. One-teacher schools were seventh with 95.8 per cent and high schools stood sixth among other high schools of Maryland with 97.8 per cent.

This record was just made public at the office of the Board of Education.

PLAN IS UNDER WAY FOR CEMETERY IMPROVEMENT

Heads of Local Organizations Are Discussing Problem

Representatives of various organizations of Oakland met Monday night at the City Hall, at the suggestion of the Rotary club, for forming a body to clean up and beautify the cemetery, and to formulate plans whereby permanent improvements might be made.

Practically every local organization was represented. H. C. Sincell was chosen president and C. F. White secretary. The organization is expected to be perfected at another meeting tonight.

The immediate problems to meet are the building of a roadway and the grading of all lots in section, in order to make it possible to have them mowed and otherwise taken care of properly. Eventually it is the plan to have a caretaker at all times.

Money for this purpose is to be raised through the various organizations, personal solicitation of all lot owners, and by public subscription.

BROIDA AND CARSPECKEN AWARDED SINGLES TITLES

Latter Wins Permanent Possession of Women's Tennis Cup by Downing Frances Grimes

BROIDA BESTS O'LOUGHLIN

Frank Broida, Pittsburgh, Pa., kept Dr. John O'Loughlin, also of Pittsburgh, from winning the Western Maryland championship tennis tournament twice in succession when he defeated the latter at the Mt. Lake Park courts Saturday afternoon 2-6, 7-5, 6-3, 0-6, 6-4. Dr. O'Loughlin won last year and won the first set this year, but except for a love set after a short intermission, could not keep pace with the 21-year old winner.

In the women's singles, however, Miss Margaret Carspecken defeated Miss Frances Grimes in the finals and took the championship for the third time gaining permanent possession of the cup. Games were 6-3, 6-1. Miss Carspecken's experience in tourney play showed to good advantage and her well-rounded game proved too much for the younger girl.

Miss Carspecken and Miriam Sullivan, Pittsburgh, took the women's doubles finals from Miss Grimes and Evelyn Claybrook, of Cumberland, 5-7, 6-2, 6-2. The men's doubles title went to B. F. Arkle and Wright Hughes, Wheeling, W. Va., who downed the Pittsburgh combination of Broida and Ed Alcorn, 6-1, 6-2, 7-5. Arkle and Hughes were both former holders of the men's singles cup

In the mixed doubles finals Miss Grimes and Broida defeated Miss Carspecken and Paul Sullivan, 6-2, 3-6, 7-5. Haymond Rapp, Clarksburg, W. Va., won the consolation round.

Immediately after the conclusion of the tournament Jennings Randolph, Congressman of the Second Congressional district of West Virginia, presented the cups to the winners and awardes to the runners-up.

It was apnounced that the tournament would begin next year August 13. This was the fourteenth annual event held under the auspices of the Woman's Civic club at Mt. Lake Park and sanctioned by the United States Lawn Tennis Association.

About 300 were present for the finals of the tournament on Saturday afternoon.

A junior tennis tournament will be held August 30 and 31. All under 18 years of age are eligible to compete.

BODY OF BOY WHO FELL FROM SURF BOARD MISSING

Search For Body Continues In Deep Creek Lake, McHenry, Where Mishap Occurred

IS FOURTH ONE TO DROWN

Ellis Rhodes, 17, of Friedens, Pa., four miles from Somerset, fell from an aqueplane which he was riding in Deep Creek Lake, and was drowned Tuesday evening, near McHenry. His body has not been recovered.

Rhodes was being towed by a motor boat operated by Kenneth Staub, of Somerset, summer resident of McHenry, when he lost his balance in some manner and toppled into the water. Two men on the bank say they saw him fall, struggle a short time on the surface, and disappear. The exact spot where he disappeared is difficult to determine.

He was said to have felt slightly ill before beginning his ride, and it is thought he was seized with cramps. Rescue workers began immediately to drag the lake with hook. They were handicapped greatly yesterday due to the rough waters and inclement weather, but continued their work this morning.

This is the fourth drowning to occur in Deep Creek.

WHEAT CONTROL PROGRAM OF INTEREST TO FARMERS

Meetings Being Held This Week by County Agent Well Attended

With an average attendance of 35 at each meeting held thus far, much interest seems to be manifest among the farmers of the county in regard to the wheat control program, John H. Carter, county agent, has announced.

It is being pointed out that in the majority of cases the growers of this county will not have to reduce their acreage any more than it has been reduced in the past few years. Every farmer in the county who grew wheat during 1930, 1931 and 1932 will be eligible to receive a cash payment from the government, and how the farmers are to share in this money is being explained at the various meetings being held this week throughout the county.

The rest of the scheduled meetings includes Accident school at 8:00 o'clock tonight; Friday, August 25, Keyser Ridge garage, 9:30 a. m.; Johnson school, 2:30 p. m.; Grantsville school, 8:00 p. m.

Saturday, August 26, Bittinger school, 8:00 p. m.

Tuesday, August 29, Jennings, 9:30 a. m.; New Germany, 2:30 p. m. These two meetings have been postponed from Saturday until the above date on account of the ram show and sale at Oakland on Saturday.

Next week will be announced the place for the meetings for setting up the organization.

Plans Practically Completed for Re-opening of Garrett National

Plans for the re-organization and re-opening of the Garrett National Bank of Oakland are practically completed, according to Mr. H. C. Riggs, formerly of Morgantown, who is expected to be the cashier of the institution. Only the details remain to be worked out, he stated.

Mr. Riggs is here now as a representative of the government attending to the details for the new organization in accordance with plans acceptable to the Comptroller.

All details are expected to be consumated at an early date when the bank will open.

IMPROVED UNIFORM INTERNATIONAL

SUNDAY SCHOOL Lesson

Lesson for August 27

SAUL

LESSON TEXT—I Samuel 15:13-26.

GOLDEN TEXT—And Samuel said, Hath the Lord as great delight in burnt offerings and sacrifices, as in obeying the voice of the Lord? Behold, to obey is better than sacrifice, and to hearken than the fat of rams. I Samuel 15:22.

PRIMARY TOPIC—Learning to Obey.

JUNIOR TOPIC—Why a King Failed.

INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOPIC—Successes and Failures of Saul.

YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOPIC—The Strength and Weakness of Saul.

Few men had greater advantages than Saul. Certainly all human history fails to record a more tragic failure. In order to present this lesson properly, it is necessary that the teacher have a synthetic grasp of Saul's history.

I. Saul's Advantages.

1. A worthy inheritance (9:1). His father was "a mighty man of power." One's inheritance is a strong factor in determining his success or failure in life.

2. His natural gifts (9:2).

a. He was humble (10:22). When facing the responsibility of national leadership he hid himself.

b. He was considerate of his father (9:5). Not being successful in the mission committed unto him and thinking that his father would be concerned about him, he proposed to go back.

c. The grace of God was upon him (10:5-7). God visited him with his grace to enable him to perceive the divine choice and to make good in it.

d. The Holy Spirit came upon him (10:10). Acceptable service can only be rendered in the energy of the Holy Spirit.

e. He was zealous for God (11:4-15). As leader he rendered loyal service unto his people because of zeal for God.

3 The friendship of Samuel (15:35). Samuel not only was loyal to Saul in the time of his life, but greatly mourned his death.

II. Saul Made King (chaps. 8-10).

1. The demand of the people (8:1-22). The reason for this demand was threefold:

a. Incapacity of old age (v. 5). This was at least the plea of the people, which seems not to have been denied.

b. The unfaithfulness of his sons (v. 5). Samuel greatly blundered in the appointment of his sons as judges. The office was not hereditary, and they were morally unfit (v. 3).

c. Desired to be like other nations (v. 5). The surrounding nations had strong leaders and rulers, and it was natural that the Israelites should desire proper leadership. Samuel protested, and took the matter to the Lord in prayer. The Lord directed him to solemnly point out to the people the meaning of their action.

2. Saul chosen as king (9:1-11). While on an errand for his father, Samuel found him and anointed him (10:1-16). In due time the divine choice was confirmed by the people at Mizpeh (10:17-27).

3. Saul's leadership displayed (11:1-15). He revealed his military genius in effecting a great victory over the Ammonites at Jabez. Samuel took advantage of this opportunity to have Saul confirmed as king.

III. Saul's Failure (15:1-27).

1. God's command (vv. 1-3). God directed him to utterly destroy the Amalekites because of their evil treatment of Israel (Exod. 17:8; Deut. 25:17).

2. Saul's disobedience (vv. 4-9). Agag, the king, was spared and the best of the goods appropriated.

3. Saul rejected by God (vv. 10-25).

a. Samuel cried to God (v. 11). The news of Saul's disgraceful failure grently disturbed Samuel, moving him to pray to God day and night.

b. Saul's hypocritical pretense (vv. 15, 16). This pretense carried a lie upon its face. His disobedience was revealed by the bleating of the sheep and the lowing of the herds.

c. Samuel rehearses before Saul God's dealing with him (vv. 17-23). He brought him face to face with his sin. God is more concerned with having obedience on the part of his servants than he is to have them offer sacrifices unto him.

IV. The Divine Judgment Falls Upon Saul (15:26-35).

1. The loss of his kingdom (vv. 26-31). For the presumptuous offering of sacrifice the kingdom was rent from Saul and the dynasty passed from his house.

2. Under the control of an evil spirit (19:9-11). When Saul refused allegiance to God, Satan took control of him.

3. His shameful death (31:1-4). He refused to destroy the Amalekite and was shamefully treated by an Amalekite (II Sam. 1:10), and ended his life by his own hand.

Pray More

No resolution or, better, no determination you can make will mean so much in wonderful results as to determine that you will pray much more than ever, that you will pray longer and more widely and deeply in the closet hours at a time to do it, that you will have a worthwhile daily family worship, and that you will really pray in church services. Real praying breath turns to mighty steam power, to radio messages farther than you dream, to results immeasurable.

JULY NEWS REPORTS GIVE HEALTH PICTURE IN STATE

Dr. R. H. Riley Calls Attention to Report From One County

Here are some items from the July report of the health officer of one of the counties of Maryland. In calling attention to them, Dr. R. H. Riley, Director of the State Department of Health said, "While they concern the activities in a particular county, they give an accurate picture of what is going on all over the State." These come from one of the counties on the Eastern Shore:

Typhoid Fever

Nine cases of typhoid fever were reported from this county during the month—three white and six colored. One death—white. The majority of the colored live in an unsewered section in which sanitary conditions are very bad. It is planned to have water and sewerage systems put in this section of the town with the assistance of Federal funds. This will be done as soon as the money is available. In the meanwhile, a strenuous educational campaign has been carried on during the summer, by means of newspaper articles, talks, and personal letters, to get the individual citizen to realize the danger he is in from typhoid fever and to prevent it both by better sanitary living and immunization through vaccine.

One typhoid carrier was found during the month. This person has been responsible for three cases, two of which occurred this year, and one last year.

Tuberculosis

Two deaths were reported from tuberculosis during the month; with three new cases and eight suspects. Tuberculosis continues to be our most serious disease in this county and it is also one of the hardest to control due to the slow onset of the disease, and the difficulty of finding the cases and of obtaining proper care for them in the early stages of the disease.

Protection of Young Children Against Smallpox and Diphtheria

Letters have been sent to the parents of children who will be six months old this month, advising them to have their babies protected against smallpox and diphtheria and telling them that it is now possible to have their children immunized against diphtheria through the use of one inoculation with alum precipitated toxoid. The doctors in the county are cooperating to the best of their ability to immunize the children in the families they attend. But there are still a great many persons who look upon a hypodermic as an insurmountable objection to protection against diphtheria and it is necessary to have an active case of diphtheria in the neighborhood to arouse parents to do what should be done for each child as soon as it is old enough. Plans are being made for continuing the immunization campaign among school children and preschool children as soon as schools are opened.

Since the beginning of the year—during the seven months from January to the end of July, 1,165 children in this county have been immunized against diphtheria, 270 persons have been protected against typhoid fever, and 390 have been vaccinated against smallpox, through the County Health Unit.

If your elephant wants to ride on top

IT'S ALL RIGHT WITH A CHEVROLET

CHEVROLET We didn't actually plan on elephants when we chose the bodies for the new Chevrolet. But we did choose bodies rigid enough, and strong enough, to support six tons of elephant or anything else you can name. Fisher bodies . . . steel bodies plus a hardwood frame . . . exactly the same type of bodies used on all 12 and 16-cylinder cars. Steel alone is not enough to make you as safe and secure as we want you to be in a Chevrolet. A steel body, welded into a solid wall of protection plus resilient hardwood reinforcing to take up stress, absorb shocks and prevent the steel from following its natural tendency to buckle under pressure makes the sturdiest body of all—the kind used on the Chevrolet, and on no other low-priced car. Remember that when you buy a car. Be sure to get all you pay for ... the super-safety of a steel-plus-wood Fisher body.

You remember when a few weeks ago "Alder street returned to Baltimore," or so it stated in the paper across the way.

Ed Wallace gives out the information that Oak street heard from Alder and Alder said that she was coming home—that Baltimore was no fit place in which to live. The information comes at an opportune time. Second street was getting itching feet and with both Second and Alder streets gone, people would have begun to lose interest in the town.

The army camps have been successful in at least one respect. Mike Liller says the boys are coming in now to have the waist measurement of their trousers reduced. One fellow has dropped from a 42 to a 36.

The typical golfer with excuses for his game and all that, has been found. All spruced up in full regalia he watched his partner tee off at the first hole. His partner, by the way, went way to the right. Then old man typical tees off. He goes away over to the left. Turning to the threesome just in back of him and waiting for the chance to shove off, he remarks: "Which direction is the first hole?" As if he didn't aim for it.

This thing of manufacturing an automobile collision at the Cumberland Fair, both cars going at the rate of forty miles per hour, just for a chance to thrill the crowd, or attract people, is my idea of a lack of something. Even if the cars were padded. That's risking human life needlessly.

And by the way, are we going to have a Fair this year or not?

Chickens Hold Convention

Seeing in the evening paper that the hen, by doing her duty, has caused another crisis for the farm adjustment administration, meaning too many eggs, Chief Buff Leghorn Johnson called a hen convention early this morning to arrange for a blanket code.

"I want to see the NRA sign hanging on all Garrett county hen houses by September 1," cackled Chief Johnson. "I'll see that egg eaters also pledge to buy nothing but NRA members' productions, even if they are brown or unwashed," he continued.

Accordingly the following attended the meeting this morning: Barred Plymouth Rocks, White Wyandottes, Black Minorcas, Aneonas, Orpingtons, Langshans and Rhode Island Reds. The bantams declared they wouldn't go in with the big fellows and failed to appear.

"If NRA means 'not responsible for anything' I'm all for signing up," said one big Langshan rooster. "Although I won't be able to reduce my egg production any, I'll show my patriotism by scratching my name."

A motherly looking Minorca was up in arms and strode back and forth through the aisles, just as if she were on a roost. "If we pledge to reduce our quality of eggs it will simply mean race suicide," she wailed. "If you want a code that would really benefit hens and help deplete the supply, agree upon a smaller size egg."

So much cackling went on at the convention that over 300 eggs were laid right there and out of it all came the following code:

"This agreement is binding until you are selected for a stew or fry or until the National Rooster approves his own hen code and then you'll abide by that or nobody will eat your eggs.

"After August 31, any biddy under 9 months is forbidden to lay an egg or to scratch for food.

"Everyone agrees not to work more than 40 hours a week.

"Each hen will be given not less than 30 grains of corn per day whether it is her day to lay an egg or fool somebody by just cackling. If you are a city hen you will be given at least 40 grains. Why, I don't know.

"You must not frustrate the spirit of this code by working overtime. If the supply gets too bad it will be especially hard on actors.

"We sign this agreement, notwithstanding the fact that we believe Chief Johnson has a code id his head—or something.

P. S.—This code will be considered invalid within ten days if Hogs don't adopt a similar code and fall in line with the NRA movement—Never Run Again."

60 MEN CAME TO THIS FARMER'S AID!...

"There's a fire at Mr. Flatter's farm," called the telephone operator hurriedly. She rang up the neighboring farms and soon 60 men were fighting the flames. A neighbor discovered the fire while the family was away. She notified the operator who located Mr. Flatter while calling other farmers. This quick work saved the home and other farm buildings. Many cases like this show how the telephone reduces the hazards and losses of farm life.

Our Golden Harvest
Season of Sales
Is Now In FULL SWING!

We call your attention to this Sale and in connection with same, we want to tell you more about the Half-Price Store.

This store came to Garrett County and located in Oakland for the sole purpose of being your friend. We have built this store entirely on high quality merchandise always at the lowest price, and in doing this we have not advertised a special or two each week just to get you in our store, and then sell you something else at a higher price to make up the difference. Instead of this policy we have always marked every article in the store so low that you could not afford to buy anywhere else unless you paid a much higher price for the same merchandise. There is no "CATCH" in our policy, we simply do what we say, "Buy for Cash and Sell for Less."

We also call your attention to the fact that School Days are here again and that you can supply each and every child's needs at this store at a saving to you of many dollars. These articles are not headed by one or two specials, but every article in the store is marked ridiculously low.

This week we are moving our stock from Friendsville to the Oakland Store and there will be hundreds of additional bargains for the thrifty shopper. COME! BUY! and SAVE!

INCONSISTENCIES OF NEW DEAL

It would be easier to have faith in the new deal if those who are engineering it did not so often appear surprised at the results of their own actions. It is only a few days since Secretary of Agriculture Wallace, one of the architects of a higher price level for wheat, let out a telegraphic cry of pained astonishment over the fact that the Iowa farm belt had reacted to his wheat program by raising the price of bread. And now here is Gen. Hugh S. Johnson, the author of industrial recovery, indicating that despite all the hullabaloo about raising prices for industrial products he is taken completely unawares by the suggestion that prices of industrial products may rise.

Gen. Johnson's desire to oppose what he is pleased to call "extortion-at prices" is pleasant to contemplate. But what does he think he is doing? Doesn't he know that the whole enterprise upon which he is engaged is designed to promote price rises and that when the snowball of inflation gets going it rolls very, very fast? Take the textile code, on which he was recently engaged. That code by his own calculation contemplates an advance of some 50 per cent or more in labor costs. What is the manufacturer to do with this additional burden? The textile mills have not been making a lot of money under the old regime. Is it to be expected that they will absorb a 50 per cent wage increase and charge the whole thing up to profit and loss?

Again, the agricultural recovery people are about to slap a processing tax on cotton amounting to 3 cents a pound or $15 a bale. In anticipation, cotton quotations have already started a precipitous rise. This will still further increase the cost of textile operations. It would require a great deal more naivete than we think Gen. Johnson possesses to believe that the operators will not undertake to pass this additional load on to consumers. The recovery administrator may howl about "extortion" until he is hoarse, but so long as he and his collaborators at Washington work in such a way as to make "extortion" inevitable the howling will be about as effective as such gestures usually are.

Much more than mere inconsistency is involved in this matter. There is a great danger that the price rise which is being engineered through the recovery administration, through the agricultural administration and through the President's talk about inflation may defeat itself. It is one thing to have prices rise by inevitable operation of the law of supply and demand, and it is quite another thing to have them boosted suddenly and artificially. In the latter case there is not a little danger that consumer demand may he checked and that the price rise may operate as a hrake on business instead of as a spur.

Gen. Johnson does not seem to have considered this possibility. He just talks about the objections to "extortionate prices." Does he think there can be a cause without an effect?—Baltimore Sun.

THE DOUBLE SHUFFLE

What a wonderful "double shuffle" the Brain Trust has succeeded in palming off on the people, because of the supineness of Congress, under the "new deal"!

Some people are to be paid for working and another great and enormous number are to he paid for not working!

It is the old alternative presented to men and women since the days of Adam and Eve. You are dammed if you do, and dammed if you don't!

Two hundred and fifty thousand (250,000) men, together with foremen, overseers, instructors, overlords, as a reforestation army of ahout 300,000 and at a cost of $300,000,000 or more, is now being established. These are to help rehahilitate farm lands, to raise more crops, to develop power and sites for more factories so more people can be employed.

We are now surfeited with farm products, also with factory products, so much so that twelve millions of factory workers and those in other lines are out of jobs.

While arrangements are being made to make more farms, better farms, so that more people can be employed, the national government is going to attempt to curtail farm production, hence have fewer people at work, but pay them for not working.

The cotton crop is to be shortened many millions of acres and the growers paid about $35 or more for each acre on which they do not raise cotton. That will cost $150,000,000.

The wheat crop is to be shortened millions of acres; so is the corn crop, and the tobacco crop, and those farmers who cut off the acreage will be paid for each acre cut off, and that in each case—wheat, corn and tobacco—will run into hundreds of millions of dollars.

Beef cattle, horses, dairy cows, hogs, sheep, poultry, etc., are to be limited, too, so that so many will not be raised.

The only animals that will be produced in larger numbers will he "wild jackasses"—and when the government system that pays an increased number higher wages who are working and also pays an equally large number for not working, then will the taxpayers, the people, he wild as well as the jackasses.

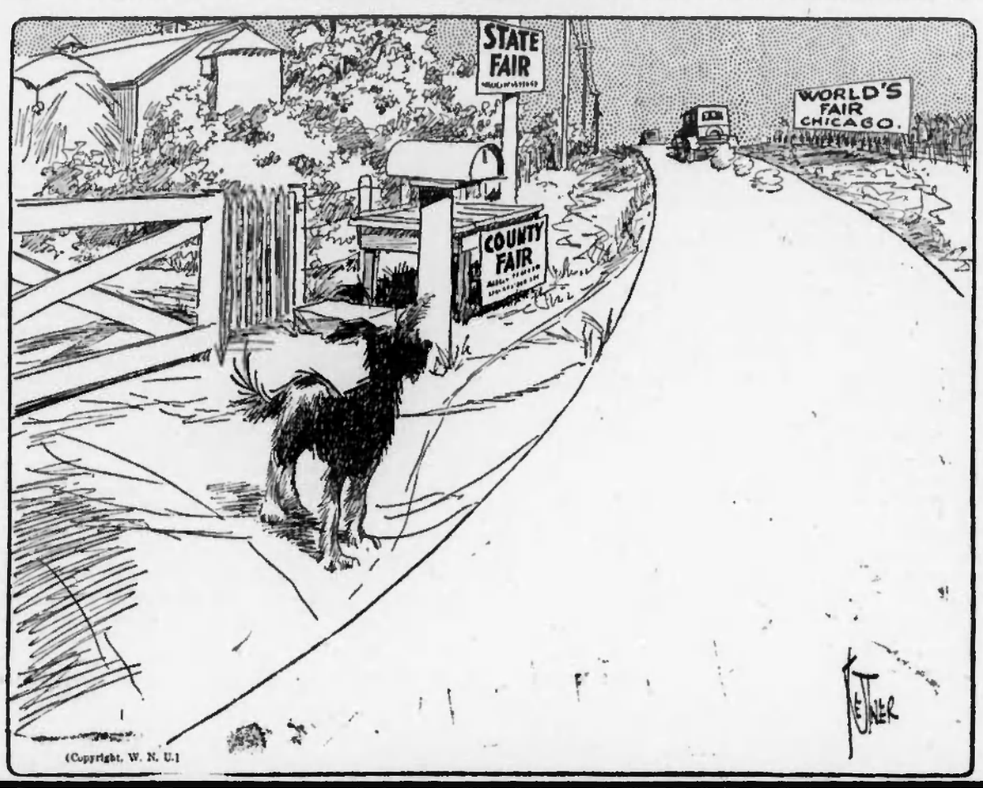
It's Fair Time



NATIONAL AFFAIRS

By FRANK P. LITSCHERT

With the break down of the proposed economic agreements in the London conference, there have been rumors of imminent combinations of certain nations against the United States for the purpose of waging a trade war. These rumors can be taken with a grain of salt. The same scheme has been tried before against the United States and against other nations, but has generally failed to work.

The big card in Uncle Sam's favor is that he has the largest potential market in the world. His people have the highest standard of living, make the most money and spend it—sometimes we think that in certain eras of prosperity they may have spent too much of it. But at any rate, foreign nations always are casting a wistful eye at the American market. They would rather have a share in that market than to be a part of doubtful organization for exploiting other parts of the world at the expense of the United States. They take this view because they know that the American market, if they can once get in it, is worth all the other possible fields of commercial exploitation.

Of course the American market is generally protected for the home producer against foreign dumping and cheap production from abroad. But even at that more than half of our imports come in duty free and the nations who supply us with these goods are not going to forget the potentialities of the American market.

Since Uncle Sam consumes about ninety per cent of what he produces he is not going to give away this great American market in the hope of finding a pot of gold at the end of the European trade rainbow. At the same time it will always he necessary for him to import, in times of prosperity, great amounts of commodities which he cannot produce for himself, certain raw materials and finished goods, most of those in the latter elass coming under what is called "luxury goods." These usually carry a tariff, as a matter of raising a revenue, but few people object to this, even the free traders, because the materials so assessed are non-essentials which are purchased only by the rich and well-to-do. It has been the fact that we have had so few rich and well-to-do during the past three years, and not the effect of Smoot-Hawley Tariff, which has played havoc with our foreign trade, so far as our imports are concerned.

At any rate, so long as we have this rich potential market at home, we will not have to worry so much about possible trade arrangements against us. They will fall of their own weight, or break under the strain of rivalry among the participants.

Liver heads the list among iron-rich foods. Iron is necessary in building up a rich red blood supply. Also supplies Vitamin A which helps in prevention of colds and builds up resistance against other infections. Beef, pork and lamb liver are just as valuable as calf liver. It is a good food to provide for the children once a week.

Liver should be wiped with a damp cloth and the outer skin and large veins removed. It is not necessary to scald or soak the liver before cooking unless it is to be ground. Scalding makes it easier to handle when it is to be ground.

Liver may be made more tender and palatable by:

Careful, slow cooking.
Chopping or grinding.

Creamed Liver

One and one-half cups liver, cubed, 1 cup milk, 2 tablespoons fat, 2 tablespoons flour, ½ teaspoon salt, 1-8 teaspoon pepper.

Make a cream sauce according to the method preferred, add cubed liver, salt and pepper. Cook gently for 12 to 15 minutes, or until liver is tender. Beef liver will take a little longer. Serve on toast or with baked potatoes. Four servings.

Variations: Finely cubed cooked liver may be added to a number of vegetables, creamed or escalloped. Add the liver to the sauce or arrange as a garnish over the top. About ¼ to 1-3 as much liver as vegetables is sufficient.

Braised Liver With Vegetables

One pound liver, 1½ tablespoons bacon fat, 1 cup stock, 1 cup tomato juice, 1½ tablespoons flour, 1-8 teaspoon pepper, 1 small turnip, cubed, 2 carrots, sliced, 1 onion, sliced, ⅛ bayleaf, ½ teaspoon salt, ¼ cup celery, cubed.

Cut liver into 2-inch squares, roll in flour, salt and pepper, and brown in bacon fat. Remove from fat, add vegetables and brown slightly. Combine liver, vegetables and seasonings. Pour into casserole, cover and bake in a moderate oven 1½ to 2 hours. Uncover during last half hour of cooking.

Scalloped Liver and Potatoes

One pound liver, sliced thin, salt and pepper, flour, 2 tablespoons bacon fat, 1 quart thinly sliced potatoes, 1 small onion, minced, 1½ cups milk.

Salt and flour the liver and brown lightly in the bacon fat. Place a layer of the raw potatoes in an oiled baking dish, sprinkle with salt and pepper, add some of the liver and onion, and continue until all are used. The top layer should be of potatoes. Pour on the milk, cover, and bake for 1 hour in a moderate oven or until the potatoes are tender. At the last remove the cover and allow the potatoes to brown on top.

Sympathy

One of the questions most frequently asked us by our friends is this:

"How can you be constantly in the homes of bereaved families without becoming callous and 'case hardened'? How do you keep your sympathies alive?"

We always answer that in each individual case there is a new opportunity to be of real service in time of need. We consider our knowledge and experience as a charge given to us for the benefit of others.

THE MARYLAND BIBLE SOCIETY'S CORNER

"The Word of Our God Shall Stand Forever"

DANIEL

The author of this Book, like Ezekiel, was a captive in Babylon. He was taken into the court of King Nebuchadnezzar while a youth and trained in the Chaldean language and sciences. In many respects his career resembled that of Joseph, and there are many traits of character common to both of these remarkable men. Both maintained a high standard of spiritual life in the midst of environments which were hostile to the moral ideals of Israel, triumphing over seemingly unsurmountable difficulties.

The central theme of this book is the sovereignty of God over the affairs of men in all ages. The Pagan king's confessions of this truth constitutes the key verses of Daniel's prophecy. The narrative is largely biographical, and contains an account of thrilling events and divine interpositions unsurpassed in the Old Testament. It refers to six moral conflicts in which Daniel and his companions participated.

The first conflict is between Pagan self-indulgence and conscientious abstinence in promoting health—Chapter 1:8-15. It is a case of vegetables and water against wine and highly seasoned meats. Abstinence wins.

The second conflict is recorded in Chapter 2:1-47, and represents Pagan magic arrayed against heavenly wisdom in the interpretation of dreams. Divine wisdom wins.

Heathen idolatry is next shown in conflict with the worship of Jehovah, Chapter 3:1-30. Loyalty to Jehovah wins.

The fourth conflict, Chapter 4:4-37, is that of a Pagan King's pride arrayed against Divine sovereignty. The king is turned out to eat grass like an ox. God wins.

Sacrilege against reverence for sacred objects constitutes the fifth conflict, when the impious Balshazzar brings the holy vessels taken from the temple at Jerusalem and despoils them at his banquet of wine. The hand writes its awful message on the wall and reverence wins. Chapter 5:1-30.

The sixth and last conflict, between malicious plotting of the wicked and the providence of God over His saints, ends by the victory of Providence in stopping the mouths of lions. Chapter 6:1-28.

As already indicated, Daniel is a mystery book, and is a companion book to Revelation. However, attempts to fit the prophecies of Daniel and Revelation into the facts and events of human history have produced an endless conflict of opinions. One may conceive of a general interpretation of visions, but a true interpretation of their details is not always clear.

Two paths are generally acknowledged by candid scholars: First, that the prophecies represent a partly veiled revelation of future evnts in secular and sacred history, and second, that the visions point to the ultimate triumph of God's kingdom over all satanic and world powers. Many commentators see in Chapter 7, where the four beasts are discussed, a symbolism representing the four great empires successively ruling the ancient world: Babylon, Medo-Persia, Greece and Rome.

Some choice passages of this prophecy are Daniel's purpose. Chapter 1:8, the stone out of the mountain; Chapter 2:44-45. The answer of the three Hebrew captives, Chapter 3: 16-18; the feast of Belshazzar, Chapter 5; Daniel in the lion's den, Chapter 6:1-24; the vision of the judgment, Chapter 7:9-14; the soul winner's promise, Chapter 12. Perhaps no better thought could be extracted from this great Book than this last. For the ultimate aim of revelation is the salvation of souls and the salvaging of human lives. Daniel declares that the reward of such service is no less than eternal glory. "And they that be wise shall shine as the brightness of the firmament: and they that turn many to righteousness as the stars for ever and ever."

JOEL

In a frieze of the prophets by one of our modern painters, Joel is represented with his eyes covered by a great blue scarf, as if to hide from his sight the impending calamities so soon to overtake his beloved country. The date of his prophecy is uncertain. There is no mention of priest or king by name. The prophet launches his message with a declaration of sundry judgment of God and exhorts the people to observe them. Joel means "Jehovah is God." This name is a clarion call to the people, urging national repentance and reminding them of the mercy and blessing always in store for the penitent.

Drunkenness and idolatry are the chief sins against which Joel utters his condemnation. The prophet sees in a visitation of a plague of locusts and a severe drought punishments for the sins of the people. He regards the coming of the locusts as prophetic of coming invasions of the armies of Judah's enemies. Again and again this time of judgments is referred to as "the day of the Lord."

Because of these calamities and their cause, Joel calls the people to penitence and prayer, in language rarely excelled for exalted beauty and power of expression: "The day of the Lord is great and very terrible; and who can abide it? Therefore also now, saith the Lord, Turn ye even to me with all your heart, and with fasting, and with weeping, and with mourning: and rend your heart, and not your garments, and turn unto the Lord your God: for he is gracious and merciful, slow to anger, and of great kindness and repenteth him of the evil. Then will the Lord be jealous for his land and pity his people. Yea, the Lord will answer and say unto his people, Behold, I will send you corn, and wine, and oil, and ye shall be satisfied therewith; and I will no more make you a reproach among the heathen. There will be a season of great refreshing. Copious rains will ensure bounteous harvests." And not only shall there be an abundance of material goods, but an outpouring of the Holy Spirit will usher in a great revival of character building morality. Truth and righteousness will flourish again in the midst of God's people, and the kingdom of God shall be once more established in the earth.

Of this happy time of the Spirit's dominion, Joel writes this glorious propheey: "And it shall come to pass afterward, that I will pour out my spirit upon all flesh: and your sons and your daughters shall prophecy, your old men shall dream dreams, your young men shall see visions: and also upon the servant and upon the handmaids in those days will I pour out my spirit."

Thus the prophet of the veiled face sees beyond the veil, apprehending Him who is invisiable and beholding a gracious time in the future when God will restore his people and heal all their wounds.

Dry Committee Formed for Protection of Boys and Girls

Following the address at the Park Sunday of Hon. C. Ellis Moore, ex-Congressman from Ohio, a number of Oakland and Mt. Lake citizens interested in keeping the prohibition amendment in the constitution and in keeping beer out of Garrett county, met and organized a committee for protection of boys and girls.

The committee drafted the following statement which is printed below:

Protect Our Boys And Girls

"Alcohol is a depressant, habit-forming, narcotic drug"—this is the unanimous verdict of scientists who have recently made thorough investigations of the effect of alchol on the human organism.

A vote for repeal of the Eighteenth Amendment will be, in effect, a vote for the repeal of all local, as well as federal, laws prohibiting the traffic in narcotic beverages. A vote for repeal of the Eighteenth Amendment will be, in reality, a vote for the repeal of the local option law, enacted many years before federal prohibition, which made Garrett a safer place for women and a wholesomer place for children.

The wets are planning a determined campaign to reestablish the liquor traffic in every part of Maryland. If Garrett county votes for repeal, no representative of the county in the State Legislature will feel that he has any popular support for fighting the reestablishment of the narcotic beverage traffic in our communities. PROTECT OUR BOYS AND GIRLS! Vote "AGAINST RATIFICATION."

Dr. Wilder D. Bancroft, professor of physiological chemistry at Cornell, has in recent years made exhaustive research in this subject. He discovered that the effect of alcohol on the nervous system is precisely like that of opium, morphine, chloroform, and ether. All these drugs produce a state of coagulation in the nerve cells. Under the microscope the cells are seen to thicken and whiten, like an egg being cooked. Thus the slang expression for an intoxicated person, "boiled" or "stewed", is literally and scientifically correct. While in this state, the nerve cells and brain cells are temporarily deadened. The effect is partially or completely narcosis or anaesthesia, according to the amount of the drug that is used.

The British Medical Research Council sums up its findings in this statement: "Alcohol's direct effect on the nervous system is, in all stages and upon all parts of the system, to depress and suspend its functions; it is in short, from first to last, a narcotic drug."

It used to be believed that alcohol was a stimulant. Statements to this effect can be found in now obsolete medical works. But recent scientific investigations prove beyond shadow of doubt that alcohol is always and only a depressant narcotic drug. A drink of liquor makes the heart beat faster, not because it stimulates the heart, but because it paralyzes the nervous control of the heart so that it races unrestricted, like an engine whose governor has been thrown out of adjustment.

Alcohol first attacks the higher nerve centers. It depresses and narcotizes the brain, befuddling intellect, blurring vision, retarding reaction time, interfering with quick and accurate response to stimuli. It has this effect even when used in the mildest forms and in the most "temeprate" amounts.

PROTECT OUR BOYS AND GIRLS!

Go to the polls on September 12th and vote "AGAINST RATIFICATION" and also vote AGAINST BEER!

Mrs. Blanche Guard, daughters Iris and Betsy and Mrs. Jack Olsen have returned to Pittsburgh after spending several weeks visiting friends and relatives in and about town.

Mrs. Buckhannon and son have returned to Jamaica, New York, after visiting James Cover and family here for several weeks. They were accompanied by a small daughter of the Cover family, who, they hope, will make her home with them in New York.

How Lawlessness In the Old West Was Tamed

The lawless days of the old West and the way in which Judge Isaac Parker waged stern and relentless warfare against desperadoes, so turning the tide and paving the way for a new civilization in the Indian country, is told in an interesting way in the current issue of the National Republic by John Bartlett Meserve. By way of beginning Mr. Meserve says:

"The old West may have vanished and its fabled wildness may be as dead as proverbial Nineveh, but as long as hearts are young, dreams of romance lie in wait in the land where leads the sunset trail—where once the all-around bad man and the Indian roamed the plains. Its initial years witnessed the mingling of romance and sordid tragedy—frontiersman, judge, marshal, ranger, road agent, saloonkeeper, gambler, cattle thief, desperado, painted prostitute and Indian, 'in one red burial blent.' The recalling of the West to the influence of civilization presents a strange mixture of human elements and developed a group of men who for ability, character, spirit and purpose has no precise counterpart in our history. Each community in the reckless West of that departed age of early settlement had its courageous leaders who met the challenge of outlawry and with unafraid resolve and mailed fist enforced the rudiments of law and made possible the settlement of the great plains. The forms of law with its ruthless exactions which were meted out would be discounted today but were all sufficient and necessary during those formative days as the thin wave of pioneer advance edged its slow and painful course across the continent. Perhaps they may have endured, pitied and to some extent embraced some of the vices of the frontier, but ces't la vie. The well ordered commonwealths of the trans-Missouri plains stand today like obelisks silhouetted against the notion's magic sky of progress, symbolic of the courage and heroism of the frontiersman of the romantice West.

"Lying immediately south of the state of Kansas and hedged between that state and the state of Texas was the Indian country later to become the old Indian Territory and today, the state of Oklahoma. Wild bands of roving Indians roamed its prairies and hunted and fished in season among its woodlands and in its placid streams for many years before the government gave heed to its possibilities as a permanent abode for certain of the Eastern tribes. In the thirties of the last century the government accomplished the enforced deportation of the Creek, Cherokee, Choctaw, Chickasaw and Seminole Indian tribes from their ancient homes in the Southern States to this Indian country. These tribes, although settled upon separate reservations, were to become known collectively as the Five Civilized Tribes. They established their social and political structures in their new homes and enjoyed, unmolested, their own peculiar mannerisms and laws which were enforced through their own tribal courts. These Indians were not nomadic and prior to their removal had acquired many of the arts of civilization and these they continued to develop in the West. They dwelt in comparative peace among themselves and with the contiguous tribes and white travelers and traders came and went among them in perfect safety. Much industry was displayed, the soil was generous and Nature paid bounteous dividends to reward these reservation parishioners of the government, for their individual efforts. United States troops were at Fort Gibson but were rarely requisitioned."

THE MARYLAND BIBLE SOCIETY'S CORNER

"The Word of Our God Shall Stand Forever"

DANIEL

The author of this Book, like Ezekiel, was a captive in Babylon. He was taken into the court of King Nebuchadnezzar while a youth and trained in the Chaldean language and sciences. In many respects his career resembled that of Joseph, and there are many traits of character common to both of these remarkable men. Both maintained a high standard of spiritual life in the midst of environments which were hostile to the moral ideals of Israel, triumphing over seemingly unsurmountable difficulties.

The central theme of this book is the sovereignty of God over the affairs of men in all ages. The Pagan king's confessions of this truth constitutes the key verses of Daniel's prophecy. The narrative is largely biographical, and contains an account of thrilling events and divine interpositions unsurpassed in the Old Testament. It refers to six moral conflicts in which Daniel and his companions participated.

The first conflict is between Pagan self-indulgence and conscientious abstinence in promoting health—Chapter 1:8-15. It is a case of vegetables and water against wine and highly seasoned meats. Abstinence wins.

The second conflict is recorded in Chapter 2:1-47, and represents Pagan magic arrayed against heavenly wisdom in the interpretation of dreams. Divine wisdom wins.

Heathen idolatry is next shown in conflict with the worship of Jehovah, Chapter 3:1-30. Loyalty to Jehovah wins.

The fourth conflict, Chapter 4:4-37, is that of a Pagan King's pride arrayed against Divine sovereignty. The king is turned out to eat grass like an ox. God wins.

Sacrilege against reverence for sacred objects constitutes the fifth conflict, when the impious Balshazzar brings the holy vessels taken from the temple at Jerusalem and despoils them at his banquet of wine. The hand writes its awful message on the wall and reverence wins. Chapter 5:1-30.

The sixth and last conflict, between malicious plotting of the wicked and the providence of God over His saints, ends by the victory of Providence in stopping the mouths of lions. Chapter 6:1-28.

As already indicated, Daniel is a mystery book, and is a companion book to Revelation. However, attempts to fit the prophecies of Daniel and Revelation into the facts and events of human history have produced an endless conflict of opinions. One may conceive of a general interpretation of visions, but a true interpretation of their details is not always clear.

Two paths are generally acknowledged by candid scholars: First, that the prophecies represent a partly veiled revelation of future evnts in secular and sacred history, and second, that the visions point to the ultimate triumph of God's kingdom over all satanic and world powers. Some choice passages of this prophcey are Daniel's purpose. Chapter 1:8, the stone out of the mountain; Chapter 2:44-45. The answer of the three Hebrew captives, Chapter 3: 16-18; the feast of Belshazzar, Chapter 5; Daniel in the lion's den, Chapter 6:1-24; the vision of the judgment, Chapter 7:9-14; the soul winner's promise, Chapter 12. Perhaps no better thought could be extracted from this great Book than this last. For the ultimate aim of revelation is the salvation of souls and the salvaging of human lives. Daniel declares that the reward of such service is no less than eternal glory. "And they that be wise shall shine as the brightness of the firmament: and they that turn many to righteousness as the stars for ever and ever."

Tennis Tournament

In many respects the tennis tournament this year was above the average. The courts were fast, the weather, with a day's exception, ideal and the play snappy. From the beginning, even in the face of difficulties, the sponsors were not disheartened. There was a shortage of ready cash, but that obstacle was overcome by certain members of the Civic Club assuming the liability. Once started, good team work, cooperation and unceasing labor put the undertaking across.

Anti-Repealists

A fair sized audience gathered in the auditorium last Sunday to hear the issues of prohibition ably discussed by George W. Crabbe, of Baltimore, and Congressman C. E. Moore, of Ohio. Even in the face of a majority for repeal of the Eighteenth Amendment in twenty-two states, the speakers and those of their faith do not seem to despair of stemming the repeal tide.

Pea Experiment

As an item of useful information we secured from P. T. Lipscomb the result of his pea raising experiment conducted this year on his home place in conjunction with the Maryland Agricultural College.

The college furnished four varieties Alderton, Number Forty, Laxton's Supurb (early variety), and Strategem. A gallon of each kind was planted the same day and a gallon of Strategem about ten days. Approximately ¼ an acre was planted. Early variety (Laxton's Superb) was supposed to mature in 60 days and the others in about 70 days. The peas were picked every other day in order that mature, fresh peas might be delivered to his customers

The last peas were picked early this week, and when the results were tabulated it was found that off this quarter of an acre Mr. Lipscomb had gathered and marketed 213 gallons. in addition to a number of gallons presented to friends and those canned for winter use in his own home. Those marketed netted the grower approximately $40 in cash.

The prime object in the joint experiment was to determine for how long after the 1st picking marketable peas can be produced in this area and the varieties best suited to growing. A report of the result will be made by Mr. Lipscomb to the Department.

Mrs. W. L. Davidson, remembered by a majority of the older residents as the wife of Dr. W. L. Davidson, as the wife of the late Dr. W. L. Davidson, Chautauqua manager in the early days of the Park, is here for a month's stay at the Braethorn.

Dr. Charles W. Baldwin and his sister, Miss Mariah Baldwin, of Baltimore, stopped off at the Park for a few days with Mrs. Guard and Miss Guard, en route to Wheeling for a short visit. Dr. Baldwin, as is well known here, was a pioneer of the Park. In fact he helped locate, found and organize it, and for many years ably aided in its direction. Despite his advanced years and consequent physical slow-down, Dr. Baldwin is as mentally alert as ever and is alive to the importance of a correct solution of the perplexing public questions of the day. His host of friends hope and believe that he has many years of useful service before him.

"There has radiated from Mountain Lake Park through the years an influence, both cultural and social, that has moulded the thought and lives of many people over a large area." Thus was expressed the belief of a prominent citizen of Oakland the other day. Then, in a reminiscent mood, he recalled the many, many scholarly men and women who had appeared on the platform and in the class rooms when the Park was going along under full steam under the able direction of Dr. Wilbur L. Davidson. Those were the days in the so called "gay nineties," an age as different from this as day is from night. Then folks thought differently, acted differently. Perhaps they were no better morally—certainly no worse, but they had plenty of fun in a different way.

It would be interesting, a few years hence, to read a page from the life history of the men and women aided during these times by the welfare folk.

For instance, the man, wife and six children, stranded here at the Park who were sheltered, fed and sent on their way last week. Are they appreciative? Do they realize that many have to sacrifice that they may be helped?

The records kept by the various welfare agencies will no doubt provide much data and many texts for future psychologists, writers and ministers of the Gospel.

Dr. Seruby and his Wheeling Gospel singers are at the auditorium and will continue until Sunday, September 3, with meetings nightly, and morning, afternoon and evening meetings on the two Sunday they will be at the Park. Many who have heard them over the radio through WWVA at Wheeling will be anxious to see them in person. Weather permitting we anticipate good sized audiences, especially Sunday.

Their broadcasting programs are very popular, especially throughout Northern West Virginia, Pennsylvania and Western Maryland.

COVE RESIDENTS OF MANY YEARS AGO FIND MANY THINGS CHANGED ON RECENT RETURN VISIT

Postmaster W. S. Livengood, Miss Nancy Livengood and William W. Black, Meyersdale, Pa., and Mr. and Mrs. P. L. Livengood, Salisbury, Pa., made a trip to Cove last Sunday afternoon to review the scenes of their childhood, the Livengoods having lived on the farm now occupied by Albert N. Ringer.

All they found of the old log cabin homestead in which the S. J. Livengood family lived from 1861 to 1867, was a hole in the ground which once was the cellar, filled with a thick growth of weeds and briars. Not a vestige of the log cabin, the barn, spring house or other outbuildings remains.

From there they went to the site of the old log Bear Creek schoolhouse in which they received instruction from such teachers as Austin Speicher, Amy Breig and A. J. Hileman. The only visible trace of the little log schoolhouse, which was also used as a church, that remains is a leveled-off rod or two of ground in which the house stood. The cemetery adjacent to the site in which rest many of the early settlers of the Cove, is covered with a riot of weeds and brambles. Many of the ancient tombstones are lying on the ground and the inscriptions on them are so weatherworn as to be illegible. Not a stone or a board of the old Philip Gore blacksmith shop, residence and other buildings that stood opposite the schoolhouse remains.

The visitors then proceeded to the old Engle Mill on Bear creek, where in the old days it was a joy to accompany father or big brother to the mill when Uncle Henry Yost and later Lewis Swalp, was the miller. The old mill is still standing but its millstones have ceased grinding. It was operated for more than one hundred years up to two years ago. Kaese's Mill, erected about half a century later, is still grinding and has a reputation for its buckwheat flour.

A short distance upstream from the Engle Mill is the large trout hatchery established by the State in 1928 where Ralph Miller is custodian.—Excerpts from an article in The Meyersdale Republican.

As raw materials—cotton and rubber—go skyrocketing, tires are bound to go higher, too. The best advice is—"Don't wait." We offered that advice months ago, when Goodyear prices were scraping bottom. Many people who took it have thanked us; others say they will never get caught again.

So we repeat! BUY NOW—because Goodyears are STILL priced very low and they can't stay at these levels very long.

Today the best buy for the least money is the new Goodyear Pathfinder. For years "the quality tire within the reach of all," the Pathfinder is now stepped up in mileage, safety and good looks. WELFARE BOARD PLANNING CHILD EXTENSION WORK

Attention Will Be Given To Ill, Undernourished and Problem Children of the County

MANY HOME VISITS MADE

The Garrett County Welfare Board, during the past four months, has been forced to give first thought to the relief of actual destitution among needy families of the county, but the welfa of individual children in such homes and also in homes where unemployment is not the major social problem has had a large part in the general county program.

One of the best remembered and most vital observations of Phillips Brooks related to the value of children; "The future of the race marches forward on the feet of little children," and any thoughtful person will concede that children are the largest single asset of the State. Much has been said and written about the effects of the present depression on children and one State Department of Welfare admits that the unfavorable effects are yet too intangible to be reduced to statistics, however, that disquieting trends have been noted in reports that have been received at some State Headquarters. It has been noted in many states that correction of physical defects has almost come to a stand still; also that institutional population in some states is almost static, being blocked at the top by older children, who, since there are no jobs available, must be kept on thus harring younger children in need of eare. Adoptive and free foster homes are less numerous except those which frankly want to board children for the money there is in it.

One pediatrician in a neighboring state recently said, in discussing the relationship between proper food and the growing child, "Stunting of mind as well as of body will follow when children are forced to live on an inadequate diet." Lack of milk, meat, fresh fruit and vegetables must result in a great deficiency for sound growth. The bones in growing children will remain small, become porous, fragile and will break easily and the bodies will become undersized and misshapen. Special disaster is threatened girls in the child-hearing years ahead. Certain lack of food values hampers learning ability and mental development. Some food deficiencies actually produce a mental retardation which is the most important single cause of delinquency. Lack of other food elements often cause serious eye diseases which may result in blindness. No amount of good food later can undo the damage wrought during the growing years.

The Garrett County Welfare Board is planning to do intensive work with children during the fall and winter months now that the relief program is well set up and functioning satisfactorily and special attention will be given to the needs of individual children throughout the county. The family visitors in the field are being asked to report all cases of ill, undernourished and problem children. It has been necessary to remove one delinquent and one feeble-minded child from their homes to state institutions. In another case, an emergency operation was performed. During the last three weeks 646 home visits were made by the field staff. A special educational campaign is being planned to be inaugurated shortly by the Garrett County Welfare Board so that the public may be kept informed about the general welfare of the children of the county.

Twenty-Three Rams Bring Average of $13.89 Each at Sale

Approximately 200 were present at the third annual ram show and sale held at Oakland Saturday on the Sweeney lot on Third street. Twenty-three rams were sold at an average price of $13.89, the highest one being sold for $25. This was owned by Robert Rench, Hagerstown.

The highest average went to H. P. Miller, of near Grantsville, whose consignment of rams offered for sale averaged over $16.00. One of his rams sold for $23.00.

The Shropshire breed sold well but farmers were slow to buy the Hampshires, according to Jahn H. Carter, county agent. K. A. Clarke, animal husbandman, University of Maryland Extension service, was in charge of the show and sale.

WHEAT ORGANIZATION TO BE FORMED AT MEETINGS

Will Administer Wheat Control Program For Garrett County

Organization meetings for the control of the county's wheat production will be held next week, John H. Carter, county agent, has announced. The organization will be known as the County Wheat Control Association, and this body will administer the wheat program entirely, including the distribution of the money to farmers entering into the reduction agreement, the control of production, etc.

The first meeting will be held at Grantsville, in the school building, on Wednesday, September 6, at 8:00 p. m. A similar meeting will be held in the Accident school building on Thursday, September 7, and the Oakland district meeting will be held at Sunnyside Grange Hall on Friday evening, September 8, both beginning at 8:00 o'clock.

It is important that those interested in the wheat control program in any way attend one of these meetings, Mr. Carter stated, as this will be the only opportunity afforded to vote or have a voice in setting up the organization. The county is being divided into three districts. There will be a 15 percent reduction in wheat production, it was stated.

The meetings which were held last week and Tuesday of this week for explaining the control program were well attended, Mr. Carter said. Many applications were given out and those who were not able to obtain them may still secure them and learn of the program by getting in touch with the county agent. H. W. Beggs, Accident, and Charley Miller, Friendsville, will assist the farmers in making out applications or in any other way they may be required.

YOUTH'S BODY RECOVERED FROM DEEP CREEK FRIDAY

Found Floating In 16 Feet Of Water by Group of Men Near Where He Had Disappeared

FELL FROM SURF BOARD

The body of Ellis Rhodes, 17, of Friedens, Pa., who was drowned in Deep Creek Lake on Tuesday evening of last week, was recovered Friday morning at McHenry, the nothern end of the Lake, near the Pittsburgh Boy Scout camp. The body was floating in an upright position.

The youth went down in sixteen feet of water after falling from a surf board attached to an outboard motorboat driven by Dwight M. Stahl, of Somerset, Pa.

Thirteen boats manned with men of the community and some of the firemen of Oakland worked almost continuously from the time he disappeared. The body was found near the spot where the searchers had ceased working the evening previous. His lungs were filled with water, the undertaker stated.

Indications were that the youth had died as the result of being seized with cramps after he fell from the surf board, as he had eaten heartily just a few minutes before he went into the lake. The boy disappeared from sight before Stahl could reverse his course and reach the spot where he was last seen.

In addition to the local people assisting in the search the Cumberland city reseue truck was brought into use and Fred. C. Dreyer, one of those assisting in the work, stated that recovery of the body was greatly delayed because five eye-witnesses all gave different locations as to where Rhodes had gone down. Searchers were also handicapped on Wednesday and Thursday by turbulent waters.

The youth, who graduated last June from the Friedens High school, was visiting friends at Deep Creek Lake when the accident occurred. Surviving are his mother and two brothers.

The body was brought to the Bolden undertaking establishment in Oakland and was later taken to Friedens where funeral services were conducted.

LOAN BANK APPRAISERS WILL SOON FINISH WORK

Applications Filed at Cumberland Total More Than $888,000

Appraisers of the Western Maryland branch of the Home Loan Mortgage Corporation, with offices at Cumberland, are making rapid progress in clearing titles and checking court records so that loans can be recommended at an early date.

Judge Oliver H. Bruce, Jr., manager of the Cumberland branch, said that applications for loans, filed by home owners, total more than $888,000. He cited that the local branch is part of the general recovery program, designed to aid home owners who are in danger of losing their property. The corporation is limited in its scope to assist those who are threatened with foreclosures who need funds to make repairs and to pay taxes.

Bonds Guaranteed

As loans are made, mortgagees will be given 4 per cent bonds, which are guaranteed by the Government, and are regarded by financial leaders as a much better investment than a mortgage on which the interest is accumulating. Mortgagees who accept the bonds are aiding considerably in the recovery program, Mr. Bruce contends, as foreclosures will be prevented, and real estate vaules will not be impaired by the dumping of low-priced real estate, caused by foreclosures, on an already dull market.

It is estimated that 25 per cent of the earnings of the American people is expended for shelter, which means that one-fourth of the wealth of the nation is land and buildings, particularly homes.

When conditions are below normal families reduce their living expenditures by "doubling" in houses, the construction of new homes cease, as has been the case in the past four years, but as business increases market values of real estate rise, and a demand is created for homes. Mr. Bruce alleges that home construction will be resumed and business generally will benefit.

Mrs. Neil Fraley was hostess at a bridge party given at her home on Fifth street Monday evening.

CAMP WORKER IS FATALLY INJURED BOARDING TRAIN

Is Found Along Tracks by Trainman With Head Injuries and Left Leg Almost Severed

DIES ON WAY TO OAKLAND

Francis E. O'Keefe, 22, Baltimore, a member of the Civilian Conservation River, in this county, was fatally in- Corps, stationed at Camp 60, Savage jured early Saturday morning when he evidently fell from a moving Baltimore and Ohio freight train at or near Bond on the Seventeen-Mile Grade.

The conductor of a freight train found him alongside the rails about 4:00 a. m., with his head and face so severely cut and bruised that recognition was impossible. His left leg was also crushed and other injuries were apparent. He had lost great quantities of blood but was still alive when placed in the baggage car of train No. 3, which brought him to Oakland. Arriving here he was pronounced dead by Dr. McComas, who had been called to meet the train upon its arrival and render aid to the young man.

The body was taken to the Bolden undertaking establishment and prepared for interment.

Identification Established

Identification of the body was not established until Capt. McCann, in charge of the Savage River camp at Bond came to Oakland and viewed the remains.

The body was sent to O'Keef's home in Baltimore Monday morning.

O'Keefe, with other forestry workers, was given leave Friday night until Sunday and it is supposed he attempted to board a train to visit one of the nearby towns.

Two weeks ago another young forest worker fell under a train and had his arm crushed off. Officers of the conservation camps posted notices following this first accident forbidding the men to ride trains and members of all the companies were warned against the practice.

PLANS ARE MATURING FOR ANNUAL MUSIC FESTIVAL

To Be Held at Camp Dawson, Near Kingwood, Sept. 16 and 17

Plans are rapidly maturing for the observance of the third annual Music Festival of the Allegheny Tableland Association, which is scheduled for Saturday and Sunday, September 16 and 17, at Camp Dawson, near Kingwood, Preston county, West Va.

The site of the festival rests beside Cheat River immediately above the bridge which spans that stream at Caddell, west of Terra Alta and east of Kingwood. The spot is a military reservation, maintained by the State of West Virginia, where there are permanent quarters and is surrounded by mountains which form a natural amphitheatre with room to care for thousands of people comfortably. The camp adjoins the golf links of the Preston County Country Club, which is another ideal spot.

This festival has become an annual two-day affair, and for the past two years has been held at Somerset, Pa., being attended by some forty thousand visitors each year. Recently the Tableland Association decided to make it a movable festival and this year Preston county was selected.

The program is being arranged. Miss Sara B. Huff will direct the music and arrange a pageant which is now in the making. Numerous bands and other musical organizations, glee clubs, choirs, etc., will add to the entertainment with their selections.

Paroled by Governor

Enoch Plunkett and Bernard Preston were paroled hy Governor Ritchie on Monday, their release to become effective on September 5.

Preston was sentenced to six years in the Penitentiary for common assault by the Circuit court of Allegany county. Plunkett's ease was removed to Garrett county where he was convicted of rape and sentenced to sixteen years in the Penitentiary. There remains about nine and one-half years more of Plunkett's sentence and about a year and a half more of Preston's sentence.

John Coddington, sentenced by the Garrett County Circuit Court to twenty-one years in the Penitentiary for carnal knowledge, was also given his parole.

APPRAISAL OF OLD BANK'S ASSETS NEARLY COMPLETE

Will Be Sent To Washington For Approval By Saturday—Details Entail Much Labor

Work of appraising the assets of the old Garrett National Bank for the purpose of having them transferred to the new institution, will be completed by Saturday, according to Mr. H. C. Riggs, representative of the government and probable cashier of the new bank.

The appraisal includes the listing of each bond with its present market value, the interest due and amount; each individual promissory note with the amount, interest, and description; each savings account with amount, interest due, etc., and this necessary detailed work entails a great deal of time, Mr. Riggs stated.

The entire appraisal will be sent to the Comptroller at Washington by Saturday and after its approval there, it will then be sent to the Federal Reserve bank at Richmond. After it is approved at Richmond it will be returned to Washington for final approval, and then officials of the new bank will be notified as to the percentage of the old bank's assets which the new bank may take over at the present time.

It is hoped to have the new bank open for business by the middle of September and at least sixty percent of the deposits of the old bank available, Mr. Riggs concluded.

CANVASS OF ALL PEOPLE TO BE MADE FOR N. R. A.

Employers To Be Asked to Keep Agreement—Individuals Asked To Patronize Members

MEETING HELD ON MONDAY

Questions concerning the NRA plan of the United States government were discussed Monday night by members of the Garrett county committee on the president's emergency re-employment campaign and a number of local merchants, at the City hall. Charles W. Ream, chairman, was in charge.

The NRA plan is designed to put five million men back on payrolls in a short time. Every employer is called upon to shorten hours of labor so as to make room for more employes, and each industry will adopt a code before long under which they will operate. Until that time all employers are asked to sign the President's Agreement and to meet the hours and wages established in that Agreement.

Mrs. Paul B. Naylor, county chairman for women's organizations, and Joseph M. Gonder, commander of the American Legion post, are in charge of the canvassing of all employers and in checking up on any who sign the agreement and then abuse it.

A canvass is also to be made of each person in the county to ask that only those be patronized who have signed the agreement of the Blue Eagle.

Members of the Girl Scout troop of Oakland returned to their homes Saturday from their two weeks' camp along Deep Creek Lake after a successful completion of their program.

Every girl learned to swim, three received their swimmer's button and three their beginner's button, under the requirements of the Red Cross. Mary Linn McIntire, Elizabeth Browning and Pauline Wolfe received their swimmer's button, while Martha Jane Baird, Elva Porter and Estelle Treacy received their beginner's button.

Those completing second class signaling were Mary Virginia Bolden, Martha Jane Baird, Laura Susan Butt, Edith Brock, while those passing their observation test included Mary Virginia Bolden, Margaret Rudy, Lois Sincell, Estelle Treacy, Laura Susan Butt, Norma Casteel, Martha Jane Baird, and Jane Fraley.

Estelle Treacy's patrol with Mamie Treacy, Lucille Browning, Edith Brock and Mary Virginia Bolden, were selected as the best patrol in camp and will be given an oak placque with the girl scout laws inscribed upon them.

After one more lesson by Mrs. Samuel Cole, health nurse, all those taking First Aid for first class rank will have completed their work in that test. The class in pioneering will complete its work when members plan and take an overnight hike.

Girl scouts spending the final week in camp were Betty Broadwater, Betty Jackson, Lucille Browning, Mary Linn McIntire. Eleanor Byrne Sincell and Margaret Williams were guests over the week-end, they having joined the troop too late to be eligible for camp. At camp fire last week Eleanor Sincell, Mamie Treacy, Estelle Treacy, Martha Jane Baird, Lucille Browning, Laura Susan Butt, were formally taken into the troop at an investiture ceremony. Mrs. Milton Sincell from the troop committee, was made honorary member and was invested at the same time.

SUNDAY SCHOOL Lesson

Lesson for September 3

DAVID

LESSON TEXT—I Samuel 16:4-13; Psalm 78:70-72.

GOLDEN TEXT—But the Lord said unto Samuel, Look not on his countenance, or on the height of his stature; because I have refused him: for the Lord seeth not as man seeth; for man looketh on the outward appearance, but the Lord looketh on the heart. I Sam. 16:7.

PRIMARY TOPIC—A Shepherd Boy.

JUNIOR TOPIC—A Shepherd Boy Who Became King.

INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOPIC—Why David Was Chosen King.

YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOPIC—The Secret of True Greatness.

I. David, the Shepherd Boy (I Sam. 16:11-13; 17:34-37).

As a young man he was engaged in keeping his father's sheep. Such a life might have tended to indolence, but it proved otherwise with David. He became athletic. As he himself tells us, in the defense of his father's sheep he slew a lion and a bear. His musicianship had brought him such fame as to be called to play at the royal court. Then, too, he had become such an expert marksman as to throw his stone to fell the Philistine giant.

II. David Anointed King (16:1-13).

1. Samuel sent to anoint David (vv. 1-3). The situation was delicate. Saul had become a desperate character. For the divine commission to become known to Saul, therefore, would imperil Samnel's life.

2. The method of selection (vv. 6-12). The Lord had made known to Samuel that one of Jesse's sons was to be the king, hut not the particular one. All but one of Jesse's sons had been looked upon, and still the Lord's choice had not appeared. When the shepherd lad appeared before Samuel, the Lord indicated his choice. When the oil was applied the Spirit of the Lord came upon him.

III. David, a King Without a Kingdom.

While Saul was rejected, the time had not yet come for David to be head of the nation. He needed much training before assuming such responsibility. Then, too, the evil influences inaugurated by Saul needed time for development so as to be properly discerned and controlled.

1. David's life at the royal court (I Sam. 17-20).

a. He was called as a musician to minister before the king (chaps. 16-23).

b. Victory over Goliath (chap. 17). The armies of Saul and the Philistines were arrayed against each other. According to an ancient custom, the issue was to be determined by a combat between two selected champions. The nation whose champion was victorious was to rule. The Philistine champion was Goliath, the giant. The sight of Israel's cowardice prompted David to offer his service. When Goliath beheld David coming against him, he cursed him by his gods, showing that it was not merely a battle between David and Goliath, but between false gods and the true God.

c. Friendship with Jonathan (chap. 18). This friendship has become immortalized in the world's thought. It was unique in that it occurred between two men of rival worldly interests. Jonathan was the crown prince, and therefore heir to the throne. David was heir according to the divine plan. Jonathan knew this and waived his rights to the one whom God had chosen. In the establishment of the covenant between them, Jonathan stripped himself of his coat, robe, and equipment, giving them to David. This meant a virtual abdication of the throne to David. As a friend, Jonathan—

(1) Defended David from Saul's frenzy (19:1-7).

(2) Revealed to David Saul's murderous intent (20:30-40).

2. David's life as an outcast. Chapters 21 to 31 describe David's life between his being driven out from the presence of Saul and his being established king. The praise accorded him following the victory over Goliath provoked such violent jealousy in the heart of Saul that he sought to kill David. To escape Saul's wrath he fled the country and feigned madness.

IV. David Made King (II Sam. 2:1-14; 5:1-5).

1. Over Judah (II Sam. 2:1 14). Upon the death of Saul, God directed David to proceed to Hebron and he was there anointed king over Judah.

2. Over Israel (II Sam. 5:1-5). After the death of Ishbosheth, the children of Israel came and formed a league with David, anointing him as their king. They assigned as their reasons:

a. He was their brother.
b. He was their leader in war.
c. He was the Lord's choice.

The Everlasting Arms

"The everlasting arms." I think of them whenever rest is sweet—how the whole earth and the strength of it, that is, almightiness, is beneath every tired creature, to give it rest, holding us always. No thought of God is closer than that.—Adeline D. T. Whitney.

Heavy to Bear

Losses and crosses are heavy to bear; but when our hearts are right with God, it is wonderful how easy the yoke becomes.—C. H. Spurgeon.

SCOOP'S COLUMN

By Scoop Himself

Blue Eagle Blues

Don't expect anything particularly funny this week. I've just been around trying to find out what people think of the Blue Eagle, the NRA. and how long it will be until we are like our socialistic friends in Russia.

While trying to find out what other people thought of it, I also tried to decipher my own mind. You probably think my mind is nothing else but a cipher, but I'll have you know it's not. I was rated according to the business ability test in the American Magazine this month and I came out "good." How do I know the test is accurate? Easy. I made the measurement myself.

Anyway, to get back to the blue eagle before it drops that cogwheel on my dome and drops that streak of lightning at my feet, the general conclusion I came to is that everybody will try to come under the eode because there doesn't seem to be anything else to do.

But that doesn't keep them from having their own opinions and ideas. For instance:

What is the small employer going to do? He is having a hard time to make ends meet now and has difficulty in meeting his payroll. Under the NRA code he is only allowed to work 44 hours a week himself and he must hire more men. If the government slips out a bonus for that just as it is doing for wheat, chickens, pigs, etc., all right. But if not, where is the employer going to come out?

"I might as well move to Russia where they have this idea already settled," says and thinks another.

If the codes keep coming what is going to happen when a chauffeur's 44 hours are up when he is out on the highway, fifty miles from home? Wait until next week to continue, or work overtime and be severely penalized by the blue eagle for not sharing his work with another?

What if Doc Grant is in the act of extracting a decayed molar and his 48-hour week is up? Oood e et oo it ere at hair unhil nekth eek?—or call in a day laborer out of employment to finish the job?

Could you afford to get half your face lifted in the beauty parlor and wait until tomorrow or next week to finish the job? By that time the finished half would be wrinkled as usual and you would never get things evened up again.

And wouldn't you like for the barber to call it a day when he had just finished with the clippers on one side of your mug?

And if it keeps on, you'll be penalized for working in your own garden, painting a chair or making your own shelves. It would violate the gardener's, the painter's and the carpenter's codes and you'd get your blue eagle taken away.

And the first thing you know people would boycott your place of business and you'd have to go to Germany for relief.

What kind of a code will the farmers have? Who is going to pay for the extra hands necessary, and what will farmers do with their spare time? Raise more hogs on which they will get a bounty for not selling them to the market.

Just what does the Blue Eagle mean? Many who have them in their windows haven't changed one solitary hour for workers, employed any more people or changed wages.

Some don't have their codes so that they could display a Blue Eagle even if they wanted to.

And in conclusion, if anyone understands all they know about the subject, please let me know.

Is This Irony?

It happened at the tennis tournament two weeks ago. A crowd of boisterous people came along in a truck, uttering belittling remarks about tennis, about those who were playing, their scores, etc.

Those playing had come from rather large cities. They became annoyed and glanced around. A bystander, also from a large town, remarked to them, "Just bunch of hicks."

But the "Hicks" were a bunch of reforestation workers from Baltimore.

I'm glad that you weren't guilty of scattering all that paper over town on Wednesday. It makes the streets rather unsightly and visitors to the town might think it was a general practice.

This week-end there are three dances. Couldn't about two of those have been saved for next January or February when the wind doth blow and so doth the snow and those who dig in here for the winter are getting callouses for doing so much sitting?

Heavens! I've worked two minutes overtime. Now you just finish this yourself. But try and get paid for it.

Emergency Plan is Announced to Reduce the Supply of Hogs

Recognizing that the farm price of hogs is still only about half the fair exchange value called for in the Agricultural Adjustment Act, the Secretary of Agriculture has announced an emergency plan for adjusting hog production.

According to this plan, farmers may sell at the regular markets their spring pigs weighing under 100 pounds and their piggy sows due to farrow within three weeks and weighing over 275 pounds at premium prices. Farmers will receive a bonus of $4.00 a head in addition to the market price of packing sows on the day marketed, without dockage, for their piggy sows. For pigs it is intended to pay $9.50 per hundred pounds for those weighing from 25 to 30 pounds, the price graduating 25 cents per hundred pounds for each five pounds increase in weight, to the minimum price of $6.00 per hundred for those weighing from 95 to 100 pounds.

Edible products of these animals will be disposed of primarily by relief agencies. The meat will be purchased at a price sufficient to defray the costs of processing, storage and freight. This meat will not be permitted to come into competition with meat sold in the regular channels.

The plan contemplates the purchase and slaughter of about four million pigs and one million sows. This will effect a reduction in tonnage for the 1933-1934 marketing season of probably 1,800,000,000 pounds of hogs live weight, or about 16 percent of the hog tonnage marketed normally. Such reduction, according to past experience, should increase hog prices for the season by anywhere from 25 to 30 percent.

Funds to handle this premium-buying emergency plan will come from a processing tax to be levied later on hogs and hog products. The Secretary stated that a tax of considerably less than a cent a pound would accomplish the purpose, but it is not decided yet just what the tax will have to be.

In order that farmers themselves may obtain the premium on their pigs, it is suggested that it is desirable for them to ship direct to market and tha it is a good opportunity for them to get together on cooperative truck or carlot shipments.

Protect Our Boys and Girls

To the Editor of The Republican.

In the modern machine age, light wines and beer are more dangerous than whiskey and gin. Robbins Stockel, Commissioner of Motor Vehicles in Connecticut, says: "A really drunken driver usually is not dangerous, because he is easily and quickly detected. The really dangerous driver is the man who has had one or two drinks only, who still thinks he is in possession of his faculties, but whose driving judgment has been impared. On our highways, moderate drinking is more dangerous than immoderate."

Most automobile accidents are caused by "temperate" drinkers, men who are apparently sober but who have just a little alcohol in their system which makes them reckless and retards their reaction time. A slight amount of alcohol speeds up the car and slows down the driver. A drunken driver is usually "spotted" before he does any damage; it is the "sober" drinker who is a menace to himself and to society.

PROTECT OUR BOYS AND GIRLS! On September 12th, go to the polls and vote AGAINST BEER as well as AGAINST RATIFICATION. Remembers that a vote for repeal of the Eighteenth Amendment will be in effect a vote to repeal our local option laws, enacted many years ago, which made Garrett county a safer place and more wholesome place for children and young people. If Garrett county goes "wet" on September 12th the saloon will be on its way back to this county. Alcohol is a habit-forming narcotice drug. It attacks the higher nerve centers, blurring vision, befuddling intellect, retarding reaction time, interfering with quick and precise movements.

A mild amount of alcohol makes no apparent difference in a person's behavior; but the drinker's reaction time is slowed down by a fifth of a second or more. In other words, it takes a fifth of a second longer to apply the brakes of his car. A fifth of a second seems like a very small and unimportant length of time. But a modern automobile travels 10 or 15 feet every fifth of a second. Frequently a fifth of a second means the difference between life and death.

Real 3.2 beer has not yet been put on the market. The brewers are too shrewd to risk arousing a popular reaction pending the repeal of the 18th Amendment, and dealers still have quantities of "near beer" to dispose of. Nevertheless, even with the mild beer now sold, traffic accidents have already shown an alarming increase. And real beer is just around the corner. No wonder the Commissioner of Motor Vehicles in Maryland recently made a plea for extra state policemen because, he said, the roads of Maryland would become a madhouse in six months.

Whether driving a car or dodging one, whether piloting an airplane or a baby carriage, whether operating a tractor or a washing machine, promptness and precision of movements is impaired by the use of alcohol in even the smallest amounts. Our modern mechanized civilization cannot coexist with the traffic in narcotic beverages.

Protect our boys and girls! On Defender's Day (Sept. 12th) rally to the defense of our children and young people whose welfare is menaced by the liquor traffic. Vote against ratification and vote against beer! Vote against the return of the saloon.

SHE MAKES MONEY BY TELEPHONE!

We know a farm woman who sells many things by telephone. In one season it is strawberries. At other times it is eggs, cream, dressed poultry. People pay her a premium to get things fresh from the farm. She says these telephone sales bring many additional dollars into the family purse.

Your telephone can help make your farming profitable. Yet the cost is only a few cents a day.

The New Capital of India

THE VICEROY'S HOUSE AT DELHI, WITH THE MOGHUL GARDENS

DELHI'S LOST HERITAGE IS RESTORED WITH NEW ENCHANTMENT

HASSAN MOHIRUDDIN ABBARI

THE new capital of India compared with its prototypes might not be as beautifully located amid lovely natural surroundings as Canberra or Darul-Aman, the new capital of Afghanistan—or as luxuriously built as Washington or as scientifically executed as Angora, or as ambitiously designed as Nanking—the proposed capital of the Nationalist China—but the romance of antiquity, which still lingers around Raisina, is denied perhaps to any of its competitors.

The imperial city of Delhi, the home of Asia—Von Orlich calls it the "Indian Rome"—with its forty-five square miles of suburban territory, teeming with relics of empires and footprints of events dating back to several centuries before the Christian era, is not one city; rather conglomeries of numerous townships, each phœnixlike, giving place to its successor in the inevitable cycle of rise and fall.

Lord Curzon described Delhi as "the deserted cities of dreary and disconsolate tombs." "In the above area of seven castles and fifty-two gates," says Mr. Finch, a European merchant who visited India in 1611, "thirteen capital cities have appeared and disappeared, the sites of which, with but one exception, are either marked by ruins or indicated by tradition. The eye can still trace the proud forts, spacious streets, minareted mosques and beautiful tombs."

PROBABLY MORE BATTLES, sieges, massacres and murders crowd the annals of this metropolis than those of any other similar area throughout the world. Its central location, the facility of obtaining good building materials from the rocky ridges with quartzite cores, which abound in the vicinity, perhaps account for the preeminent position Delhi has enjoyed since prehistoric times.

"It is my desire that the planning and designing of the public buildings to be erected will be considered with the greatest deliberation and care so that the new creation may be in every way worthy of this ancient and beautiful city," said his Majesty King George V, the Emperor of India, on December 15, 1911, when he laid the foundation-stone of the new capital—the outcome of the official transfer of the capital from Calcutta, the second city in the British Empire—announced by him, three days earlier. How far the creators have been successful in their attempt is the theme of this story.

THE FOCAL POINT of the new city is located on Raisina Hill—a large mass of rock fifty feet high—twenty feet of which was blasted away and filled into the depressions to form a uniform thirty feet platform, with a redstone wall built round it, "comparable to the great platform base of Persepolis, on which Darius lifted up the privileged royal inclosure in enjoyment of the view and air above the city below."

THE GOVERNMENT BUILDINGS are arranged systematically about what is practically the east and west axis connecting the focal point with the northwestern gate of the old fort of Indraprasth, the legendary Hindu city—whose half-ruined forts and castellated mansions are still the wonder of tourists. The two great blocks of the Secretariat buildings are situated to the north and south of this focal point, with the Government Court between them. Westward from the Government Court the forum connects Raisina Hill with the high ground of the southern ridge, so that the whole Government center appears to be built on a spur of the ridge itself. This raised forum is known as the Viceroy's Court, which is reached from the north and south too by roadways with easy gradients.

Viceroy's House, built at a cost of a million pounds, is approached both from the north and south along fine avenues, which touch on the west the spacious viceregal estate, with its lovely gardens, well-kept parks, wherein are located the bungalows of the Viceroy's numerous secretaries, the house surgeon, the household controller, quarters for the Viceroy's bodyguard and other staffs. Viceroy's House and the two blocks of the secretariat have been planned as one group of the capital facing eastward, silhouetted on the west by the aforested southern ridge.

BELOW THE EASTERN FACADE of the secretariat where crossroads meet, a fore-court known as the Great Place is laid out. This is partially inclosed by beautiful pierced railings, like those of the Buddhist shrines, in red sandstone, and is adorned with six water basins and fountains. From the above focus the main road of the capital—the Processional Way—leads eastward, on either side of which lie rows of lemon, rennet and orange trees, lawns, flower beds and palatial residences of the members of the Viceroy's Executive Council. Two waterways run all along the Processional Way. This place, called the Central Vista, at its eastern end opens out into a park hexagonal in shape, wherein has been erected the War Memorial, a monument in the form of a triumphal arch.

Built in white stone upon a red sandstone base, rising to a height of 162 feet, the structure consists of a base pierced through from east to west by the great arch. 87½ feet high and 35 feet wide, of course, spanning the Processional Way. The piers thus formed are pierced by smaller arches which run through at right angles to the main arch. Above the great cornice is inscribed "India," flanked by "1914" and "1919." It is headed by a flare so that on occasions of commemoration a column of smoke by day and of flame by night rises. Simple of design, void of intricate ornamentations, dignified in appearance, the monument is perhaps the most imposing edifice of the new capital.

The central parkway is intended ultimately to terminate at a small artificial lake, the waters of which would wash the base of the northern end of the ancient Indraprastha.

A second principal avenue of the city crosses at right angles the Central Vista about midway in its length. In the four angles formed by this intersection have been built large buildings to accommodate, among other institutions, the Imperial Record Office and the Ethnological and War Museums. The Medical Research Institute and library are to follow. At the end of this second avenue toward the north or the old city is situated the business center of the new capital. This consists of a circus, 1,600 feet in diameter, around which are arranged twelve blocks of buildings, each three stories high. Of the twelve roads which radiate from this center, the northward will house the proposed railway station—perhaps the biggest structure of its kind in India. This same avenue, southward of the Central Vista, sights on the Anglican Cathedral, around which are built the residences of the principal officers of the Government.

A LITTLE BELOW, toward the east, at an angle of sixty degrees with the Processional Way, another road points toward the dome and minarets of the historic Juma Mosque of old Delhi—one of the world's biggest places of worship. These two roads gave the geometrical key of the ingenious plan of the new city, a noble development of the germ of L'Enfant's plan of Washington and Wren's rejected design for the city of London. The avenue radiating due north from the focal point of the city is occupied by the houses of the Indian and European superintendents, clerks of the Secretariat, Medical College, Women's Hospital, Roman Catholic Church and banks.

Just opposite, due south, an important avenue leads to the Imperial Gymkhana Club, with the race course beyond, a large recreation park being to the west. The eastern side of the city, dominated by the War Memorial, is largely occupied by the stately residences of ruling chiefs—maharajahs and nawabs—and of prominent Indian gentlemen.

A PROLONGED "battle of style" has been waged over New Delhi, clearly showing a ceaseless effort to apply, with due regard for Indian sentiments, the spirit of the great traditions of her architecture, to the solution of structural problems of course conditioned by Indian climate and requirements. The inspiration of these designs is manifestly western, but we find blended with them distinctive features of Indian life and thought, not calculated to mar the universal principles of structural fitness and artistic unity.

The Government Court has a length of 1,100 feet from west to east. The width between the two blocks of the Secretariat is 400 feet. The eastern end of the two blocks is marked by deep loggias looking out over the Central Vista. In the center of each block is a dome. In the case of the north block this marks an entrance hall; in the south block it surmounts a conference hall with a suite of reception rooms.

AN ESSENTIAL FEATURE of the design and one which gives character to the entire building is the provision of loggias and recessed gateways giving views to the fountained courts situated below; these take the place of the continuous verandas that are so familiar a feature of Indian buildings. The loggias and recesses, on thick internal walls, together with window shutters—so widely used in Southern Europe—and wide overhanging slabs, successfully control the temperature during the cooler season, for which the buildings have been designed.

The Viceroy's Court is 1,300 feet by 600 feet and is luxuriously erected with grass, waterways, fountains and shade trees and forms a dignified approach to the Viceroy's House. The great portico of the viceregal residence is raised some twenty feet above the level of the Viceroy's Court, and thirty-five feet above the surrounding country. The house itself centers round the great Audience Hall, a domed structure, which dominates the scheme of the buildings surrounding it.

Grouped round the Durbar Hall are the state rooms and the great stairways from the entrance courts on the north and south. Projecting from this central block are four wings, which on the southwest contain the Viceroy's private apartments; the southeast wing provides accommodation to the A. D. C.'s; guests are lodged in the northwest wing, while the northeast wing houses the offices of the Viceroy's private and military secretaries. The loveliest portions of the house are, of course, the Moghul gardens, which loe to the west.

THE BUILDING which accommodates the Legislative Chamber is circular in design and is surrounded by a colonnade. The plan is divided into six sectors utilized respectively by the Legislative Assembly (the lower house), the Council of State (the upper house) and the Princes' Chamber. The three chambers are built at equal angles round a central dome ninety feet in diameter. Three open courts with flowers and fountains separate these chambers. A common library is situated in the center.

Thus, with the creation of the new city after a continuous labor of seventeen years, under the ægis of Pax Britannica, at a cost of over fourteen million pounds, Delhi's lost heritage as the imperial capital of the "Great Moghuls" has been restored to her.

A HALF AND HALF SYSTEM

The August number of the National Republic magazine, published in Washington, D. C., contains a very timely article of caution to the American public of the government drift to socialism. In part, the article follows:

"A recent article by Upton Sinclair entitled, 'An Open Letter to the American People,' which appeared in a leading American journal brings up a question that is today foremost in the mind of every American, built upon ground which few are brave enough to tread.

"Sinclair, one of America's oldest ranking socialist leaders, a graduate of Columbia University, with which institution many of today's political advisers are or have been affiliated—active in many of the past and present day radical movements in the United States—relates to the public many of the aims and successes of the radical movement in penetrating American institutions, which penetration has caused our entire economic structure to rock.

"In the main he points out that America has reached 'half capitalist and half socialist' in its government, and that of course no nation can exist on this 'half and half' basis. This revelation from the socialist ranks is not new to some, but to millions it is. Many outside the socialist ranks have sensed dangers from the socialistic step-by-step program that has been developing in the United States for years. Of course it has been well camouflaged under many guises so that it could be imposed gradually but steadily on an unsuspecting public. Now it is being rammed down the throats of the people as never before.

"Sinclair's and the socialists' remedies for the predicament are the abandonment of the half that is left of our constitutional form of government, frequently referred to as 'capitalism,' and the complete socialization or taking over of all industry, lands, wages and means of production and placing them under complete direct government control. They would, if they could, supplant our entire constitutional form of government by a complete socialist system, and they hold forth great hopes that the present administration may be forced to travel the complete route.

"Many who have seldom agreed with a socialist can agree with Sinclair that no nation can succeed 'half capitalist and half socialist.' For years it has been the opinion of many, who still cling to the belief, that the gradual drift to socialism away from capitalism would sooner or later rock our constitutional structure. It has been their hope that before we arrived at this climax our government would awaken and regain its stride, turn back from the disastrous socialistic drift and return to 'capitalism,' which name has been given to our 'constitutional form of government' by socialists and communists.

"We are now, however, at the crossroads, as this 'half capitalism and half socialism' has failed. Every attempt to establish socialism, several isolated attempts having been made in the United States, has only failed miserably. 'Capitalism' or constitutional government succeeded here for decades; it can succeed again but only if cleaned of all socialistic tampering. We are actually at the crossroads now between complete socialism or a return to 'capitalism.' Until it has been determined by the people which road we are to take, the deadlock will be maintained. Industries, property owners, farmers and wage earners are hopelessly at sea because they do not know which course will be taken by the administrators of our national and state affairs, much of whose legislation shows socialistic tendencies. As a result business conditions are unsettled and the people are keeping a firm hold on their meagre savings and small investments that yet remain their own, in anticipation of the 'rainy day.' Confidence they try to regain, but the question of doubt remains deep in their minds.

"Until America turns the corner there can be no change in the minds of the people. If America turns to complete socialism, there will naturally be a rush of capital and business to other nations and further into hiding. If there is a sharp turn again towards the old 'capitalism' or constitutional form of government in which most Americans continue to maintain their deep confidence, prosperity will quickly return because of that confidence.

"Lincoln said, 'A nation cannot exist half slave and half free;' yet today a large proportion of the workers of the United States are enslaved and depressed thru lack of employment, and this adversely affects all of our people. This unemployment is due largely to the adoption of a system of half socialism. Things never were and never could be so bad under complete 'capitalism.' Half socialistic control of industry, finances and agriculture has disorganized our system; doles and government tempering with business have raised taxes; constitution tampering has created a lack of confidence; 'half socialism and half capitalism' has failed. The two systems are contrary and cannot work together."

The birth rate in the United States is said to be falling behind. Maybe we had better supplement the blue eagle with a blue stork.

Hitler is going to abolish machines and make the Germans go back to hand labor. Wonder if this includes machine guns?

Prunes—An Economical Fruit

Women who must buy the fruit they use find that prunes give more food value for the money spent than any other fruit. This fruit is often disliked because the flavor is often lost by under- or over-boiling and soaking. To develop a rich flavor and provide a maximum amount of juice the following directions should be followed:

First, wash the prunes with cold water. Then place in pan, cover with water and bring to a boil. Cook at this boiling temperature for one hour. Add two tablespoons of sugar for each cup of prunes during the last five minutes of cooking—If you prefer a sweetened dish. Many people prefer then chilled—and served with cream.

For such recipes as call for baked or steamed prunes, it is not necessary to pre-cook them as above. They may be pitted, then chopped and added to the balance of the ingredients. Whenever cooked prunes are not specified in the following recipes, raw prunes may be used.

Prune Betty

Two cups cooked prunes, 2 apples, 3 cups soft bread crumbs, 1-3 cup of granulated sugar, 1-4 cup butter, cinnamon, 1-3 cup prune juice. Pit prunes and slice. Pare, core and slice apples. Arrange one-third the bread crumbs in baking dish, cover with half the prunes, sugar, apples and butter. Sprinkle lightly with cinnamon. Add half of remaining crumbs, then remaining prunes, sugar, apples, butter, and more cinnamon. Cover with crumbs and add prune juice. Cover dish and bake about 1 hour in a moderate oven. (If bread crumbs are somewhat dry, more juice should be added).

Baked Prunes

Cover one pound of prunes with cold water and let stand for 4 hours. Drain prunes and reserve the liquor; add 3-4 cup sugar to the liquor and boil until the sugar is dissolved, if necessary skimming. Place the drained prunes in a covered casserole, cover with hot liquor and bake in moderate oven 40 minutes.

Prune Pie

Two cups cooked prunes, 1 orange, 1-2 cup brown sugar, 1-4 teaspoon salt, 2 tablespoons butter, 1 cup liquid from prunes, 2 tablespoons cornstarch, baked pastry shell, meringue, flavored with few drops lemon extract (use 2 egg whites). Pit prunes and cut in half. Peel orange, removing white inner peel completely and dice orange. Combine prunes, orange, sugar, salt, butter, prune liquid and bring to a boil. Dissolve cornstarch in 2 tablespoons of cold water, add to the boiling mixture and cook until thick. Pour into baked pastry shell, cover with meringue and brown in a moderate oven for 15 minutes.

Prune Molasses Cookies

Two cups prunes, 1 cup shortening, 1 cup brown sugar, 1 cup white sugar, 3 eggs, 1-2 cup molasses, 3-4 cup milk, 5 1-2 cups flour, 8 teaspoons baking powedr, 1-4 teaspoon soda, 1-2 teaspoon salt, 1 teaspoon ginger, 1 teaspoon cinnamon, 1-2 cup chopped nut kernels. Boil prunes 30 minutes, then drain, remove pits and cut in small pieces. Cream shortening, with sugars, add well-beaten eggs, molasses, milk and mix thoroughly. Combine with flour sifted with baking powder, soda, salt and spices. Beat well, add prunes, nutmeats and blend together. Drop by spoonfuls onto greased pan and bake about 12 minutes in a hot oven.

Prune Muffins

One cup prunes, 1 egg, 3 tablespoons granulated sugar, 3 tablespoons melted shortening, 1 cup milk, 2 1-4 cups flour, 4 teaspoons baking powder, 1-2 teaspoon salt. Boil prunes, in water to cover, for 10 minutes, drain, remove pits and cut prunes into pieces. Beat egg, add sugar, shortening, milk and when well mixed combine with flour sifted with baking powder and salt. Add prunes and beat just long enough to mix. Pour into greased muffin pans and bake about 25 minutes in a hot oven.

MT. LAKE PARK

Local Library

The idea of a circulating library has been incubating for some time in the minds of the leaders of the Woman's Civic club of the Park. At last the idea broke through its dormant shell and is now a healthy fledgling.

At a tea held by the club Tuesday afternoon at bowling alley, the plan was inaugurated and some 100 volumes were placed for use. Some of the books were already the property of the club and many were donated. It is hoped that those interested will go over their home stock of books and select the more interesting and readable that they feel like giving and present them to the club. "Give-a-book" is a good slogan to keep in mind.

It is useless to be reminded that when winter comes and the wind howls "a good book in a cozy nook" helps pass many a dreary and drab evening. Many have not accumulated a library and even if they have, the books have probably been read and re-read until they are no longer interesting.

In glancing over the titles yesterday we found volumes suited for all ages. There are books of travel mystery stories, books for children and good novels for grown-ups. We can well adopt the motto of New Mexico: "Crescit Eundo"—"It grows as it goes."

Just what plan will be adopted for handling the books this winter has not yet been worked out, but it is hoped they can be placed with some suitable person at a convenient location so they will be available.

Junior Tennis

When the Western Maryland Junior tennis tournament is played we know it will not be long until we will have to don our red flannels and ear muffs. But even with this dreary prospect the tournament is a fitting climax to the summer's activities. It is always looked forward to by the tennis minded with a great deal of pleasure and zest. While we do not believe in interference or attempted management of the sport activities of the younger set by old has-beens, yet more interest in this Junior event by those interested in building up out-doors sport activities would help a lot. It is really a very fine event.

The tournament started yesterday and is now being played. Women's and men's singles and doubles and mixed doubles are on the card, with 25 entrants—18 boys and 7 girls.

Tabernacle Meeting

The Wheeling Gospel Tabernacle meetings are now in progress at the Park and will continue over next Sunday. The desire to see and hear in person broadcasting artists is a lure that draws many to the services, while many come for the spiritual uplift. On Monday night of this week an audience estimated at approximately 2500 filled the old auditorium, while hundreds of cars were parked in double rows along the streets adjoining it. With possibly one or two exceptions, it was the largest audience that has gathered here for some years.

The meeting is in charge of Rev. Study, of England, assisted by the Lehmans and singers. Their meetings in the Wheeling Tabernacle are broadcast each morning, the snappy time and pleasing cadence of the voices of the singers attracting many listeners. Monday evening "Junior" Lehman had charge of the meeting and the close attention and frequent "amens" of the large audience testified to its appreciation of the effort.

It is possible that Tabernacle meetings may be held here next year during the month of August.

Frank M. Murphy, Fairmont, spent the week-end here with his family.

Mrs. W. S. Chesley was a visitor to Berkley Springs, W. Va., several days last week.

Mr. and Mrs. J. W. Osborne, of Belair, O., are registered at the Allegheny House. Mr. Osborne was a former sheriff of Belmont county and he and his wife have been vacationing here for several summers.

Miss Helen Burch has returned to New York City after spending the summer with her mother, Mrs. Wm. T. Burch.

Miss Janet Robinson and brother, Jarvis, have returned here from Charleston and will remain several weeks.

Ira McKee and sisters, the Misses Myrtle and Faith, have closed their cottage and returned to their home in Pittsburgh.

Mrs. George Peddicord and son, of Fairmont, have been guests of Mrs. C. E. Hutchinson.

The ladies of the U. B. church will hold a chicken supper in the Aid hall in Loch Lynn this (Thursday) evening, beginning at 5:30.

Major W. N. Skyles motored to Cumberland, Sunday, where he joined his brother, Rev. Eugene P. Skyles, and together went to their old home at Woodstock, Va., for a short visit. They were accompanied by Miss Mary Easter Martin, who has been the guest of Major and Mrs. Skyles over some weeks.

KING "COAL" WILL REIGN OVER TABLELAND MEETING

Music Festival Scheduled September 16 and 17 at Camp Dawson, Near Kingwood

MISS HUFF IS DIRECTING

"The program for the Allegheny Tableland Festival to be held Saturday and Sunday, September 16 and 17, at Camp Dawson, West Virginia, is nearing completion," says Miss Sara B. Huff, director, "and promises to be one of the best and most interesting yet given." Following the idea of the programs for the two previous years, it is built around a particular theme. The first year "lumber" was featured and last year the "George Washington Memorial," held the center of the stage. This year the central thought will be "King Cole" (King Coal).

Tony Beaver, of lumber camp fame, and the big feature of the 1931 Festival, will be a guest at the court of King Cole this year. George Washington, of the 1932 Bi-Centennial Festival, members of his cabinet, family, and plantation singers will also be guests of King Cole.

Max Poscover, Terra Alta, known as "Hippo" by hundreds of people, both old and young, will preside as "King Cole" at the Saturday afternoon program, beginning at 1:30 o'clock. "Hippo" has been coach and teacher in the Terra Alta schools for the past five years and is widely known throughout this section. A group of fifteen acrobats from Terra Alta will form a part of his court.

Somerset county, Pa., where the former music festivals were held, has offered full cooperation this year. They have put an assistant to Miss Huff in the field for their county's participation and will come to Preston county in full force prepared to take part in both the Saturday and Sunday program.

Choirs directed by Mr. Null, Addison, Pa.; Mr. Don Kimmell, Berlin, Pa.; and Mr. Spiker, of Jennerstown, Pa., will combine to form a Somerset county choir under the direction of Mr. John S. Miller, of Meyersdale, Pa., and will have a prominent place on the program.

Other groups from various sections of the Tableland and elsewhere are expected to give cooperation by sending choirs, bands, and other musical organizations. It is hoped and urged that all parts of the Tableland be represented in the Festival this year. The directors and committees invite talent for this program. Write to Miss Sara B. Huff, Kingwood, W. Va., or Mr. Frank Zeller, Terra Alta, W. Va., for information about the program.

Mr. E. F. Casseday, of Terra Alta, has been chosen secretary-treasurer for all music events. Secure music and information along this line by addressing him at his home.

The program so far as arranged is as follows:

Saturday afternoon, September 16, 1:30 to 2:30, Pageant Parade; 2:30 to 4:15, program played before the Royal Court of King Cole (King Coal) and his royal guests of 1931 Festival (Tony Beaver and his outfit), and the 1932 Festival (George Washington); 4:15 to 5:30, supper and visiting; 6:30. River Pageant and River Songs, (if "Old Man River" will permit).

Sunday afternoon, September 17, 1:30 to 2:30, Concert (instrumental); 2:30, Concert, choirs and other groups, choruses by counties; massed choruses of all choirs and groups. Oakland's musical organizations will participate.

O. P. Jones Re-Elected Head of Athletic Association

At a meeting of the principals and coaches of the high schools of the county on Tuesday afternoon, in the the local high school building, O. P. Jones, principal of Kltzmiller high, was re-elected president of the Garrett County Athletic Association.

At the meeting it was decided to have a two-game schedule this year among the schools in both soccer and fieldball. Last year the three northern schools competed, the winner playing the winner of the three southern schools. It was felt there would be more interest if each high school team would play every other team both at home and away.

The schedule will be made out later.

STATE NAMES NEW RELIEF WORKER FOR THIS COUNTY

Miss Ethel Miller Will Succeed Miss Charlotte Wilcox as Administrator of Affairs

LATE REPORT IS GIVEN

Miss Ethel Miller, formerly of the state of Washington, has been appointed by the Garrett County Welfare Board to succeed Miss Wilcox as Emergency Relief Administrator.

Miss Miller comes to the work with an unusual rural background. She was born in Nebraska but later moved to the state of Washington where her father was a fruit rancher. She was educated at the State University of Washington and taught for years in the rural schools there. She also directed the work of 4-H Clubs throughout the state and taught social sciences in high schools. Miss Miller received her master's degree from Columbia University, New York City, majoring in vocational guidance. Following her work at Columbia, Miss Miller did personal work. She also served as head of the Probation Department at Montrose State Training School for Girls and assisted in emergency relief work in Frederick county just prior to coming to Garrett county.

Miss Miller comes of a family who have elected to serve their fellow-men in rural and foreign communities. A brother is a practicing physician in a rural district of her native state, and a sister, after serving many years as a medical missionary in China, is now doing public health work in the mountains of Kentucky. At the time of connecting with the Board of State Aid and Charities in Maryland, Miss Miller expressed a decided preference for work in Western Maryland, and especially in a mountainous section of the state. Since reaching Oakland on August 28, Miss Miller has visited most of the districts of the county with local workers and is enthusiastic about the natural beauty of the county and the possibilities of the service to be rendered.

In turning over the administration of the relief work, Miss Wilcox stated that while there had been a 9 percent decrease in the number of families on work relief in the county from the peak June 17th, the amount of the payroll for the week ended September 2 was the largest in the history of the relief program. "Our peak was 1,131 heads of families but with the opening of the Conservation Camps, some of the mines, and the regular seasonal jobs, the relief load dropped as low as 769 heads of families the middle of August. Since that time the number has been steadily rising," Miss Wilcox stated. "The mines retained some of our relief workers for several weeks but because they are now running very short schedules and because farm products are not ready for market, we have had to reinstate many men during the past two weeks. Most of the men on the relief lists appear to live within a few days or a week of dependency," Miss Wilcox continued, "and the failure of the mines to call men to work results in actual need in many homes if there is no relief work to absorb them. With the increase in wage scale effective August 14, it was hoped by the Board of Welfare that there home conditions would materially improve, but there seems to have been a corresponding increase in the price of food stuffs, and rents in some mining sections of the county, according to the Board. While the number of men on work relief has dropped from 1,131 in June to 900 the first week of September, the total payroll shows an increase of approximately 8½%. $4,232.10 was paid directly to workers on last Saturday and there were also a certain number of families in the county receiving direct relief in their homes because of illness or desertion of the bread-winner, widowhood, and other reasons.

Miss Wilcox has heen called by the Board of State Aid and Charities to another county of the state where relief organizations will shortly be set up.

With an enrollment of 882 pupils, the three Oakland schools opened for the nine-months' term of instruction on Wednesday, September 6. The enrollment in the three schools shows an increase of 14 over last year for the same period, although the grade school has 7 less.

There are no post graduates as yet, 20 having applied for admission. They may not be admitted at all, according to Prof. F. D. Bittle, principal, as the rooms are already crowded, at least not until the regular pupils are placed. There is one teacher added, Roland Ready, English and history instructor.

Oakland Grammar school opened with an enrollment of 358, a decrease of 7 over last year's first day attendance.

St. Peter's parochial school has 84 pupils in the various grades, 39 girls and 45 boys, which is an increase of 10 over last year.

Of those enrolled in the High school, 90 are seniors, 96 are juniors, 122 are sophomores, and 132 are freshmen. The senior class is the largest in the history of the school but the freshman class is less than last year.

The Oakland grammar school enrollment is divided into grades as follows: first, 51; second, 58; third, 53; fourth, 55; fifth, 57; sixth, 41; seventh 43. Mrs. Marion Bloss-Lohr is teaching the first grade and the same staff is teaching as opened last year, a total of eight teachers.

JOB PRINTERS ORGANIZE TO REGULATE BUSINESS

Allegany and Garrett County Printers Form Group

Representatives of fourteen job printing plants in Allegany and Garrett counties met Friday night at the Fort Cumberland Hotel and formed an association to be affiliated with the Central and Western Maryland Printers' Association.

The representatives discussed the duties and obligations which will be imposed upon the printing industry when the proposed code of fair competition is adopted and accepted by the government to control the industry throughout the country.

September 23 Is Date Chosen for Knights of Pythias Picnic

The fourteenth annual Knights of Pythias picnic, scheduled for Labor Day, was postponed until Saturday, September 23, it was announced last night by Arthur Lawton, manager.

The picnic was called off on Monday when weather conditions were such that it was impossible to hold the affair. It was thought that September 16 would be the date chosen, but on account of the music festival at Camp Dawson on that date, the date of one week later was chosen.

A picnic at Friendsville on September 12 prevented an earlier date being chosen.

At a meeting of the executive committee it was decided to conduct the program as scheduled on the 23d.

The automobile will be awarded upon that day and the picnic will be held in Helbig's Grove, as was the plan earlier.

TONSIL CLINICS MAY BE ARRANGED FOR CHILDREN

Plans Made for Those Unable to Pay at Meeting Last Friday

Plans for three clinics for removal of tonsils of children in urgent need of the operation but unable to pay, were made at a meeting of the County Commissioners, doctors and health workers of the county last Friday.

The meeting was called at the request of the board of county commissioners which is also the county health board, and was held in the commissioners' office. Those present at the meeting were George D. Browning, James A. Fitzwater, George W. Harvey, commissioners; Drs. N. I. Broadwater, M. C. Hinebaugh, E. I. Baumgartner, A. J. Mason, C. Nedrow, A. K. Fiddler, and Eugene C. Peck; Miss Charlotte Wilcox, Miss Ethel Miller, Mrs. E. Z. Tower, Mrs. Joseph F. Fahey, and Mrs. Samuel Cole.

It was stated that there are 40 or more children in the county who need an operation on their tonsils, but could not afford to pay for the operation. After considerable discussion it was decided to hold three clinics for the removal of childrens' tonsils, if arrangements could be satisfactorily completed. One of these is to be held at Dr. Fiddler's office in Kitzmiller. The other two will be in the Grand Jury room of the court house. It is planned to have a skilled throat surgeon to operate at the clinics, the nursing care to be in charge of Miss Nell Browning.

It is hoped at each clinic to have children from one area of the county cared for so that the family physicians of that area may devote some time that day and the following to their care. Every child who is to be operated upon at one of these clinics must be certified by the family doctor to be in urgent need of a tonsil operation; be recommended to the clinic by the family doctor with a statement as to how mueh the doctor thinks the patient should pay for the operation, or if the County Commissioners should bear the whole expense.

Arrangements for admission of the children to these clinics may be made through the County Health department, and are subject to approval of the County Commissioners.

Series for Baseball Championship to Begin September 10th

While Bayard baseball team continued in the lead of the Mt. State baseball league, the Swallow Falls C. C. C. camp forged into second place by taking a double header from Sunnyside during the past week.

The winners of the first and second half divisions, probably Friendsville and Bayard, will hold a five game series. Houston, Vindex, Fletcher and Swallow Falls, will be official umpires. The first game will be Sunday, September 10, at Friendsville, at 2:30. All games previously scheduled for that day will be played Saturday, September 9.

The second game will be played at Friendsville Tuesday, September 12, and the third and fourth games on the diamond of the second half winner, and if a fifth game is necessary, that will he played at Friendsville.

Officers Re-elected at Meeting of County Teachers

At a meeting of the County Teachers' Association held Tuesday afternoon in the Oakland high school building, Miss Gladys Hamill was re-elected president of the organization, with others officers re-elected as follows: B .O. Aiken, vice-president; Miss Mary Thomas, treasurer; Irvin Smith, secretary.

WILL SETTLE WET OR DRY QUESTION NEXT TUESDAY

Will Also Vote on Referendum Exempting Garrett County from State-Wide Beer Bill

BALLOTS BEING PRINTED

Whether or not Maryland will be in favor of the repeal of the 18th Amendment to the Constitution of the United States, and whether or not Garrett county will legalize the sale of beer containing 3.2 percent of alcohol by weight, will be decided at a special election to be held at the various election precincts of the county on Tuesday, September 12.

Official ballots are being printetd in The Republican office and the notice of special election has also been authorized by J. Frank Browning, president of the Board of Supervisors of Elections for Garrett county, and Fred P. Miller and Henry P. Miller members of that body.

Polls will be open at the usual places for holding the election at 6 o'clock a. m., and will remain open until 7 o'clock p. m. There will be two separate ballots, one for the repeal amendment, and one for the adoption or rejection of beer in Garrett county.

The repeal amendment will not be voted upon directly, but delegates to a convention for the purpose of voting upon the question will be elected. There will be 18 delegates at large upon the official ballot, six for repeal, six against repeal, and six unpledged; and also nine delegates from the sixth Congressional district, three for repeal, three against repeal, and three unpledged. H. V. Leighton, Loch Lynn, is one of the delegates from the Sixth District against repeal.

Each state was given seven years in which to act upon the amendment passed by Congress which would repeal the 18th article of amendment, and already 25 states have voted on the question. At least fourteen more states will vote before November 8.

Following the election next Tuesday the delegates will gather at Annapolis on October 18, at noon, to cast their decisions.

The action on whether or not Garrett county is to have beer is the result of a bill passed at the last session of the legislature exemping the county from the provisions of the State law and requiring a referendum. The state law makes legal the manufacture, sale and distribution of beer, lager beer, porter, wine or fermented malt or vinous liquors containing not more than 3.2 percent of alcohol by weight.

Teachers' Meeting Held

All but two teachers of the county were present at the all-day teachers' meeting at the Oakland High school on Tuesday, the two absent having been unable to attend on account of sickness. There were 153 present, 116 elementary teachers and 37 high school instructors.

Besides F. E. Rathbun, county superintendent of schools, and other members of the school staff, those who addressed the meeting were Joseph E. Harned, Dr. Eugene C. Peck, Miss Charlotte Wilcox, Mr. John L. Dunkle, president of Frostburg Normal. Devotions were conducted by Rev. I. S. Middaugh.

The work of the coming school term was discussed.

Awarded First Prize At Fair

The Gilbert-Brown Boys' Band, and the Oakland Fire department won first prize in the parade on Firemen's Day at the Tucker County Fair, which ended at Parsons Saturday night. The second prize went to the Rowlesburg firemen.

The two organizations were awarded fifty dollars, and each will receive half.

Lesson for September 10

JONATHAN

LESSON TEXT—I Samuel 18:1-4; 19:1-7; 20:30-40.

GOLDEN TEXT—A friend loveth at all times, and a brother is born for adversity. Proverbs 17:17.

PRIMARY TOPIC—New Friends.

JUNIOR TOPIC—David's True Friend.

INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOPIC—Choosing Worthy Friends.

YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOPIC—How to Be a Friend.

I. Friendship Established Between Jonathan and David (I Sam. 18:1-4).

The friendship of Jonathan and David has become immortalized in the world's thought. It was unique in that it occurred between two men of rival worldly interests. Jonnthan was the crown prince and heir to the throne, according to hereditnry rights. David was to he king according to divine choice and arrangement. Jonathan knew this and yet magnanimously waived his naturnl, personal rights in favor of God's chosen.

1. Love nt first sight (vv. 1, 2). At the end of the interview between David and Snul, following the victory over Gollath, Jonathan's soul was knit with that of David. While there was mutual love, this trnit stands out pre-eminently in Jonathan. To him it meant great loss, the loss of the throne, while to David it mennt immense gain, the acquisition of the throne, to which he had no natural right.

2. A covenant established (vv. 3, 4). This mutual love found expression in the estnblishment of a covenant between them. Following this love covenant, Jonathan stripped himself of his court rohe and equipment and gnve them to David. This net wns a virtual nbdicntion of the throne to David. Truly, "Love seeketh not her own." (I Cor. 13:5).

II. Jonathan Defended David Against Saul's Frenzy (I Sam. 19:1-7).

David went into the battle with Golinth out of zeal for God and true religion, not for personal glory; but it turned out as always, that hecause he put God first, God honored him. It is always true that those who honor God shall in turn he honored of God.

On David's return from victory over Gollath, he was met by a triumphal chorus of women of all the cities of Israel, chanting praises to him of the victory over their enemy. They nscribed more praise to David than to Saul. The one group sang "Saul has slain his thousands," nnd the other answered, "And David his ten thousands." This praise of David aroused the murderous envy in Saul's heart and moved him twice to attempt to kill David.

This wickedness was in Saul's heart. The occasion fanned it into n finme making it a burning passion of evil. Let no one think of this as nn imaginary sin. Its counterpart may he found in many of us. The supreme test is as to whether the success of others and the honor hestowed upon others arouses within us envy and jealousy. It is hard to forgive those who outdistance us in the race of life.

In Saul's third nttempt to kill David, Jonathan defended him and secured from his father the oath that David should not he slain. He thus exposed himself to the nnger of his infuriated fnther for David's sake. This willingness to lay down his life for David proved his real friendship (John 15:13).

III. Jonathan Revealed to David Saul's Murderous Attempt (I Sam. 20:30-40.)

The heginning of the new moon was celebrated by sacrifices and feasting, at which all the members of the family were expected to he present (v. 5). David's excuse for being absent was thnt he might go home to attend the yearly sacrifice of his family. Matters were now so serious that Jonathan nnd David renewed their covenant. In this renewal the terms were broadened beyond the life of Jonathan (vv. 14, 15).

Saul's anger was now so fierce thnt for Jonathan to he found in David's company was most dangerous, so he cleverly planned this sign by which he could make known to David Saul's attitude and purpose. True friendship warns those who are exposed to danger. This pledge was faithfully carried out hy David (II Sam. 9:7, 8).

Testing Christianity

To examine its evidences is not to try Christianity; to admire its martyrs is not to try Christianity; to compare and estimate its teachers is not to try Christianity; hut for one week, for one day, to have lived in the pure atmosphere of faith nnd love to God, and tenderness to man, that, indeed is to have made experiment of Christianity.—Willinm Archer Butler.

Beautiful Sentence

One of the most beautiful sentences in the Bible is this hrief sentence from the thirty-second chapter of Genesis: "He hlessed him there." No life can be at its fullest, strongest and hest until one can say, referring to some time and place: "He hlessed me there."

Like a Diamond

"The nature of a human being is like a finely-cut diamond; it reflects a multitude of color-flashes as the light of other personalities is played upon it.

We are not crazy about publishing testimonials of satisfied customers, but here is one that shows what The Republican can do:

"Thursday I lost a gold watch I valued highly. I immediately advertised in your lost and found column. Yesterday I went home and found the watch in the pocket of another suit. It certainly pays to advertise."

Count me in on the list of rattle brains. I went on a picnic Tuesday evening and forgot the bread for the sandwiches.

I wouldn't want to accuse anybody intentionally, but it's my opinion that the ballot on repealing the 18th amendment was made indefinite to the mass of people for a purpose.

When you vote the beer ballot, you vote either for or against beer, and if you vote against beer, it means against.

But take the repeal ballot. If you vote for the ratification of the amendment, which repeals the eighteenth amendment, you are voting to bring back liquor. If you vote against ratification, you are voting for continuing prohibition.

Just be on the safe side, vote the middle list of names, and you vote to keep prohibition in force.

State's Attorney Dawson and Constable Shartzer had a little upset on Tuesday night near Sines. It seems the Ford car couldn't negotiate the steep hill. Constable Shartzer, being used to wrecks, took the matter lightly. But Attorney Dawson, being a new experience with him, was just a bit excited for a short time. The car was not damaged.

In another column in a West Virginia paper among things the writer doesn't like is the fellow who comes along and asks: "How are the whiskey and women in this town?"

Kindly kick him one in the pants for me, too. If there's anything that gripes—

There are always two sides to every question. So also are there two chances for everything and everybody. Even in worry, there are two chances. Either you worry or you don't.

So this week, you have just two chances. Either you like this column or you do not. If you do, all right. If you don't, you have just two chances. Either quit reading it or write one yourself. If you quit reading it, your worries are over; if you write one yourself you still have two chances. You'll either get run out of town or you won't. If you don't, it's all right. If you get run out you still have two chances. You can either stay in the county or leave it. If you leave the county, all right; if you don't you still have two chances. You either join the NRA or you don't. If you do your worries are just beginning. If you don't your worries are doubled, but you still have two chances.

You either get boycotted or you don't. If you don't your worries are over. If you do, you still have two chances. You either beg or you don't. if you beg, your worries are over. If you don't you still have two chances. Either the relief feeds you or the government pays you for not raising anything, and you still have two chances.

It's like the two Negroes who were discussing whether or not they would have to go to war.

"Don't worry," one of them suggested. "Just two things can happen. You is either drafted or you ain't drafted. If you ain't you can forget it; if you is then you've got two chances. You may be sent to France or you may be kept at home. If you stays here you don't have to worry; if you is sent to France then you've got two chances. They may send you to the front or keep you in Paris. If you stay in Paris, your troubles are over; if you go to the front then you have two chances: you may be shot and you may not be. If you're not, then you don't need to worry; if you are shot you've got two chances. You may die and you may get well. If you get well you don't need to worrw, nnd if you die—well, you've still got two ehances."

But to get back to this column. You either like it or you don't. If you do, you can continue next week. If you don't like it, then your only chance is to lump it.

Independent? That's me all over—or rather that was me all over before June 27, 1931. Any more I'm just independent when it comes to taking my two chances. Either I can finish this column or I don't. If I finish it now both my worries and yours are over. If I don't finish it the boss editor will give me my last chance.

But it's nenr press time and I've just got two chances. Either I get it in the forms or I don't get it in.

P. S.—Later: Well, must have got it in.

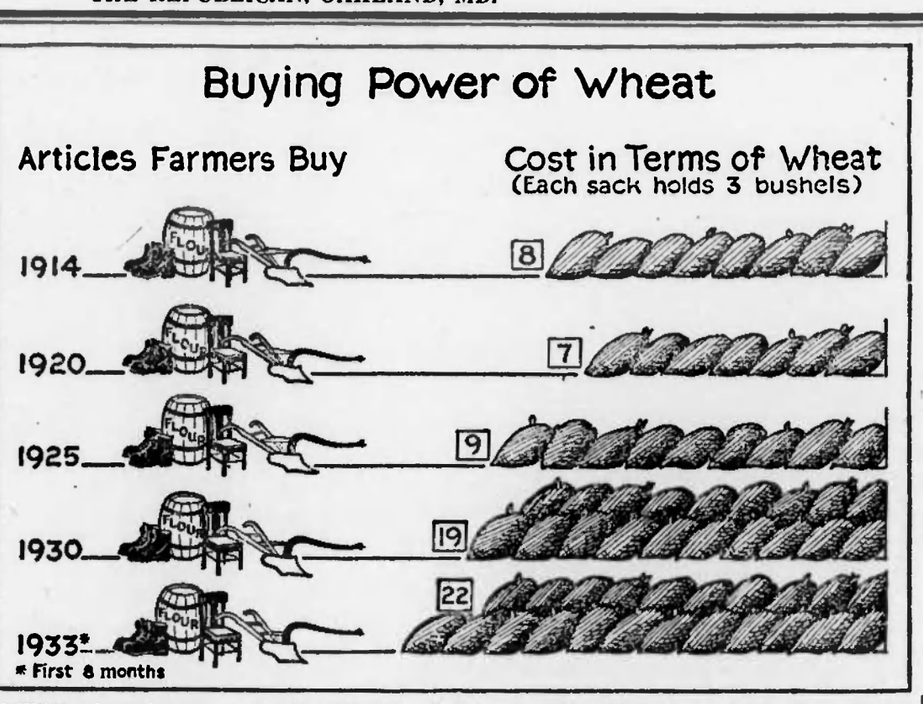
Could you give me another chance next week, huh?

Buying Power of Wheat



GIVING wheat the same buying power that it had in the period before the World War is the goal of the Agricultural Adjustment Administration. This chart shows how hig the problem is. In 1914 8 sacks of wheat would buy a pair of shoes, a barrel of flour, a chair, and a plow. In 1925 it took 9 sacks of wheat to buy the same set of articles. In 1930 it took 19 sacks of wheat and early in 1933 it took 22 sacks of wheat. The cause of the low buying power is too great a supply. To remedy the situation, the Agricultural Adjustment Administration has begun a campaign asking farmers to reduce their acreage for the 1934 and 1935 crops so that the return from a bushel of wheat will be once more what it was in the pre-war period. In its power to buy the goods which farmers need. The goal of the wheat administration is the 1914 basis, on which 8 sacks of wheat would buy the bill of goods pictured here.

The Credit Side of the Prohibition Ledger!

With the sale of beer legalized by Congress and a large number of state legislature during the current year, and with the terrific drive for the repeal of the Eighteenth Amendment in full swing, a brief, superficial survey of the record of the thirteen year period of Prohibition prior to 1933 should be of interest to those who are perplexed or misled by the anti-Prohibition propaganda so nearly universally promoted by the wet metropolitan press, the movies and the radio; and should be carefully considered by all those of whatever persuasion who seek to know the truth.

The Significance of Beer

It must be kept in mind, in this connection, that prior to the adoption of the Eighteenth Amendment, about ninety-three per cent of all intoxicating liquors consumed by the American people was in the form of beer which has now been brought back under legal sanction, and that the proposed repeal of the Eighteenth Amendment, if consummated, would thereby restore by legal action the remaining seven per cent of the quantity of intoxicating liquors previously consumed throughout the nation.

The comparative record of these thirteen years under the Prohibition policy of the government may be easily verified by the average citizen with a good memory and old enough to remember the situation during the pre-Prohibition years and who may easily refresh his memory by official reports of the United States Census Department available in practically every public library in all the states.

Vital Statistics and Liquor Consumption

Prohibition did not prevent all deaths from alcoholism and other causes in which alcohol played an important part, nor did it stamp out disease and ill-health, but it has made a real contribution to this end by changing the official death rate from alcoholism to a much lower figure than in any similar period in the history of United States Vital Statistics, which vital statistics also show for the Prohibition period an unprecedented public health record.

Prohibition did not prevent the consumption of intoxicating liquors, but according to Government and other official reports dealing with both legal and illegal intoxicants, it did decrease that consumtion to about thirty-five percent of that of pre-Prohibition years; it did reduce the Keeley Cure business by more than seventy-five per cent and it did almost entirely eliminate from public view that pathetic figure of the saloon era known as the "old soak."

The Saloon and the Speakeasy

Prohibition did not eradicate from society the ancient lawless speakeasy and the bootlegger, but it did drive the traffic in intoxicants from the principal streets and public places; it did withdraw government sanction from intoxicating beverages, making the traffic and traffickers therein fugitives from justice with a price upon their heads, and it did make the highways and thoroughfares safer for men, women, and children.

Liquor and Crime

Prohibition of the liquor traffic did not put an end to crime any more than the prohibition of murder, theft and arson put an end to those lawless acts; but in a remarkable degree in the post-war period in which crime greatly increased in every other country involved, Prohibition in the United States affected the American record in such a way as to make a better showing in that respect than any other countries where legalized liquor helped to build the highest peak of post-war crime in history.

Prohibition and Economics

Prohibition did not annihilate economic distress, but it did bring about a more equitable division of the pay check of industrial workers so far as the wives and children of those workers were concerned, and thus helped transform the economic and social status of American labor which class, with their families, represents about four-fifths of the nation's population.

Prohibition did not make everybody rich, but it did divert vast millions of expenditures for liquor into other channels, such as those represented by dairy products, soft drinks, candy, radios, automobiles, entertainment and recreation in general.

Corruption in Government

Prohibition did not do away with corruption in government and politics, but it did decidedly lessen the amount and extent of that corruption which was directly related to the liquor traffic of the old era when that traffic largely dominated the economic, social and political life of the nation; and in addition thereto it did reveal sources of corruption which probably would have remained hidden if the old liquor regime had continued.

A Worthy Standard

Prohibition did not revolutionize the social order in the interest of the Golden Rule, but it did erect a social standard which though far from full realization belongs in the class and shares the social significance of the abolition of the slave trade and domestic slavery, the emancipation of women, the banishment of human sacrifices as a superstitious rite, the rise of public education and the revolution in behalf of popular government.

Education and Prohibition

Prohibition did not eliminate illiteracy but during the brief period of thirteen years it did witness a remarkable increase in both enrollment and attendance in primary schools, a one hundred per cent increase in the attendance in colleges and universities, a record unparalleled in the history of this or any other country in the world.

An Indelible Record

Prohibition did not solve the beverage alcohol problem, but in comparison with unquestionable records of every other system of liquor control previously attempted in the United States of America or in any other nation, Prohibition did accomplish more in the way of mitigating the evils inherent in the liquor traffic than had ever previously been secured. More than that and in addition thereto, the indelibly written record of that thirteen years of national Prohibition period, in rural districts, villages, counties, cities, states, and the nation as a whole, in spite of all the weakness of enforcement and all the nullification of the law, will nevertheless stand for all time as a challenging record.

MRS. PINCHOT SUGGESTS AID FOR DAIRY FARMERS

Wants Washington to Pay a Bonus for Destruction of Surplus

To the Editor of The Republican.

Dear Mr. Editor:—I am taking the liberty of writing to put before you a plan which I think can be of much service to the dairy farmers of America. I shall be most grateful to you for whatever publicity you feel inclined to give it. I would be glad, also, to hear what you think of this idea.

Today the dairy producer is in a bad way. His enterprise roughly represents a quarter of the cash income received by agriculture in America. He must have support from Washington.

I suggest that the Federal Government give immediately to the dairy farmer the same help in eliminating his surplus that it is now giving to the wheat, cotton, tobacco, and hog farmer. In other words, let Washington pay a cash bonus for the destruction of the milk surplus. Such a bonus (fixed according to sections and market conditions) should go to pay the individual farmer, not to destroy milk, but to do away with his low-production dairy cows—one-third of which are kept at an actual loss throughout the country today. The destruction of diseased cows might well be added to this program. Cows so destroyed should not be sent to market to compete with, and bring down, the price of beef to the farmer who raises it.

Regulations, of course, must be made to control the raising of heifer calves by the farmer who receives the bonus—and to improve the breed of whatever calves he is allowed to raise.

There are many difficulties in carrying out such a plan. I am not a dairy expert. I don't presume to suggest the details of its administration. These must be worked out by farm leaders in cooperation with economists and executives in the Department of Agriculture, in which two groups there are brains, determination and knowledge enough, I am certain, to find proper solution.

My plan (unlike the ones reducing cotton, tobacco and wheat surpluses) protects the consumer, whose interests are only too often neglected, as well as the farmer. It has two long-distance and permanent advantages:

(a) The replacement of low-production cows, by cows that pay over and above their keep, will materially reduce the cost of making milk—and thereby reduce the price at which it can be sold. (The whole of the savings made in this way must be safeguarded for the sole benefit of the producer and consumer—the distributor should not share in one penny of this differential).

(b) It permits looking ahead and rationing dairy production roughly to equal demand—so that the farmer can have some assurance of finding a market for what he produces.

The immediate advantages of this plan are that:

(a) It provides for the reduction of the milk surplus which now underlies and complicates the dairy problem, and which is advanced by distributors as one reason for paying starvation prices to the producer.

(b) It puts ready money into the hands of the farmer at the time he needs it the most—helping him to pay taxes, interest charges, necessary repairs, etc.; meet the added cost of living; in many cases perhaps to prevent the loss of his farm. Moreover, at this time, anything that increases the buying power of the dairy farmer, according to NRA philosophy, helps business in general. Such a plan will speed up national recovery.

In Washington the Federal Government, I am glad to say, has already begun to tackle the other big problem of the dairy farmer, that of distribution. This is being done by a method of so-called Marketing Agreements—or understandings on prices between producers and distributors. These understandings, after approval from the Secretary of Agriculture, become effective for the district. This plan puts what is, in effect, a price-making power in the hands of the Secretary. This power can and should be made a powerful weapon in fighting for justice to the farmer.

Violent dissatisfaction has been expressed by the dairy producers with the terms of the agreement for the Philadelphia Milk Shed. They claim that Dr. Clyde L. King, the milk czar of the Federal Department, has sacrificed their interests and those of the consumer (which are in many respects identical) to the distributors. They further object to the basic-surplus plan of computation, on the ground that it is used to confuse and mislead them.

I sincerely hope that before long the farmers will have been successful in their demands for a re-writing of the Philadelphia Marketing Agreement—and that the price eventually accepted will mean a real and adequate increase to them in that direction. I further hope that the milk producers of the entire country will insist upon the removal of Dr. King, who has demonstrated his unfitness for the job he holds. They have a right to demand the appointment of a man as Federal Milk Administrator, in whom they can have confidence—and who will be militant and aggressive in their defense and that of the public.

If the milk producers of the country believe in this plan, let them get together and insist that Washington put it through. Let them fight for it through their organizations and as individuals. I shall be happy to help in any way that I can.

Sincerely yours,
CORNELIA BRYCE PINCHOT.

HAM AND EGGS FOR ALL

To many Americans and to the so-called "rest of the world," the prodigious effort the United States is making to rout the depression is still a hazy picture. That is not surprising, for news of the National Recovery Act must be bottle-necked through cable and radio, telescoped by pressure of more localized news, and, in many eases, blurred by translation.

It is essential, therefore, that he who would understand must hold fast to the fundamentals of the underlying philosophy. They are quite simple. Two crisp sentences by Administrator Johnson sum them up in a way that he who reads as he runs may understand.

"The very rich," he said, "do not buy $40 worth of ham and eggs for breakfast. If we want to keep this country going we have to find a way to let everybody buy half a dollar's worth of ham and eggs."

Economists and social workers, decrying concentration of wealth in the hands of the few, are no longer voices in the wilderness. The NRA is, in effect, notice to the world that the American business man is awakening to the logical implications of a civilization built around the machine. He reasons something like this:

Twentieth century economics are predicated on science. Science means machines. Machines mean mass production. Mass production requires mass consumption. But mass consumption is impossible unless the masses have money. If large groups are unemployed, if wages are paid which do not permit families to buy ham and eggs and clothes and shelter, business will wane. Therefore, means must be devised to employ men and put in their pockets the wherewithal to buy.

The National Recovery Act is, of course, the answer of the moment to the challenge of this logic. It simply seeks a planned readjustment of economic processes, whereby, to quote Administrator Johnson again, all the employers in the United States "do about the same thing at about the same time"—cut hours to employ more men and pay a living wage. It is a corollary of that proposition that price-cutting and bribery and child-labor must be dropped overboard along with the other pirates that have preyed on legitimate commerce. In the past we have called these abuses unethical; in the future we shall more frequently use the word uneconomic.

It is a vast and unique experiment upon which the United States is launched. Unlike many records in the pages of social history, this one is not a coercive edict from an oligarchic minority; rather it issues from and will be worked out by the people themselves. If they are courageous, industrious, and, when necessary, self-sacrificing, it will not fail. On the other hand, the past four miserable years and a universal break-down of commercial intercourse suggests what is in store if it does not succeed.

An Interested Voter Appeals to Garrett County Citizenry To Vote Against the Return of The Saloon.

To the People of Garrett County:—

How shall I vote on September 12th, is the question now before us. Shall I vote for beer and the repeal of the Eighteenth Amendment to the Constitution so that we can have the saloons back again? It is a question each voter of the county must answer.

If we vote for the return of the saloons, and that is what we will do if we vote for beer and the repeal of the Eighteenth Amendment, we cannot have the saloons without customers, and certainly if I vote for them and want them returned I should patronize them and could not object to my family of boys and girls doing likewise. Also if we want the saloons for the revenue derived through the license for same for the support of the government, then the more beer and other liquors drunk the greater the revenue will be for Uncle Sam. So if we vote for them they are well patronized. Would you want your boys and girls to be their best customers? Could you object to this if you vote for the return of the liquor traffic? Would your children be better men and women by patronizing these places? Think this over before casting your vote on September 12th.

If the patronizing of these saloons by your boys and girls will make them better citizens, then, fathers and mothers, you should vote for the return of the traffic. And if the saloons are returned to county, never find fault with those who patronize them.

In the depression times it is very hard for the majority of the people to earn sufficient to buy bread and get the necessary things for the family, much less spend their money for drink. Every dollar spent for drink in the family means that much less for the necessities of life.

Men and women of Garrett county, I appeal to you to think this matter over carefully between now and next Tuesday and then go to the polls and cast your votes against beer and against ratification.

This is the only sure way to vote against the return of the saloons to Garrett county.

Respectfully yours,
AN INTERESTED VOTER.

"The Word of Our God Shall Stand Forever"

OBADIAH

Obadiah's prophecy is the shortest of all the Prophetic books, and excepting the Third Epistle of John, the shortest book in the Bible. Brief as it is, however, it proclaims a message of profound significance born of a great faith in the midst of great tribulation. That message reaches its climax in the closing words of the book: "The kingdom shall be the Lord's."

The nations are summoned by Jehovah's messengers to make war upon Edom. He was determined to humble Edom's pride; Edom's arrogant confidence in the impregnability of his rock fortress will be undeceived. Edom will be plundered by enemies and deserted by allies. His wise counsellors will become fools, his heroes cowards; he is doomed to utter destruction.

In verses 10-14 the reason for Edom's overthrow is stated. When Jerusalem was taken and sacked by foreign enemies, Edom was one of them, rejoicing maliciously at Judah's disaster, sharing the plunder, and cutting off the fugitives from escape.

Of the prophet himself nothing is known. All that can be gathered from his prophecy is that he was a native of Judah. Just when his prophecy took place is also doubtful; some scholars placing him as early as the Ninth Century before Christ; others much later still.

How did the fulfillment of Obadiah's prophecies really come? When we claim fulfillment for the prophecies of Obadiah, we do not mean that course of history, either for Edom or Israel, corresponded step by step with his anticipations. He combines into one picture a process which was to be the work of ages.

If Obadiah prophecied in the reign of Jehoram no long interval elapsed before Edom was chastised and a partial fulfillment obtained. Amaziah captured Sela, the rock-ribbed fortress which the Edomites boasted was impregnable, and inflicted a terrible vengeance upon them. But they were not completely crushed. They made raids upon Judah in the reign of Ahaz, and at the destruction of Jerusalem they filled up the measure of their iniquity by conduct which aroused feelings of the most bitter indignation. The Maccabees waged successful war against them. Judas Maccabeus defeated them at Arbattine, recovered the south country and recaptured Hebron. The Edomites appear for the last time during the great struggle of the Jews with Rome. After the destruction of Jerusalem by Titus their name disappears from history.

So the principles which find expression in this prophecy in a limited and relative form have been verified by the course of history, and we await with confidence that complete fulfillment of them to which the New Testament still points, when the kingdoms of this world shall become the kingdoms of our God and His annointed.

Cheese Is Concentrated Food At New Low Price

Cheese—American Cheddar cheese, Cheddar cheese, or plain American cheese as it is commonly known—is another of the good food bargains now on the market, according to the Bureau of Home Economics of the U. S. Department of Agriculture.

Onion soup with cheese is a whole meal in itself. Cheese fondue, made with a pound of cheese, a pint of milk, and two cups of bread crumbs, can be served as a very cheap main dish for the family dinner. Tomato rarebit, Welsh rarebit. cheese with tomatoes and rice, cheese souffle, cheese with macaroni and tomatoes, cheese fondue, cheese scalloped with cabbage and spaghetti, cheese with potatoes, with corn, with hominy or hominy grits, cheese in rice croquettes, cheese sliced or made into a spread for sandwiches, cheese with anything, almost, will add both to the flavor and food value of the meal.

Onion Soup

Six medium-sized onions, chopped fine; 2 tablespoons butter, 1 pint boiling water, 1 quart meat broth, 4 tablespoons flour, 4 tablespoons cold water, salt to taste, pepper, toast, cheese, finely grated.

Cook the chopped onions in the fat until yellow, add to the hot water, and simmer for 20 minutes, or until tender. Add the meat broth. Blend the flour and cold water, add some of the hot liquid, mix well, and stir into soup. Add the salt and pepper, and cook for a few minutes. Pour the soup into bowls or soup plates, place on top of each a slice of toasted bread, sprinkle cheese over the bread and soup, and serve at once.

Cheese Fondue
(Without egg)

One pint milk, 2 cups fine dry bread crumbs, 1 pound soft cheese, flaked with fork; ½ teaspoon salt, 1 small onion, grated; whole wheat toast.

Heat the milk in a double boiler. Add the bread crumbs, cheese, salt and grated onion. Stir until the cheese has melted. Serve on toast.

Scalloped Cabbage, Spaghetti, and Cheese

One and one-half cups spaghetti, broken in small pieces; 3 tablespoons flour, 3 tablespoons butter or other fat, 2 cups milk, 1 teaspoon salt, ½ pound American cheese, 1 qt. shredded cabbage, 1 cup bread crumbs.

Cook the spaghetti in boiling salted water for 20 minutes, and drain. Make a sauce of the flour, fat, milk, and salt. Shave up the cheese, add to the hot sauce, and stir until melted. Put the cabbage, spaghetti, and sauce in a greased baking dish in layers and cover the top with the bread crumbs. Bake for 20 to 30 minutes in a moderate oven.

Cottage Cheese Salads
With Prunes

Remove the stones from cooked prunes. Stuff the prunes with cottage cheese which has been seasoned with salt. Serve on lettuce leaves with cooked salad dressing. Dates or figs may be use instead of prunes if desired.

With Pineapple

Seasoned cottage cheese balls served on a slice of pineapple, make a delicious salad with cooked dressing.

With Green Pepper

Remove pulp and seeds from a green pepper. Stuff pepper with cottage cheese, seasoned with salt; or a little onion may be added to the cheese. Let the stuffed pepper stand in a cool place for one hour, slice, and serve on lettuce leaves.

To Voters of Garrett County

Defenders' Day, September 12th, is election day. On that day voters will receive two ballots, both on the liquor question.

One will read "For Beer Law" and "Against Beer Law." By this ballot you will determine whether or not you want beer sold in every section of Garrett County.

The other ballot is the one relating to the repeal of the Eighteenth Amendment.

A vote against the saloon will require that you make cross marks to the right of the nine names in the middle column of the large ballot, and also vote against beer.

Records throughout the country show a large increase in drunkenness since beer saloons have opened. This is particularly noticeable in the case of accidents brought about by drunken drivers. The Automobile Commissioner of Maryland said at a public hearing in Annapolis last winter that if the Eighteenth Amendment is repealed the roads of the State would be like a madhouse for the first six months or until the people became sated.

We do not believe the people of Garrett County want that sort of thing, nor do we believe Garrett County peoplle favor the return of the unrestricted liquor traffic so far as the Government is concerned.

You may think it is no use to go to the polls and vote against beer and against repeal—that the State will go wet anyway. It is vitally important that you do vote. This is but the first step toward the return of the open saloon to Garrett County, and if the county votes "wet" on next Tuesday we can expect the repeal, at the next session of the Legislature, of all our local option laws and the complete return of the saloon to every section of Garrett County. That is what the organized wet forces here have in view. If you stay at home or if you vote for beer and for repeal you will be voting for and helping bring about this return of the saloon. It may be given another name, but it will still be the baleful, blighting saloon with all its old evils greatly increased.

We are asking you not only to vote against the return of the saloon but that you use every effort at your command to secure others to do the same.

If Garrett County goes wet it will be because only about one-fourth of the people vote on this question.

We do not believe Garrett County wants to be ruled by a small minority. For the protection of our homes; for the protection of our boys and girls, we appeal to you to help keep Garrett County in the dry column.

Please help us keep the saloon out of Garrett County!

Vote "Against the Beer Law."

Vote against ratification and repeal by marking all nine names in the middle column of the large ballot.

WORK AND VOTE TO KEEP THE SALOON OUT OF GARRETT COUNTY!

—Published by authority of Committee to Keep Garrett County Dry and Protect its Boys and Girls.

PEGLER FINDS WHITE HOUSE RIVAL OF WORKING PRESS

Newspaper Code Might Bar Dilettante Journalists, He Thinks

By Westbrook Pegler

Most of the newspaper boys and girls will prefer to be classed as professional people under the code of the NRA, even though this status would assure them no greater benefit than the privilege of being called out of bed in the middle of the night to go to work.

Most of the newspaper people are merely employes of very practical merchants, but as long as these merchants are permitted to call their business an institution and to command special privileges for it, the hands will like to regard themselves as members of a romantic craft.

The publishing business, in return for the privileges which it enjoys by reason of its special position in industry, naturally owes something to the public. Just what it does owe has never been identified in any code, however, except that generally the press is asked to serve no interest but the public interest. This is a very ambiguous requirement and two publishers might claim to be entirely conscientious, each according to his own lights, when they are in violent and abusive opposition on all matters of controversy.

It is curious that at this time, when Mr. Roosevelt is exhorting the employers of the country, including the publishers, to cooperate with the NRA, one of the most conspicuous rivals of the newspaper and magazine writer is the Roosevelt private and official family. The President's secretaries and Cabinet assistants have been writing diligently and Mrs. Roosevelt and their daughter, Mrs. Dall, are regular occupants of space which always was occupied by professionals up to the time when the election returns appraised the publishers that they were great natural writers. A few weeks ago, when the President was cruising on his yacht, one of his sons, who had never had a lesson in his life, became a syndicate journalist, covering the President's daily routine afloat. It was said of the son's dispatches that he wrote them by hand with a stub pencil on odd scraps of paper held against the mast of the ship. This fooled me completely. I would have sworn, from reading the young man's dispatches, that he had written them with his finger in his oatmeal.

An organization has been formed in New York to ask that the publishers, when they have work to assign, give the jobs to regular, experienced members of the profession. Probably this is intended to eliminate the unfair competition of dilettante journalists, such as the sons and daughters of the 'boss' social affairs. It certainly can not be taken to ask the exclusion of such veteran journalists as Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt; nor the tried and experienced reporter, Anna, her daughter; nor Jimmy, the waterfront man, all of whom can hold their heads up in the company of Primo Carnera, Jack Dempsey, Babe Ruth and John McGraw and the dean of the lady reporters and veteran of many a hard night out in the weather on dirty murders, Mrs. Helen Wills Moody, of Berkeley, Calif.

Mrs. Winchell Entertains at Her Mountain Lake Park Home

One of the social functions of the closing season was a tea given by Mrs. E. L. Winchell at Mountain Lake Park on Tuesday. The event was given as a farewell honor to Mrs. Winchell's house guests, Mrs. C. H. Devore, of Woodsfield, Ohio, and Miss Maxine Devore, of Woodsfield and Martin's Ferry, Ohio.

During the afternoon the guests were busily employed working at needle point and making and exchanging various interesting quilt patches. On display were two quilts which had been made in the year 1800. These are owned by Mrs. Lillian Sincell, of Oakland.

A tea-supper was served at 5:00 o'clock with Miss Devore pouring.

The personnel, aside from the honor guests and hostess, was composed of summer guests at Mountain Lake Park and Oakland residents—Mrs. and Miss Ursula Guard, of Baltimore; Miss Abbie Graves and Miss Ida King, of Washington, D. C.; Mrs. Ed. Davidson and Miss Gertrude Humphreys, of Parkersburg, W. Va.; Mrs. Roscoe Brown, of Marietta, Ohio; Miss Kate McLain, of Wheeling, W. Va.; Mrs. A. A. Richards, of Tulsa, Okla.; the Misses Faith and Myrtle McKee, of Pittsburgh, Pa.; Miss Octavia Hicks, of Ocean Grove, N. Y.; Mrs. James A. Towler, Mrs. Benj. H. Sincell and Miss Adeline Sincell, of Oakland.

NATIONAL AFFAIRS

By FRANK P. LITSCHERT

No matter how great or how small is the final success of the government's drive for national recovery as exemplified by the N. R. A., it must be admitted that the people of the country, in general, have entered into the plan with a whole-heartedness that is reminiscent of the days of the World War when we were asked to grow more wheat, eat less wheat, and buy more Liberty Bonds. The government enjoys a unanimity of support which has seldom been seen in the United States in time of peace. Newspapers and leaders of both political parties have supported the President and his administration, and have refrained from open criticism, preferring to give the plan a chance to work itself out in the hope that prosperity, or at least something approaching it, might be returned to the nation.

We in the United States have looked upon it as a drive to end the depression, and we have entered into agreements which we hope and believe are in the most part temporary, as are sacrifices made in time of war, to be used solely for defeating the enemy, which is in this case the depression. We have not felt that we have undergone any fundamental change in our form of government and we are hopeful that the "good old days" of individual initiative will return again when the cloud of depression has passed away.

What outspoken criticism there has been of the relief scheme has come principally from Europe, where, strange enough, Uncle Sam having once been regarded as the mainstay of individualism and capitalism, is now believed to be embarking on a course which may lead him directly into socialism. The criticism, of course, comes principally from the conservative press. For example, one right wing French paper, of international reputation. Les Debatz, declares that "the astounding Rooseveltian adventure reveals that the entire country is launched upon the most feverish socialism without anyone in the United States wishing to admit that that is what it is." This statement will serve to explain the somewhat feverish interest with which European politicians are watching our experiment. For if it should turn out that they were right in their assumptions, then indeed one of the last bulwarks of individualism would be swept away, and the very one on which the individualists have always depended to stem the socialist-communist tide in the final hour of peril.

While the majority of Americans will not agree with the statement of the French newspaper quoted above, yet it is well at times to pause for a moment and read what our neighbors think of us. In the meantime it is well worth repeating that no President, in times of peace, has ever had so nearly unanimous support in working out administrative plans. Mr. Roosevelt could hardly ask for more along this line. The situation is a very pleasant and striking one when we compare it with the support or lack of support accorded the preceding administration. Then, it will be set down in history, criticism and sniping commenced almost with the day the administration went into power. The present administration must be greatly gratified that it has been accorded, since its inauguration, the almost complete bipartisan support that was denied its predecessor.

THE N. R. A. IN ACTION

Within the last few weeks the N. R. A. program has sped along with terrific force, over-riding everyone and every obstacle that has confronted it.

The results so far have been three up and three down. Three important codes have been dictated to industry —steel, coal and oil—accompanied by threats of licensing unless the government's new dictates were obeyed. In the turmoil the N. R. A. lost three of the many members of the "Brain Trust," Prof. William F. Ogburn being the most important of those resigning over breaks in the ranks of the theorists. Ogburn claims the N. R. A. is forging ahead too fast for the consumers' pocketbooks, and that a careful check on price rises in the interest of the consumer is all important to the success of the "New Deal." But these rifts have not caused the N. R. A. to hesitate in its drive.

An addition to the administration's constructive and destructive program is a "New Deal" for hogs, of which hundreds of thousands will be slaughtered to make way for higher pork prices. But will the purpose be accomplished? We may later, if crops and produce fail next year, be drinking cabbage tea and cannibalized into eating one another sandwiched between slices of black bread to get around high wheat prices, as it is reported the people of Soviet Russia are doing at this time as a resule of their "New Deal." But we hope we will all still be here for the next election, anyway.

MT. LAKE PARK

A Voice From The Past

While delving into an all-but- forgotten box of old papers the other day, W. A. Sturgiss found a square piece of cardboard on which appeared the statement that he was a member of the Garrett County Golf Club. It was issued in 1900 and signed by Hugh H. Carr, treasurer. A nine-hole golf course in the glade at Mt. Lake Park—seems like a dream. Of course, the red crawfish threw up their little protecting spirals of mud over the course, but what did that matter? As a lady expressed it last evening, when we were talking of this incident, "The little spirals made dandy tees."

We don't know what the recalling of the golf course proves—probably nothing. But we can not help wondering if the young bloods of thirty-three years ago had a little more pep than those of today. And we can not help but visualize the attractiveness of the green sward of a course to passing tourists on the train, or automobilists traveling over the highway. Now days a resort to attract must have something to offer other than wonderful scenery and pure air.

And then the signature of Dr. Hugh Carr renews recollections of a man who was gifted in his profession as few men are, and endowed with a personality "that bound him to his friends with hoops of steel." The eternal Why? intrudes itself when we think of his untimely death a few years ago.

The Junior Tournament

More interest was apparent this year than heretofore in the Western Maryland Junior tournament, the finals of which were played last Saturday, the postponement having been occasioned by wet courts. A fair gallery was present throughout the play, and more entrants qualified. Miss Frances Grimes and Ralph Weber were on the job to see that it was a success.

The challenge cup, which has been in play five years, must be won by a player three times before it becomes the permanent property of the contestant. This has not been done. It is hoped that next year an additional cup will be donated and put in play. It is encouraging to learn that next season the Junior Tournament will be under the sanction of the U. S. Lawn Tennis association, which will give it merited standing and widen its activites.

The cup this year was won by Logan Weber, which was presented to him Saturday afternoon by Fred Chesley.

Final Results

Girls' Singles: Betty Lee, Morgantown, defeated Charlotte Bolgiano, of Baltimore, 6-3, 6-2.

Boys' Singles: Logan Weber, Oakland, defeated Arthur Calhoun, Mt. Lake Park, 4-6, 6-3, 7-5.

Challenge Cup: (Girls handicap 3 games a set). Logan Weber defeated Betty Lee, 8-6, 7-9, 6-4.

Boys' Doubles: Art Calhoun and Taylor Coffindaffer defeated Logan and Bond Weber, 3-6, 6-2, 7-5.

Girls' Doubles: Joanna Grimes, of Morgantown, defeated Charlotte Bolgiano, Baltimore, and Virginia Nutter, Fairmont, 6-3, 7-5.

Mixed Doubles: Virginia Nutter and Logan Weber defeated Betty and Bob Lee, 6-4, 6-8, 9-7.

Sunday morning, along about four o'clock, Bailiff Silas O. Wiley was aroused from his beauty sleep by insistant knocking at his door. When he responded he was informed that several motor cycles were parked near one of the buildings and that several people were in the building. Mr. Wiley hurriedly dressed, and procuring whatever it takes to constitute a well-dressed policeman, started an investigation. Entering the building he found three of four young men wrapped in blankets and deep sleep. Having been advised that a motor car bearing a certain number had been stolen, he aroused the sleepers and began to question them. To make a long story short, he learned their names and that one or two of them had visited the Park last year, attending the Epworth League meetings and had stopped at Hamilton Hall.

By adroit questioning he obtained other information which satisfied him the boys had not been drinking and intended no mischief. They were simply out for a trip, practically broke and on their way to Keyser by way of Red House to visit some friends whom they had met at the League Convention.

The Bailiff might have caused the boys a lot of trouble and possible disgrace, But he didn't. Satisfying himself that the young men meant no harm, but were simply seeking shelter for the night, being practically without funds, he cautioned them and sent them on their way, possibly causing them to think that there was more charity and common sense kindness in the world than they had believed. It takes such common sense discretion to make a true guardien of the peace.

Martin Cotten, of Wheeling, West Va., recently visited for a few days with his sister, Mrs. William Anderson, in Loch Lynn Heights.

The gathering was honored by the presence of Congressman Jennings Randolph and Senator J. Slidell Brown of Elkins.

STATE FAVORS REPEAL BY MAJORITY OF 5 TO 1

Wets In State Roll Up Plurality Of More Than 159,000—Three Counties Remain Dry

SPECIAL SESSION PLANNED

Maryland on Tuesday added its name to the list of 26 states in which the electorate previously had expressed the desire to repeal the eighteenth amendment. The margin was nearly five to one, the wets of the state rolling up a plurality of 159,000 over the drys, with a few precincts yet to be heard from.

Baltimore's vote was ten to one for repeal but the counties especially on the Eastern Shore, which has been the stronghold of the drys, cut down the city's margin. Dorchester county voted against repeal by approximately 300, while Garrett's dry majority will be considerably less than that.

Two counties, which had declined to permit the return of beer last spring, yesterday voted in its sale again. They were Carroll and Caroline. Carroll's beer advocates had a majority of approximatcly 1,100, while Caroline voted 1,462 to 950 to permit sale of malt beverages.

Washington county voted to repeal its local option law.

Already a special session of the Legislature is being planned to consider state control laws before the actual repeal of prohibition. In late returns this morning Somerset county was added to the dry column by a plurality of 34 votes.

SEPTEMBER CIRCUIT COURT CONVENED ON MONDAY

Grand Jury Charged by Judge Sloan—H. L. Jones, Foreman

Immediately after the grand jury had been sworn to service, with Harland L. Jones as its foreman Monday morning at ten o'clock, Chief Judge D. Lindley Sloan delivered his charge to the jury, as follows:

"Gentlemen of the Grand Jury:—

It is a custom handed down almost from time immemorial for the Court at the opening of the term to charge the grand jury as to their duties. In view of the comprehensiveness of the grand jurors' oath, which you have just taken, it is almost superfluous to tell you what your duties are, as they are all completely and fully covered by your oath.

"You are not a trial body. You are simply an irvestigating and an accusing body. You are to consider in your deliberations charges that are preferred by the grand jury in the form of an indictment, and it is then the province of the petit jury to try those who are so charged and determine their guilt or their innocence. To a great extent your duties have already been laid out for you in the form of charges which have been heard before the magistrates. Such cases as were held for the action of the grand jury by the magistrates you will be called upon to investigate, and for your consideration and determination as to whether there is sufficient evidence to warrant an indictment. That is, whether there is sufficient evidence to warrant a trial of the accused—as to whether the evidence produced before the grand jury warrants a conviction of crime in the absence of explanation or rebuttal.

"It is also the duty of grand juries to investigate any other charges against parties that may be brought before them and to reach the same conclusions whether there is sufficient evidence to warrant a conviction in the absence of explanation or denial of the evidence produced before you.

"It is also the duty of the grand jurors, if they know of any violations of law which have come to their personal notice to bring them to the attention of the grand jury and to give them the same investigation as they would to charges which have already been made by reason of the action of magistrates.

"It is the duty of the Court, at the opening of each term, by statute to

INVESTIGATING CAUSE OF SCOTT HERSHMAN'S DEATH

Man Found Dead Sunday in Field Along Roadway in Kitzmiller

Scott Hershman, aged about forty years, of Kitzmiller, Garrett county, was found dead Sunday morning in a field locally known as Rafter's Meadow, in the town of Kitzmiller.

Hershman was seen by a number of people in the immediate vicinity to topple from the top of the fence surrounding the field and adjacent to the highway about eight o'clock in the morning, but concluding that he was intoxicated made no investigation.

Later, however, when an investigation was set on foot and a friend went to the spot to awaken him, it was found that he had been dead several hours. His remans were removed to the Sharpless undertaking establishment where an autopsy was conducted by Dr. A. K. Fidler and county authorities, following which certain organs of the dead man's body were shipped to Baltimore for examination to ascertain the cause of death—whether from acute alcoholism or from some other form of poisoning.

Hershman was an ex-service man, having been drafted from some point in West Virginia along the Potomac River valley. Funeral services were conducted Tuesday afternoon at two o'clock. The deceased is survived by his wife and two children.

BAYARD, FRIENDSVILLE TIED FOR CHAMPIONSHIP

Each Team Has Won Game In Series of Five Being Played

Bayard and Friendsville have each won one game for the baseball championship.

In the opening game of a series of five, Bayard defeated Friendsville 7 to 3 before a crowd estimated at over seven hundred persons. Cramer of Bayard, made four of his team's nine hits. Welch pitching for Friendsville, was batted out of the box in the fifth inning. While Friendsville rallied twice, once in the eighth and once in the ninth, they were unable to score more than one run in each inning.

Tuesday's game reversed the result by a score of nine to three in favor of Friendsville. Welch struck out seventeen men, made three assists, allowing only five balls batted out, two of which were fly outs, and the other three hits. Fisher, of Friendsville, who was unable to do much batting in Sunday's game, came through for a home run and a two-base hit, as did Glenn for two 2-base hits. Both games were played on Friendsville grounds.

The third and fourth games will be staged at Bayard, Friday, September 15, and Sunday, September 17. Should the series require a fifth game the play-off will be on the Friendsville diamond.

TO BUILD WINTER ABODES FOR CONSERVATION CAMPS

U. S. To Receive Bids for 18 Million Feet of Lumber for Construction of Barracks

WILL USE LOCAL LABOR

Bids to furnish 18,000,000 feet of lumber to provide winter quarters for the members of the Civilian Conservation Corps in the Third Corps area will be received on September 19 by Col. Patrick W. Guiney, corps area quartermaster. The four camps in Garrett county are included.

Plans for adequate winter housing of the forestry workers as well as for providing them with warm clothing and other winter necessities, have been virtually completed.

A standard type of barracks will be erected in each of the 154 camps in the area, which includes Maryland, Virginia, Pennsylvania and the District of Columbia. These barracks will be single story, tar-papered structures for the majority of camps. In the colder localitles they will be lined with building board. There will also be a heated bath house in each camp and insulation to protect the water pipes and heating stoves in each building.

Every camp will have six buildings for sleeping quarters; five of the structures to hold forty-two men each and the sixth to house the officers and forestry superintendents together with the medical dispensary and administration office.

To Use Local Labor

The buildings will be constructed by local labor under the supervision of camp commanders and an engineer officer. Fifty per cent of the lumber must be delivered within twenty-one days and the remainder within thirty days after the contract shall have been awarded.

Army ranges are replacing the old field ranges for cooking and stoves are being shipped to all camps for heating tents until the more permanent quarters are ready for occupancy.

Supplies of winter clothing are being assembled and will be ready for issue by next month.

ENROLLMENT INCREASES AT OAKLAND HI SCHOOL

Reaches 450 Mark With More Expected—No Post Graduates Yet

During the past week the enrollment at the Oaklkand High school has steadily increased. The number has reached the 450 mark with a possibility of 30 freshmen to enter if transportation facilities can be provided. A few buses are now filled to their capacity limit.

Last school year the Oakland High school ranked 13th among the 146 high schools of the state in the number of pupils per teacher. In general, only schools of 600 to 1000 pupils and over ranked higher in pupils per teacher. Oakland will rank much higher this year because for financial reasons no additional teachers were added.

According to the Teachers' Handbook for 1933-34, post graduates are not to be admitted if bus facilities will be overtaxed, or, if they are admitted, additional school equipment and supplies, such as furniture, seats, textbooks, materials of instruction, etc., are required. The county fiscal authorities have provided for only the minimum educational program for county's public school system.

Post graduates may not be admitted, at least not for two weeks yet. The following have requested admission as post graduates: Eleanor Baker, Nellie Holtschneider, Mary Sue Bell, Rebecca Browning, Lois Ross, Loring Steiding, George Stuck, Edith Smith, Elizabeth Browning, Martha Scott, Janice Graham, Louise Moon, Harold Bittinger, Wayne Guthrie, Maxine Paulie, Margaret Tillett.

Mrs. Ivalee Newell Hobden, concert violinist and teacher of violin, piano, and voice, will play before the student body at assembly on Friday at 2:45.

Also at this time ways and means of financing the school paper, athletics, and the library will be discussed. Every student may be required to contribute $1 each as a registration fee for the above purposes.

To the Honorable, the Judges of the Circuit Court for Garrett County, Maryland.

The Grand Jury for the September Term, nineteen hundred and thirty-three, of the Circuit Court for Garrett County, Maryland, having completed its services, respectfully submits its report.

During our term of service we have had before us and have examined sixty-six witnesses and upon the evidence presented sixty-three indictments were found.

Following the impressive charge delivered by His Honor, Judge Sloan, we have carefully considered all evidence brought before us and have returned indictments where the evidence warranted.

We desire to call attention to the effort that is being put forth by the officers of the law in apprehending and punishing the offenders agalnst the law.

We also wish to thank the State's Attorney. Walter W. Dawson, and the Clerk of the Circuit Court, Albert G. Ross, for the assistance given us during our deliberations.

In accordance with the requirements of our duties as Grand Jurors we have inspected the Court House, Jail and the records of the various county officials in their respective offices. With the exception of some minor repairs, which should be made to the Court House, we found the buildings in good condition.

The Sheriff's office has been very diligent in enforcing the laws of this county. The Jail is in excellent condition, clean, sanitary and well kept, and we wish to compliment Sheriff Haenftling for the interest he takes in his office.

While times does not permit to make a careful inspection of the records kept in the various offices, we find that same are in good condition and neatly kept by those in charge.

DRY FORCES VICTORIOUS IN FIGHT AGAINST BEER

Slight Majorities Cast Both Against Beer and Against Repeal of 18th Amendment

LIST OFFICIAL RETURNS

Garrett county maintained its standard in the dry column in Tuesday's election on the repeal and beer questions, but the majorities were slim. The official returns give 1767 against repeal and 1595 for repeal; 1791 against beer and 1701 for beer.

Only about fifty percent of the registered voters of the county availed themselves of their franchise. Early Wednesday morning the drys were claiming a majority of about 400 but this was steadily cut by estimates throughout the day until last night the wets were claiming a victory.

Official returns however show majorities of 172 and 90 for the drys. Districts expected to show up strong for the wets had either close contests or victories for the drys. Electioneering for wet votes was not carried on intensively as wet forces conceded themselves the victory weeks before the election. Neither was there a concentrated effort of the dry forces, although groups here and there were urging the voters to keep beer out of the county and to show their preference on the repeal question. That the State itself would go wet was a foregone conclusion.

The official tabulations released by the Board of Election Supervisors are as follows:

K. of P. Picnic Committee Is Planning New Entertainment

The executive committee of the Knights of Pythias picnic has been meeting twice weekly in preparing for the fourteenth annual picnic which will be held Saturday, September 23, in Helbig's Grove.

The commlttee is planning for new attractions, one of them being a community sing led by Miss Huff, but this one event is not a certainty as yet. The program as mapped out several weeks ago will be carried out, including a parade in the morning, band concerts, dancing, speaking and various amusements throughout the day and evening, with a fireworks display at ten o'clock. An automoblle will be given away during late afternoon of the picnic day.

The picnic was to have been held Labor Day, but was postponed due to the weather.

Mr. and Mrs. H. L. Bittner returned Thursday from N. Tonawanda, New York. While in the east they spent some time touring Canada.

Mrs. J. J. Ashby, Jr., is visiting in Charleston, West Va.

Miss Helen Leighton will leave tomorrow for Bowling Green, Ky., to resume her studies.

Mrs. Charles Welling returned to Cumberland after having been a visitor in Oakland for a week.

SOLOMON

LESSON TEXT—I Kings 3:1-11.
GOLDEN TEXT—Enter into his gates with thanksgiving, and into his courts with praise; be thankful unto him, and bless his name. Psalm 100:4.
PRIMARY TOPIC—In God's House.
JUNIOR TOPIC—A King Worshiping God.
INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOPIC—Learning to Worship God.
YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOPIC—The Value of a House of Worship.

I. Solomon Anointed King (I Kings 1:5-40).

The divine choice as to David's successor had not been known (v. 20). David is stirred to action by the combined appeals of Bathsheba and Nathan. At David's command the faithful three, Zadok, Nathan, and Benaiah, speedily anointed Solomon king.

II. Solomon's Acts to Establish His Kingdom (I Kings 1:41-2:46). He noted certain dangerous elements which if allowed to develop would weaken, if not destroy, his rule.

1. Adonijah placed under surveillance (vv. 41-53). Placing him on good behavior displayed both clemency and dignity on the part of Solomon. Adonijah fled to the altar, not to worship God, but to save his life. His repentance was not real. Solomon ordered his execution (2:13-25).

2. Abiathar removed from the priesthood (2:26, 27). He had joined Adonijah in his plot of usurpation.

3. Joah executed (2:28-35). Joah was a party to Adonijah's rebellion. Besides this, he had treacherously murdered his rivals in the army.

4. Shimei executed (2:36-46). Solomon first paroled him and confined him to Jerusalem, but when he broke his parole, had him executed.

III. The Divine Favor Upon Solomon (1 Kings 3:4-14).

1. God's gracious offer (vv. 4, 5). Solomon made a lavish sacrifice, showing that he had strong impulses toward the Lord. This was followed by the Lord's gracious offer.

2. Solomon's wise choice (vv. 6-9). He was keenly sensible of the difficulty and of the responsibility of his position.

3. God's unstinted gift to Solomon (vv. 10-14). Because Solomon appeared before the Lord in the proper attitude, God gave him more than he asked for.

IV. Solomon Building the Temple (1 Kings 5:1-8:66).

1. Preparation (5:1-18). He secured from King Hiram:

a. Wood for beams, ceilings, etc.
b. Stones for the great foundation.
c. Skilled workmen.

2. The erection of the temple (6:1-38).

a. Located on Mt. Moriah (II Chron. 3:1).

b. Dimensions. Ninety feet long; thirty feet wide; forty-five feet high—this on the assumption that the cubit was eighteen inches in length.

c. Its contents.

(1) The brazen alter. (2) The laver. (3) The golden candlesticks. (4) The cherubim.

3. The dedication of the temple (8:1-66). The dedicatory services consisted of:

a. Bringing up the ark (vv. 1-11). The ark was typical of Jesus Christ. God dwells among his people through Jesus Christ (John 1:14).

b. Solomon's address to the people (vv. 12-21). He pointed out to them that God had chosen David to be king, yet did not allow him to build the temple, but promised that his son should complete the work.

c. Solomon's dedicatory prayer (vv. 22-53). In his prayer, Solomon gratefully acknowledged God's goodness in the past, and plead that the promises made to his father should be verified. He asked that God's eyes might be continually open toward the temple, so that:

(1) In case of contention he would be their judge (vv. 31, 32).

(2) If smitten by the enemy, even though they had sinned, God would forgive and restore (vv. 33, 34).

(3) In famine, upon confession, God would forgive and send rain (vv. 35, 36).

(4) In pestilence and sickness, God would hear and forgive (vv. 37-40).

(5) In case of the coming of the foreigner, because of the news of God's favor toward Jerusalem, his prayer should be heard (vv. 41-43).

(6) In going out to battle, their cause should be maintained (vv. 44, 45).

(7) If taken captive, God would hear their prayers and restore them (vv. 46-53).

d. Solomon blesses the people (vv. 54-61).

e. Solomon offering sacrifices of thanksgiving (vv. 62-66).

WORTH REMEMBERING

SCOOP'S COLUMN

For those who have not visited Swallow Falls or Muddy Creek Falls within the past few months, there is indeed a rare treat in store for them.

These two noted show places of the county were always a beauty to behold but such an improvement has been made by the reforestation workers during their stay there that some special recognition should be given them.

None of the ruggedness of the country has disappeared but all dead underbrush has been cleared out, roads and paths made to wind through the forest, and there is an added grandeur there that was missing before. A path has been made from Muddy Creek Falls to Swallow Falls, along the river bank, a journey that was well-nigh impossible last year. Rock steps lead to places heretofore inaccessible and rustic bridges have been placed across Muddy Creek, above the Falls, and at the entrance to the reserve.

Rotten limbs have been trimmed from tall trees, giving them a more majestic appearance and throughout the entire forest there is a look of cleanliness that does not seem out of place with the wildness of the territory.

A visit will convince you. It's a great improvement to the natural beauty of the county.

Way Back When—

The other day G. W. Weitzell, one of the enlightened readers of this column brought in an illustrated guide to Oakland, per 1900, published by the Oakland club, an organization for social improvement and material advancement of the town.

The review was intercsting.

At that time Oakland was still 12 hours from New York, and was even advertised as 2800 feet above sea level.

Attorneys were W. A. Daily, Gilmor S. Hamill, E. L. Mitchell, J. T. Mitchell, Peddicord and Peddicord, J. C. Renninger, Norval Speelman, E. H. Sincell and Fred A. Thayer; Liller Brothers had the only barber shop; A. D. Naylor's blacksmith shop was on Liberty street, Brown and Davis' on Green street, opposite the City Rolling Mills.

For confectioneries there were Flowers', between Railroad and Alder streets, A. T. Matthews and J. M. Stanton. The same five churches were in existence. Dentists were Dr. R. F. Bartlett, Dr. Townshend and Dr. J. G. Robinson. Oakland Pharmacy and Sturgiss' Pharmacy were well established, and H. Weber and Sons had the most extensive greenhouses in Maryland and West Virginia.

D. E. Bolden had the furniture business and there was just one bank, The Garrett county bank, with a safe pronounced "burglar proof and mob proof."

General storcs included Lewis Gortner, O. Hart and Son, Thomas Little, Oak and Third street; John Felty, Jr., Alder street; H. C. Sincell and Company; S. L. Townshend and Son, Alder street; D. E. Offutt and Sons. J. W. Leathers and company held a monopoly on harness.

Hotels were the Central hotel, G. E. Boyer; West's hotel, The Browning hotel, 2 doors north of McComas' Sanitarium; Oakland Hotel Sanitarium, Commercial Hotel, Mrs. S. M. Miller; Glades hotel with John Cornelius; Hotel Bosley with G. L. Bosley, prop.

G. A. Shirer and J. M. Davis & Son were dealers in houseware; A. B. Gonder and Dr. E. H. Bartlett were justices of the peace with the latter's office in the Corrigan building.

M. Maroney & Son, Sweeney's Old Reliable and Martin's were the liverymen. Browning Brothers and Nelson chopped the meat; Mrs. M. L. Scott and Connell & Crane covered the ladies' heads; The Garrett Journal, Mountain Democrat and The Republican dispensed news; G. A. Fraley and George F. Loughridge were the only notaries.

Dr. M. C. Hinebaugh, Dr. John E. Legge, Dr. H. W. McComas, Dr. J. Lee McComas and Dr. W. H. Ravenscraft were on hand to keep one well, while Pritchard's Gallery on Third street and Grant & company were here to photograph you while you were in a healthy condition.

Oakland boasted four public halls, Little's hall, Oak and Third streets; Naylor's hall, Railroad street; Opera House auditorium, Second street; and Sturgiss Hall, Alder street. W. G. Hinebaugh on Railroad strect and John D. Taggert, Alder street, were the only restauranteurs.

Among the walks suggested were those to Crook Crest, Iron Spring, Bishop's Hill, Coddington's Riffles, Bucksbone, Hall's Hill, The Quarry, Lloyd's Hill, Totten's Hill, Mt. Lake Park and Monte Vista, with suggestions for drives to Allegheny Heights, Table Rock, Aurora, Swallow Falls, etc.

A typical walk was Lloyd's Hill—start from railroad station and enter hotel grounds, crossing bridge over Little Yough. Follow path to right to spring house. Cross stile, the road and the baseball grounds. Follow the path to left over brook and take path to right. Follow up hill and along ridge. View of railroad, Yough bridge and mountains can be had.

Frank R. Kent, political writer in the Baltimore Sun, thinks Senator Hatfield's blow-off of the NRA didn't amount to anything. While not assuming to have any better judgment than Mr. Kent, I believe it had its effect. The resignation of Johnson's assistant recently, Hatfield's defiance, and the failure of the coal industry to agree to a code, are just the beginning of the downfall of the NRA.

At least, that's my opinion, even if you didn't ask for it.

And what happened to the parade of the beer drinkers that was planned for late Tuesday night?

The other day we ran across the copy of an old song that was popular thirty years ago and we were surprised to find that it was about as mushy and sexy as those published in 1933.

The Republican is Garrett County's longest established newspaper.

NRA MEMBER U.S. CHEVROLET

"Proud and glad to do our part"

WITH President Roosevelt's acceptance of the NRA Antomobile Code, Chevrolet, the world's largest builder of motor cars, officially begins operations in accordance with the administration's recovery program.

Although the official code was signed only a few days ago, it will be of interest to Chevrolet's many friends to learn that the Chevrolet Motor Company started to carry out the spirit of today's recovery program over three years ago!

At that time, we put into operation a "share-the-work" plan, whereby our workmen cooperated in spreading the work to give more men jobs. By means of this plan, as well as by regulating hours of work per week to meet retail demand, and by building up parts stocks in lean seasons, it was possible to carry 33,000 men on our payroll through the depression. For eleven months of each year since 1929, we have kept our employment within 10 per cent of this average. We are justly proud of that record. We are also proud to say that Chevrolet workmen did not, at any time during the depression, become a burden on public welfare departments.

On August 1st of this year, Chevrolet announced a blanket wage increase as well as the adoption of a 7½-hour, 5-day week and the employment of 12,000 additional men. This wage increase was the second in the last 4 months, Chevrolet having been among the first to put a blanket wage increase into effect.

We feel that the President's recovery program deserves the whole-hearted support of every citizen and manufacturer in America. It is a bold, swift, courageous plan to start the ball rolling toward economic recovery. Its sincerity is unquestioned. Its objectives are admirable. And the direct, forceful steps the President and his associates are taking to make it a success, should stir the pride and admiration of every American.

We are proud and glad to do our part. And we are deeply grateful to the American people for the patronage that has enabled us to anticipate the present recovery program and to play our part today. After all, the immense number of men employed by Chevrolet is a direct result of the continued preference America has shown for Chevrolet.

The third annual reunion of the descendants of the Cornelius Broadwater families was held Sunday at Meadow Mountain Inn tourist camp, four miles east of Grantsville. The reunion was the largest held since organization of the clan in October, 1930.

The families of the sons of Cornelius Broadwater, who was born in England and came to America and settled in Loudon county, Virginia, have become widely scattered over the United States. He was a brother of Cornelius Broadwater.

Charles Broadwater, son of Charles, was a great friend of George Washington. He was one the first signers of the Articles of Confederation and was elected justice of the peace and delegate to the House of Burgesses of Virginia. He also was a vestryman in the famous old ehurch of Alexandria and owned a pew in the church.

ENCOURAGING SIGNS

Those who believe that we have passed the bottom of the valley of depression and are now on the way up again, draw a great deal of consolation from the fact that the apparent recovery from the depression is world wide, and is not therefore confined to our own country. While the stock market has gone up faster in the United States than in England and France due in part to the fact that it went down farther in the beginning, employment and building construction have improved more substantially in Great Britain than in the United States. France, of course, was never so hard hit by the depression as we were.

In view of these comparisons it is interesting to note, too, what is going on in Italy, where the improvement is quite pronounced. The Italians are facing the coming winter with much more confidence than they faced the last one a year ago. Unemployment has been decreased by eleven and a half per cent during the year, up to August 1, which is surely an encouraging performance. Public construction is being pushed and Mussolini's wheat program is meeting with success. In this respect it may be noted that the wheat program in Italy is entirely different from that of the United States. While we are seeking to decrease our surplus by cutting down production, Italy has been trying to stimulate production to the point where she will not have to import any wheat at all. And the campaign is about 100 per cent successful, and the country almost self sustaining, so far as wheat is concerned. This has increased employment and is a good thing for Italy but not so good for the wheat exporting countries like our own, who are losing a valuable customer.

Railroad travel has increased a great deal during the year in Italy, and the number of tourists entering the country has gained 55 per cent. Industrial activity has increased in the basic trades and the Associated Press, in a dispatch from Rome, concludes:

"Hardship was undoubtedly experienced last winter and hardship will be again experienced this winter, but Italians in general believe the crisis is past and that Mussolini has won his battle against the specter of idleness."

All of which is encouraging news not only to Italians but to the people of other lands. For coupled with the reports we get from other countries it seems to indicate that the depression is on the wane.

INCONSISTENCY AT CAPITAL

It is generally agreed that criticism at this time of Washington's attempt to administrate governmental affairs should be withheld, but constructive criticism is always in oder, especially when some brain storm of the administration undertakes to classify everyone who fails to bow to its dictates as "slackers" and "ten percenters" whom the public should boycott.

Within the past few days industry throughout the nation has been in an uproar over the new national administration's attempt to regiment labor and industry. What many had thought would be a diplomatic attempt by the administrators to help industry establish a cooperative system of operation which would bring about economic recovery on a stable basis, has terminated in veritable threats and demands by the self-constituted dictators who are apparently determined to gag industry and labor alike with rules and regulations so inconsistent that they must eventually disorganize our entire industrial system, the backbone of the nation, causing business in general to face a renewed breakdown, and in instances government ownership.

Things were being fairly well worked out among all elements concerned until the President's "blanket code" swamped the mails a few days ago. Under this blanket code which now also becomes the pattern for individual industrial codes, many businesses which have not yet been able to work out a code acceptable to the President's dictators have been in turmoil. These numerous businesses are "slackers," according to Donald Richberg, General Counsel for the National Recovery Administration, because they have delayed in signing the blanket code which would put them out of business because of the many complications in their methods of operation that cannot be changed so as to enable them to operate under the code.

Despite this, however, Mr. Richberg states that "if an employer cannot sign the agreement," because of inability to change union contracts and reorganize his business, "he cannot get the blue eagle," and he appeals to the public to boycott such a firm.

That part of the President's blanket code which makes it utterly impossible for hundreds of thousands of employers and especially small concerns to sign it are the sections that refers to the "hours, wages, and hours of operation." The code compels the firms that sign it to reduce the hours of their employes to thirty-five in mechanical departments, et cetera, and forty in clerical departments. At the same time it binds them "not to reduce the hours of operation of the business" to less than the hours of operation previously established. This forces a gap between the hours worked by the regular employes and the hours of operation of the business, which is supposed to give additional employment to others. But under the code, an employer also agrees "not to reduce the compensation for employment now in excess of the minimum * * * notwithstanding that the hours worked in such employment may be hereby reduced.

Under this section most concerns operating under union contracts which employ approximately five million union men, are helpless, since they cannot under the code reduce the hours of operation under which they have been working, or the weekly wage scales, while they must reduce the hours of their employes to thirty-five and forty. If under their union contracts, for instance, they are bound to pay $55 a week for forty-two hours, by signing the President's code they must pay $55 for thirty-five hours and keep their plants open forty-two hours, and under the union rule are forced to employ the additional labor to fill out the gap in hours at the union scale.

To thousands of struggling concerns it means "sign the code and close up business." or, as Mr. Richberg puts it, become "a slacker and a ten percenter" and thereby be subject to his boycott program. Most of the firms facing the "slacker" insult and the boycott of Mr. Richberg are those which have always paid two or three times and over the minimum wage of $14 as set by the administration as a fair living wage, and which have operated their plants on a forty-eight hour per week basis. These patriotic concerns are now evidently to become "slackers" in the eyes of the administration at Washington.

But while the administration is busy denouncing these concerns as "slackers and ten percenters" and is asking the public to boycott them, it continues to operate government departments and agencies on newly reduced wages and even longer hours than before, and still allows government contractors to work their men long hours, at old wages. The office forces handling the dictatorial act and working in other branches of the government service which are trying to force industry to bow to their demands, are toiling late into the night. Of course, this is because the government cannot operate otherwise for it must balance its budget, but many small industries are likewise forced to balance their budget or lock up and throw more men out of employment. No one would think of calling these patriotic government servants or the administrators of these bureaus "slackers."

The public will doubtless go slowly in following such brain explosions as those of Mr. Richberg and several others of the administration whose new power has no doubt gone to their heads, who are determined to force the American people to jump through blindly in response to their dictates.

MR. WALLACE IS WRONG

Henry A. Wallace, Secretary of Agriculture, appeals to the nation to change from its forefathers' "spirit of rugged individualism" to one of "genuine concern for your neighbor." And the Secretary asserts that if we cannot "attain this broader view, our material wealth will only intensify the inevitable crash."

Delivered with oratorical fervor, the words of the Secretary doubtless had a high and lofty sound to his immediate auditors. But in cold type they are the reverse of inspiring. Heaven knows this land has faults, shortcomings and tendencies that endanger its future in a most serious way. But continuance of the "rugged individualism" of the fathers of the republic certainly is not among them.

Furthermore, there is, as a matter of practice, no clash whatever between such individualism and proper concern for one's neighbor. Intelligent individualism compels concern for the welfare of others and the whole history of the people of the United States has been featured by generosity in impulse and practice and by fidelity to the spirit of fair play and helpfulness.

Indeed the genuineness of the concern of Americans for their neighbors has been an outstanding characteristic of the breed in both their domestic and international relationships, and the extent to which it has been carried in the latter field in recent years has added considerably to the present economic troubles.

When Mr. Wallace urges desertion of American individualism, he is not advocating a policy of progress and strength; he is urging a policy of weakness and surrender.

Individuals working together in voluntary and free cooperation built this country. Its future as a free land depends upon the ability of its people to continue along those lines as far as is at all possible amid the complexities a dense population and an intricate civilization create. If they cannot do so, the republic as such is doomed as every other republic in history has been doomed as soon as courageous, enlightened and rugged individualism has lost its grip.

Surrender of that individualism today in favor of some form of communistic or Fascist substitute would mean the failure and utter collapse of the great experiment in freedom started by our forefathers in 1776. And all the euphemisms about "cooperation" and concern for one's neighbor that be invented by Mr. Wallace or by anybody else, will not alter that fact.

Such a surrender will mean an end of personal freedom and rights, it will mean an end of the sovereignty of the 48 states, it will mean the submersion of Congress, it will mean the commencement of socialistic or imperialistic autocracy and the decadence of American manhood and citizenship.

Added Relief of $1,400,000 Is Granted Maryland

Maryland has received a $1,400,000 emergency relief grant from the Federal Government, Harry Greenstein, State relief administrator, has announced.

Added to the $1,390,376 previously received, the grant brought the relief allocation for the State from Federal funds up to $2,790,376, all of which has been received since the end of June.

To Help Unemployed

Mr. Greenstein estimated that the grant would be sufficient to maintain the State's unemployed for seven weeks. Approximately $200,000 is being expended weekly for relief in Baltimore and the twelve counties receiving Federal aid.

This grant comes out of a fund that is being distributed at the discretion of the Federal Relief administrator.

She attended an all-day meeting of relief workers in Baltimore on Wednesday and will return to Oakland probably today or tomorrow. HEALTH WORK TO BE DONE IN RURAL SCHOOL AREAS

First Meeting to be Held at the Broadford School, Sept. 20

Various rural schools of the county are to be visited by members of the county health department for health work which needs to be done, according to Dr. Eugene C. Peck, health officer.

At the request of J. Timothy Moon, teacher of the Broadford school near Deer Park, Dr. Peck and Mrs. Samuel Cole, health nurse, will be at the school on Wednesday afternoon, September 20 to do work. There are several children who need diphtheria preventative inoculation, Dr Peck stated, and health examinations and vaccinations of any children who need it will be done at that time, it was said.

Parents and neighbors of the children in the school are requested to bring any children under school age to the school so that after the dismissal of the regular session all children or grown people in the neighborhood may have the services of the health officer.

"No ill persons will be treated," Dr. Peck said, "as it is not the function of the health department to care for illness, even among poor people. There is a large amount of work which should be done for the prevention of illness among all people of the county and this will occupy the whole time of the health officer and the nurses of the department."

Another health afternoon has been arranged at the Rich Hill school for Thursday afternoon, September 21, at which time the services of the health department will be available. It is planned to visit other rural schools for this same type of work.

A tonsil clinic was held yesterday in the office of Dr. A. K. Fidler, Kitzmiller, when approximately 35 children had their tonsils removed by Dr. Sharrett, of Cumberland. Arrangements for the clinic were made last week.

SEPTEMBER CIRCUIT COURT CONVENED ON MONDAY

call to the attention of the grand jury certain offenses which call for particular investigation.

"You are required by law to investigate any charges of abortion. While this is a secret sort of offense, which seldom comes to public attention, yet when it does the consequences are always serious and therefore I charge you that if any such offenses, or if information as to the commission of such offense come to your attention that you make full and close investigation as to the guilty party or parties.

"You are required to examine the books and accounts of the county treasurer. While you do not have time to make a detailed investigation and audit of such books, you should make such investigation as to satisfy yourselves that the books are being kept properly and that the balances which the books indicate that the treasurer should have on hand are actually in his hands and available for the uses of the county.

"There is also a law against the sale of narcotics which we are required to call to your attention. This is another offense committed in secret and of which there may be no public knowledge, yet in cases of which the grand jury may have or may obtain knowledge as to its commission, I charge you that it is your duty to investigate as fully as may be possible and to return indictments wherever the evidence may warrant, in order that the parties guilty of such offense may be brought to trial.

The carrying of concealed weapons, while not a matter required to be brought to your attention, is a very serious offense, the consequences of violations of which law lead to some of the most serious violations of law which come before this Court. This law seems to be regarded more or less lightly by citizens of the county and especially by those who are in the habit of violating the law, and yet if this offense could be prevented the number of crimes of violence could be largely diminished, and the only way to accomplish this result is by the arrest and punishment of those who are in the habit of carrying weapons, and thus to discourage the custom of carrying upon the person concealed deadly weapons.

"While we are not required by law, it has always been the custom of this Court to call to your attention the law governing the sale of intoxicating liquors. As you are well aware, the so-called Volstead Act and the National Prohibition law has been amended so as to allow the sale of beer containing not more than three and two-tenths percent of alcohol by weight and not more than four per cent of alcohol by volume. This act has no effect whatever on the local law of Garrett county and prosecutions for violatins of that act are still perfectly proper. If, as is generally anticipated, the Eighteenth Amendment to the United States Constitution shall be repealed, within a short time thereafter it will restore to the states such liquor laws as they now have on their statute books, and the only liquor law which will then affect Garrett county is the local option law which has been rigidly enforced ever since its passage by the Legislature, under which law the sale of beer containing not more than three and two-tenths per cent of alcohal by volume and not more than four per cent of alcohol by weight shall be illegal in this county. If the referendum touching that law should result in a vote in favor of the sale of beer, then the sale of beer containing not more than 3.2 per cent by volume, or not more than 4 per cent of alcohol by volume will be legal in this county. If that question should fail of adoption, however, it would not affect the local option law in this county and the law would still declare improper and make criminal the sale of beer of such alcoholic content, so that the sale thereafter of beer or 'hard liquors,' as they are sometimes called, would not under any circumstances be legal in this county unless the local option law is repealed as a result of the forthcoming referendum vote.

"In the course of your investigation it is necessary for the grand jury to make an inspection of the Court House and Jail. You will therefore comply with this requirement, make an investigation of the Court House and Jail buildings and report to this Court your findings in reference thereto.

"It is desirable that you be as expeditious as possible in your labors, but do not under any circumstances sacrifice thoroughness for speed, as the investigations of the grand jury constitute one of the most important functions of government and it is necessary that they may be thorough in their scope.

"It is also necessary and most important that you keep secret everything that is said or done in the grand jury room. Under no circumstances should any of your members say anything to anyone as to anything that occurs during your deliberations, nor shall you permit anyone to ask questions as to anything that goes on in the grand jury room. If anyone should attempt to secure information from any of your members as to what is being done in the grand jury, it is your duty to notify the Court of such attempt."

NATIONAL AFFAIRS

By FRANK P. LITSCHERT

In these hot September days when everyone is struggling with a code and trying to help put over the N. R. A. program regardless of his personal or political convictions, it is difficult to realize that another political campaign just around the corner. Yet this is exactly the case. In a few short months the nominations for Congress, for state offices and for county positions will be in full blast all over the country. Conventions and primaries will be held on every hand, depending on the laws of the state in which the selections are being made. And then the biennial campaign will be on once more—the one which always comes at the half-way point in every national administration. It seems only yesterday that President Roosevelt took office and and issued his famous edict temporarily closing the banks. Yet here we are almost on the verge of another political campaign.

Up to this time the Republicans at Washington have been quiescent. Midsummer when people who have the money to spend are away on vacations, is never regarded as a very good time for politics. But this year has been less political than ever. Following the big landslide last fall the Republicans very properly decided to give the new administration a chance to see what it could do. There has been plenty of action. Just now it is all going to turn out remains to be seen. The N. R. A. is the final number in the program, and the success or failure of the full program depends in large measure on the success or failure of this drive. The Republicans have "done their bit" just as they did in war time, and if the program does not meet the full measure of success that its sponsors expect, certainly the blame cannot be placed on the lack of political cooperation.

Both those who believe in it and those who are dubious say that within the next few weeks the N. R. A. program will either prove or disprove of itself. If it is a success and prosperity comes back to us the Democrats will be in good shape for the campaign of 1934, and the Republicans will be handicapped. But If the program does not come up to expectations, and if Europe is ahead of us in pulling out of the depression, then it is natural to believe that the Republicans will have a great deal to say in the next campaign and that they will make serious inroads on the strength of the party in power. Only time can tell the story.

Of course it is only natural to expect that the Democratic majority in Congress will be trimmed some in the elections next year. Mr. Roosevelt rode into the Presidency on a landslide, and a victory of such proportions as he achieved usually brings into power congressmen of the victorious party who could not expect to win under normal conditions. The next congressional election then brings a reaction and many of these "freak" congressmen go down before the assaults of the party which usually controls their district.

That the Democrats themselves do not expect to hold the gains they made in 1932 is indicated by many of the dispatches being sent out of Washington by the political correspondents—dispatches going to Democratic as well as Republican newspapers. For example, Kirke Simpson, Washington correspondent of the politically neutral Associated Press, recently wrote that the Democratic congressmen who went back home have learned that the going is not going to be any too good next year at best, and that it is going to be more difficult to get re-elected in 1934 than would have been thought possible a few months ago. Mr. Simpson whimsically adds: "The Democratic National Committee is getting a lot of inquiries as to what help it is going to give them next year. The answers received are described as diplomatic, not to say vague."

The quietude of the Republicans is not to be regarded entirely as somnolence. They are busy now with codes and other business affairs, but they are keeping an eye to windward. They can be depended on to put up a real battle when the times comes. Whether it will be successful depends a great deal on how successful a bird is the Blue Eagle within the next few months.

GRANTSVILLE

Winterberg—Woodard

A wedding of interest to the people of this community took place Saturday evening, September 2, at Rutger's University Chapel, New Brunswick, N. J., when Miss Rachel Woodard of that city, daughter of Mrs. Charles Andrus, Pawlet, Vermont, became the bride of Mr. Samuel Henry Winterberg, eldest son of Mr. William Winterberg, of Grantsville.

The ringe ceremony was performed by Rev. Sehenefelt, of the First M. E. church of New Brunswick. The bride was given in marriage by her cousin, Mr. Milford Jones, of New York City.

As the bridal party entered the chapel Mr. Rolph, of New Brunswick, played Lohengrin's Wedding March. After the ceremony he played Mendelsohn's Recessional as they retired from the chapel to go to their apartment at 212 Baldwin St., where a reception was held.

The bride wore a white satin gown with a tulle veil and white shoes. She carried a shower bouquet of white roses and lilies of the valley and was attended by her sister, Miss Dimoretta Woodard, of Westfield, N. J., who was attired in a pale blue lace dress with blue satin turban, white gloves and shoes and carried a shower bouquet of pink roses. The groom and his best man, Mr. Harold Robertson, Columbus, O., wore tuxedo suits.

Immediately after the reception the couple left by automobile for Washington, D. C., and the caverns of Virginia, where they spent a week. The bride's going away suit was a blue crepe ensemble with accessories to match and white gloves.

Mr. and Mrs. Winterberg arrived in Grantsville Sunday night to spend a week with the groom's father and Miss Tena Winterberg, the groom's aunt. They will be at home to their friends, 212 Baldwin St., New Brunswick, N. J.

The bride is a graduate of Pratt Institute of Brooklyn, N. Y., as hospital dietitian. She has been dietitian in Middlesex General Hospital for the past four years.

Mr. Winterberg is a graduate of Grantsville high school and has received his Bachelor of Science and Master of Science degrees from the University of Maryland. He is also a graduate of the New Jersey Agricultural Experiment Station where he has been studying for the past three years.

Among those who attended the wedding were Miss Tena Winterberg and Mr. William Winterberg, of Grantsville; Mr. and Mrs. George Barbarow and daughter, of Morristown, N. J., and a number of relatives of the bride from points in New England.

OUR THINKING LAGS

If it took centuries for mankind to appreciate the desirability of organizing into carefully bordered countries, certainly it will take many years before there can be general realization of the fact that prosperity depends upon the weal of neighbors and that national existence can be safeguarded better by friendship and cooperation than by strife and power.

Science has quietly gone ahead and before our very eyes has melted down old barriers to intercourse, as witness the cable, the radio, the talking motion pictures and ocean transportation. The world hes become an economic unti, with the ups and downs of crops and industrial production in one country affecting prices in every other land. In short, national isolation has become obsolete. Man's thinking must keep pace with material progress.

DANGEROUS BACKFIRE

The N. R. A. program is a daring and brilliant experiment. Furthermore, it is the LAW, and all good citizens will support it in every way possible. However, there may be a great temptation in some trades and industries to try to take selfish advantage of the opportunities presented.

One of the smaller but very important industries that has submitted a code for approval is that of the publishers of school textbooks. We have just read this eode, and we see several imprints of what looks like the cloven hoof.

It appears that the schoolbook publishers have had two main aims in formulating this eode: first, to get the right to raise prices, even where books are already under state contract for a period of years at a stipulated price; perhaps all the publishers are united on this; second, it appears on reading this code that one group, or several groups, of these publishers may be trying to put something over on another group or groups.

Certainly the public schools do not stand to profit from either of the above objectives. We can see no present justification for publishers wanting to raise prices when they have entered into a sworn contract with a state, and certainly such state and all the citizens thereof should raise a mighty protest if this is attempted, or even if it is formulated in a eode. The states entered into these contracts with the publishers in good faith, and, as in all such contracts, both parties take a gamble as to falling prices or as to rising prices in the future.

It is cleared, but a few maple trees are still standing thereon. It is also improved by a small stable and another small building and adjoins the Rose D. Morgart property. The second above mentioned lot adjoins the first on the east and extends from the river and railroad up against the side of the hill. Pickles and Relishes Help Out When Winter Comes

At this pickle-making time of year it is well to remember, says the Bureau of Home Economics of the U. S. Department of Agriculture, that if pickles are not exactly real food, they go far toward making real food more interesting. During the winter months if foods and food ideas run short in variety, pickles will help considerably by giving a different tang to the same old bill of fare. So make your pickles while you may of peaches, pears, watermelon rind, green pickles, such as whole pickled peaches, crab apples, or pears, cooked in a spicy, sweet-sour syrup.

Then there are quick-process pickles made from vegetables salted down over-night and combined with spices and vinegar the next day without cooking. Next are the brined pickles, also called fermented pickles, because they go through a curing process lasting from two weeks to two months. Last are the relishes, such as tomato catsup, chili sauce and chutneys made from fruits or vegetables spiced and cooked down to a sauce. Whatever the type, the purpose of pickling is to get a tart flavor through the vegetable or fruit; to keep or develop attractive color; and to give crispness, especially to vegctable pickles. Use a blend to high quality spices. The flavor continues to come out of spices as the pickles stand, so do not use too much spice. In general, pickles keep better if sealed airtight for storage. Sometimes they will keep satisfactorily in covered jars in a cold place, but there is danger of spoilage.

Pickled Peaches

Eight pounds peaches, 4 pounds sugar, 2 quarts vinegar, 8 two-inch pcs. stick cinnamon, cloves. Select firm, white peaches, preferably clingstones. Wash them well, remove the thin skin with a sharp knife and stick two claves into each peach. Cook the vinegar, cinnamon and sugar together for 10 minutes, or until the sirup is fairly thick. Add the peaches, cook them gently until tender, but not broken, and let stand in the sirup overnight. In the morning drain the sirup from the peaches and pack the fruit into sterilzed jars. Boil the sirup rapidly until thick and pour over the peaches in the jars. Seal, label and store in a cool place. Allow the pickled peaches to stand several weeks to develop flavor before serving.

Watermelon Pickle

Four pounds watermelon rind, limewater made with two quarts cold water and 10 gramms, or two tablespoons lime, 2 quarts vinegar, 1 pint water, 4 1-2 pounds granulated sugar, 2 tablespoons whole allspice, 2 tablespoons whole cloves, 10 2-inch pieces stick cinnamon.

Select rind from a firm, not overripe melon and before weighing trim off the green skin and pink flesh. Cut in inch cubes and soak for 2½ hours in the limewater. Drain, cover with fresh water and cook for 1 1-2 hours or until tender, and add more water as it boils off. Let stand overnight in this same water and next morning drain. Bring to the boiling point the vinegar, 1 pint of water, the sugar and the spices tied loosely in cheesecloth. Add the drained watermelon and boil gently for two hours, or until the sirup is fairly thick. Remove the spicebag, pack the watermelon pickle in sterilized glass jars, seal airtight and store in a cool place.

Cucumber and Onion Rings

One peck small cucumbers, 2 qts. small white onions, 1 cup salt, vinegar, 1 cup mustard seed, 2 tablespoons celery seed, 2 tablespoons peppercorns.

Slice the cucumbers and onions about 1-4 inch thick, pack in a crock in layers with salt sprinkled between and let stand overnight. In the morning drain in a cheesecloth bag and press out all the juice possible. Taste before adding the vinegar and if too salty rinse in cold water. Measure the onions and cucumbers, take half as much vinegar, heat to the boiling point, add the spices and pour over the vegetables. Pack at once in sterilized glass jars, seal and store in a cool place.

THIS representation of what the world will offer the wheat farmer for his wheat shows clearly the relationship hetweea supply and price. Since 1928, whea the world supplies of wheat first became burdensome the priee has been low for the most part. The pictures at the top of the chart show that when the supply is low, the world will pay a good price for wheat, but when supplies are too hig, the world won't pay as much. As the supplies (showa hy the hiack bars) have climbed, the price (represented hy the shaded parts) haa sunk lower. The wheat administration seeks to hring the wheat supply of the Ualted States into line with demand hy reducing acreage, aad thus to make the price aearer parity, that is, the point at which the return from a hushel of wheat will huy as much as it did in the pre-war period, 1909-1914. The 1933 crop year is not far enough advanced to show definitely what prices will be.

"The Word of Our God Shall Stand Forever"

MICAH

In the little town of Moresha, on the Philistine border, 30 miles southwest of Jerusalem, about 740 B. C., Micah was born. The period of his preaching covers the reign of Jotham, Ahaz and Hezekiah. He was contemporary with Isaiah, also part time with Hosea.

In thc early part of his ministry he predicted the fall of Samaria, the Northen capital, whieh he lived to see. This was the great historic event of his day.

Isaiah and Micah are a striking example of the vanity of the instruments which God chooses for communicating His message and accomplishing His purposes. But, remarkable as are the differences between them, the unity of their aims and teaching is no less remarkable. It bears witness to the identity of the source from which their inspiration sprang. Isaiah was the counsellor and friend of kinds, intimate with priests and nobles, well acquainted with the various parties of statesmen in Judah. His home was at Jerusalem, the center of national life. Micah was a simple countryman, born of obscure parentage, in an otherwise unknown village. His prophecy shows that he was in closest touch and sympathy with the class of yeoman whose wrongs he so graphically describes, and to which, in all probability, like Amos, he belonged.

One of the beautiful privilcges vouchsafed to this humble prophet was the prediction of Bethlehem as the birthplace of One who would come out of eternity and rule and bless all nations, and fulfill the promise made to Abraham.

To thc countryman, the sins of the nation seemed to be concentrated in the capitals. Samaria and Jerusalem are marked out for inevitable destruction. Failure of the nation to meet the requirements of social morality and religious duty are the reasons for this destruction. His rural background is evident in the striking simile employed to describe the coming doom: "Zion shall be ploughed as a field, and Jerusalem shall become heaps of ruin, and the mountain of the house as the high places of the forest." Micah's message is primarily a message of judgment. Jehovah cometh forth out of His place amid awful convulsions of nature, melting mountains and valleys cleaving like wax, waters poured down a steep place, carrying all before their torrential rush.

Selfish acquisition of wealth is the fundamental cause of the divine wrath. The strong covet fields, and seize them; and take them away. They oppress a man and his house. The courts also join in this iniquitous oppression of the poor, the judges being equally ready to do a friendly turn for a powerful neighbor. "They set both hands to evil to do it" thoroughly. The prince asketh, and the judge giveth judgment for a reward, and the great man, he uttereth the mischief of his soul and they weave it together! Justice is blighted. No one can be trusted. A man's enemies are those of his own house.

Where can a remedy be found? Abundant sacrifices, even thousands of rams, or ten thousands of rivers of oil will not suffice. Nor will the offering of the first-born remove the burden of their gullt. Micah gives the only answer in Chapter 6:8: "He hath showed thee, O man, what is good: and what doth the Lord require of thee, but to do justly, and to love mercy, and to walk humbly with thy God." A simple formula for bringing in the Kingdom of God, but Oh, how difficult to practice!

JONAH.

Jonah's prophecy marks a departure in the method of divine revelation. It is more than a hint to Israel, who had refused to have Jehovah as their God, that he was interested in other nations. Jonah's mission to Ninevah, the capital of Assyria—soon to become the scourge of Israel—lifted the God of Israel to a position far above that of a tribal deity, and pointed to his exalted place as the God of all nations, kindreds, peoples and tongues. There are other striking incidents of this broad teaching of Jehovah's universal dominion over human hearts, as that of Elijah sent to the Sidonian woman and Elisha to Naaman the Syrian. All of them are indications to the Jews of God's interest in others besides themselves.

Jonah lived in the reign of Jeroboam II, 800-760 B. C. Hc was a native of Gathhepher, a town about two miles northeast of Nazareth. Jonah was contemporary with Amos, and may have been one of the young students in Elisha's school of the prophets.

Ninevah is spoken of as a great city, as indeed it was for that day. Its central portion was approximately three miles long and a mile and a half wide. Greater Ninevah was about 60 miles in circumference.

The prophecy begins thus: "Now the word of the Lord came to Jonah the son of Amittai, saying, Arise, go to Ninevah, that great city, and cry against it: for their wickedness is come up before me." Jonah, however, had no relish for this task, and instead of obeying the word of the Lord he rose up and fled to Tarshish, by ship from the seaport of Joppa. It is amazing that a prophet should imagine that flight in any direction could remove him from the presence of the Lord. David said in one of his Psalms: "Whither shall I go from thy spirit, or whither shall I flee from thy presence? If I ascend to heaven, thou are there; if I make my bed in hell, behold thou are there. If I take the wings of the morning and dwell in the uttermost parts of the sea, even there shall thy hand lead me and thy right hand shall hold me. If I say, surely the darkness shall cover me, even the night shall be light about me. Yea, the darkness hideth not from this; but the night shineth as the day: the darkness and the light are both alike to thee."

So found Jonah, to his great discomfiture. Strange as it may seem, and yet many truly religious persons have inexplicable and irreconsilable notions about divine love and mercy—Jonah's reason for not wishing to be a missionary to Ninevah was that he was sure they would repent, and God would promptly forgive them and restore them to his favor.

Jehovah ralsed a mighty storm, the superstitious sailors believed that the wrath of God was being poured upon their devoted ship, and being confirmed in this convicition cast lots to determine the guilty person for whose sake the storm had visited them. The lot fell upon Jonah. He was cast into the sea, but was miraculously preserved in the belly of a great fish. When after three days the fish disgorged Jonah, he obediently fulfilled his mission to Niaevah, and saw, as he had anticipated, their repentance and salvation.

God reproved Jonah's hardness of heart by the type of a gourd, which matured and was immediately blasted, to Jonah's great discomfort and even anger. Then said the Lord: "Thou hast had pity on the gourd, should I not spare Ninevah, wherein are 120,000 persons that cannot discern between the right and left hands?" Love never faileth!

Here and There in the Counties

From recent reports of the county health officers to Dr. R. H. Riley, Director of the State Department of Health, the following is gleaned:

Young Children Protected Against Smallpox and Diphtheria—It is estimated that about 250 children from Calvert county will enter school this year. Practically all of them have been vaccinated against smallpox. They have also been immunized against diphtheria.

Domestic Animals as Carriers of Disease?—In connection with the ten cases of Rocky Mountain spotted fever (tick-bite fever) that were reported from Carroll county in May and June, it is interesting to note that the dog belonging to one of the families in which the disease occurred, was sick before the disease developed in the household; that six of the eight tame rabbits belonging to another family died just before or during the presence of the disease in the family; and that the pet cat of a third family was sick prior to the development of the disease in that household. The ten cases of tick-bite fever reported from this county occurred in four families who lived on adjoining properties. There was no domestic animals at the home of the fourth family, but a number of rats were observed on the premises. Of the ten cases, seven were of marked severity. Two of the patients died.

Protection of Young Children Against Diphtheria—A scries of clinics for the immunization of children from six months to six years old—the age group which takes the heaviest toll of sickness and deaths—from thjs disease, was started in the late spring in Talbot county and continued thruout the summer.

Child Health Conferences—Among the child health conferences for babies and children under school age, held in Howard county during the summer, was one which took place in the offices of one of the Howard county doctors. The examinations were made by the Chief of the Bureau of Child Hygiene. The conference was of special interest because it was the first in this county held in a physician's office. Twenty-five children were brought in for examination and the mothers who attended seemed greatly interested. Every effort was made to impress upon them the importance of regular medical supervision for their children. It is hoped that similar conferences can be arranged in the practice of other physicians in the county.

60 MEN CAME TO THIS FARMER'S AID! . . .
"There's a fire at Mr. Flatter's farm," called the telephone operator hurriedly. She rang up the neighboring farms and soon 60 men were fighting the flames.
A neighbor discovered the fire while the family was away. She notified the operator who located Mr. Flatter while calling other farmers. This quick work saved the home and other farm buildings.

MT. LAKE PARK

The following is not given in any spirit of criticism or complaint, but with the consciousness that there are many complex questions constantly arising in the administration of a counuty's affairs, of which the average citizen knows little. However, we give the gist of a discussion as we heard it on Tuesday.

The question arose whether Mountain Lake Park, all things considered, received her due share of attention from the different agencies operating in the county. Some one suggested that many dismissed the Park with a shrug of the shoulders as though it was but a fly speck on the map of Garrett county, while, on the other hand, the truth is that Mountain Lake Park is the second largest town in the county on the basis of real estate assessed for taxation. This was news to us, but the party produced figures that showed the assessable taxable real estate in the several towns of the county as follows:

Oakland, $1,529,958; Mountain Lake Park, $440,660; Kitzmiller, $330,000; Friendsville, $320,805; Grantsville, $250,000; Deer Park, $185,700; Loch Lynn Heights, $167,976, and Accident, $98,490. It was further stated that the total assessed real estate of the county was approximately $16,523,623, and that, therefore, Mountain Lake Park had about three per cent of the county's assessable real estate.

Then as to the matter of populuation. Combining the permanent and summer population (eliminating the transient and week-end guests in the hotels and boarding houses) it was further suggested that Mountain Lake Park's population equaled that of Oakland. Of course this latter was only an estimate and may be wrong. But it is close.

There can be no question, we take it, that a source of revenue (not taking into consideration the agricultural, mining and canning industries) the Park stands first. And then, the Mt. Airy Canning Company is located at Loch Lynn, and while there are two separate corporations, only the railroad tracks divide the two towns and from the standpoint of this discussion Mountain Lake Park and Loch Lynn should be considered as one corporate entity. We thought the above information was interesting and perhaps suggestive.

Crystal Spring and its possibilities, has been frequently mentoned in this column. We are still of the opinion that it could be made valauble to the Park.

We heard the story of the discovery of the spring the other day. It seems that a erowd of boys started out on a journey of discovery, as boys will, possibly visualizing an encounter with red skins or pirates. Arriving at what is now known as Crystal Spring they stopped and began digging with sticks in the sandy loam. Presently water began to flow and as the stick with which they were digging penetrated the soil, the flow of water increased until it was possibly as thick as an average size man's wrist. They then built a rough wall around it and a dam to collect the water.

Roland Bolgiano, a brother of the late Charles J. Bolgiano, was the boy that did the digging and discovered the spring, some forty-eight years ago. Since that time the spot has been visited by thousands of people from many parts of the eastern area of the United States and it is, perhaps, the one spot that remains in their memories.

A friend of ours just told us a good depression story, with a moral. Two toads fell into a jar of cream. After repeated efforts to climb up the slick sides of the jar to safety, they finally sank to the bottom and one of them disparingly remarked that it was no use—they were doomed to death; that it was foolish to make further effort. But his companion was made of sterner stuff. He kept trying—klcking, swimming, going this way and that, trying new ways to keep his head above the water—cream in this case. Finally, after much hard work and effort, he churned up a ball of butter, which with renewed effort got bigger and bigger, until finally the persistent frog climbed up on top and hopped safely to the ground.

DAM FOR FLOOD CONTROL MAY BE BUILT ON "YOUGH"

Would Mean Complete Evacuation of Town of Confluence

A total of $4,100,000 is the estimated outlay that will be required in the construction of a dam in the Youghiogheny River at Confluence in the flood control movement of the Flood Commission of Pittsburgh.

Of this sum, $762,000 would be utilized for lands and buildings which would be covered by the water which would result in the total evacuation of the borough of Confluence. A total of $2,965,000 is estimated for actual construction cost, while $373,000 would be set aside for contingencies. The cost given are adjusted figures from estimates of the U. S. Army corps of engineers.

The dam would be 105 feet in height and 1,110 feet long, providing 2,620 acres of reservoir area, the erest of which would have an elevation of 1,420 feet above sea level. This would back water into Garrett county, affecting Guard, Selbysport, and possibly Friendsville to some extent.

The hydraulic features of the reservoir include a storage capacity of 122,000 acre feet, with a drainage area of 431 square miles.

The flood commission is recommending the construction of 10 dams at an estimated cost of $57,428,000 under the public works provisions of the National Recovery Act. Because it would mean complete evacuation of Confluence, the Army engineers are said not to be in favor of embracing the Youghiogheny River project Ineluded in the Commission's recommendations.

PROSPECTS FOR FALL

There has been a great deal of discussion, and naturally so, of the prospects of the success of the N. R. A. campaign. Everywhere the President's program has had the loyal backing of the people regardless of their politieal or economic beliefs as to the chances of the program for failure or success.

Labor day has now come and gone, and there can be little question that we will soon know just how quickly the administration's relief program is to help business. Labor Day usually marks the division points on the calendar between summer dullness and autumn revival. Whether such revival is to come this fall, and whether it will be greater than usual, thus proving the wisdom and virtue of the N. R. A. plan, remains to be seen.

Higher prices have been put into effect and it will now quickly be seen whether these will be followed by more widespread employment and greater purchasing. Certainly higher wages and more widespread employmuet must come pretty quickly if the higher prices are to stand the test of public attention.

August has been a comparatively dull month. While business indices ran ahead of August, 1932, they did not run so far ahead as was the case in June and July. The percentage increase in carloadings and electric power production over the figures of 1932 were not as great at the end of August as they were at the beginning of the month. This means that the pickup in August this year was not so rapid on a percentage basis as it was in August a year ago. It is to be remembered, of course, that in 1932 the pickup in July and August started from a much lower level than was the case this year. The steel industry at the end of August this year, however, was operating at 47 per cent capacity as compared with 13 per cent a year ago. This is indeed a very good showing. Although steel production slumped ten points in August this year, this was undoubtedly due in part to the usual midsummer slump in business. The uncertainty over regulations and the future prices incident to the putting into effect of the various codes unde rthe new N. R. A. plan, undoubtedly slowed up buying too. This, the sponsors of the program believe, is only temporary.

At any rate, September and October will be critical months for the new recovery program. Every American hopes that by the time Thanksgiving rolls around it will have proved itself. Certain it is that we will know by the end of the year just what we can expect from government-managed recovery.

Religious Education Council Holds Annual Convention

The annual convention of the Garrett County Council of Religious Education was held Sunday with the morning service in the Lutheran church and the afternoon and evening services in the Methodist church.

E. church, of Fairmont, spoke in the afternoon. Dr. Sanderson made a hurried survey of the schools of the county. Prof. O. P. Jones reported on the rallies and conferences held last year, and Rev. W. B. Brock closed the afternoon session.

E. R. Jones presided at the evening service with Rev. W. S. Patterson conducting devotions. Another adult rally, four training classes and a combined youth and children's conference are planned during the coming year. Officers re-elected were, O. P. Jones, Kitzmiller, president; Mrs. Nay Smith, Kitzmiller, secretary; E. Ray Jones, Oakland, director of finance.

This Letter Will Bring Joy To Fat Folks and NEURITIS SUFFERERS

"Dear Sirs: I was so crippled with neuritis all down left side of my head and arm and both knees so swollen that I could hardly get up and down. At times my feet pained so badly I thought my toes would break off. I tried everything. The doctor told me I would be no better while I lived here, but I stopped in a drug store in Brooklyn, N. Y., one day last November and the man in charge told me to take Kruschen for 3 weeks steady and I would get relief, which I did. Never felt better and along with it have lost weight. I weighed 210 then. Now I weigh 154 and while I'm over 50 years old I feel 30. I took it for one thing—got two—so I now have 6 others here taking it." Mrs. A. V. Carr, Fh. Tilden, N. Y.

"It's the little daily dose that does it," so take a half teaspoonful of Kruschen in a glass of hot water every morning before breakfast. Get Kruschen at Gonder's Pharmacy or any live druggist in the world—a jar lasts 4 weeks and costs but a trifle.—Advertisement sept 14, dec. 7.

ALLEGHENY TABLELAND ANNUAL MUSICAL FESTIVAL

At Camp Dawson on Cheat River Last Saturday Afternoon and Sunday A Colorful Affair

LARGE NUMBERS PRESENT

The third annual Music Festival of the Allegheny Tableland, held at Camp Dawson, on Cheat River, near Kingwood, West Va., on Saturday and Sunday, fulfilled the high expectations of those who sponsored it and who have followed it through the two previous years when it was presented at Somerset, Pa.

Camp Dawson, a military reservation maintained by the State of West Virginia, located along Cheat River at the foot of Caddell Mountain, less than twenty miles west of Oakland, is a level plain more than a mile square upon which is erected permanent barracks and equipped with all modern conveniences, which proved a most fitting place for the great festival, and the beautifully decorated stage formed a background for one of the most colorful programs ever rendered in this section. The loud speakers carried the voices of those taking part and the music presented out to the river bank and the audience enjoyed the shade and lawn as they listened to the music and other features preesnted.

Saturday's attendance at the festival was curtailed to some extent by indications of rain, but the crowd present was estimated at several thousand. The program centered about King Coal, who reigned seated upon his central throne, while George Washington, his cabinet and his family in Colonial raiment occupied one side of the stage reminiscent of last year's Bi-Centennial program, while on the opposite side Tony Beaver, mythical Virginia pioneer, brought back memories of the first music festival.

Around these figures a remarkable program of band music, stringed instrument music and all forms of music known only to the earlier mountaineers, brought delight to the Saturday afternoon audience.

Sunday's program was a sacred one and the great stage was crowded with the mass chorus which rendered the numbers selected for the day.

Centered around the mass chorus work was an excellent program of chorus numbers, solos and instrumental renditions. The band numbers were especially enjoyed. The Sunday crowd reached large proportions, being estimated as high as fifteen thousand people.

Of more than passing interest to Oakland and Garrett county people is the tentative arrangement for the 1934 festival to be held at Mountain Lake Park, providing the invitation of the Institute is again extended.

Miss Huff, as in previous years, arranged and directed the programs of Saturday and Sunday, being assisted by others who have been active in the work.

Through each of these events the program of the Allegheny Tableland Association is rapidly growing and its importance and value is being felt even to the smallest village and hamlet in the Tableland.

OFFICER COMPLIMENTED

Completing the trial of cases appearing on the criminal docket of the Garrett County Circuit Court yesterday afternoon shortly after four o'clock, a recess was declared until September 28th, when Judge Doub, who presided during the second week of the term, will return to Oakland and hear several civil suits.

Judge Doub complimented State's Attorney Dawson for the manner in which he conducted the many cases tried and the expediency in the trials of the traversers.

There were sixty-three indictments found by the grand jury and the cases disposed of during the sessions of Monday, Tuesday and yesterday were as follows:

Mary Bonelli, Kitzmiller, manufacture of intoxicants; plea of guilt confessed; $100 and costs or six months in the House of Correction.

The girl in the case, Lorraine Wilson, of near Kitzmiller, was ordered to be sent to the Montrose School for Girls until she arrives at the age of 21.

W. A. Brock, of Norfolk, Va., was sentenced to serve two years in the Penitentiary. Brock, a tramp and full of bad liquor or dope, came to Oakland one evening during the past summer and going to the railway siding at the station climbed into an empty box car where he slept until toward morning when he became chilled and proceeded to build a fire of waste paper on the floor of the car, which was set on fire and practically destroyed.

John Bittinger, bastardy; verdict guilty.

Lee Comp, indicted for false pretenses entered a plea of guilty and was sentenced to one year in the House of Correction. Old Offender Gets 5 Years

Edward J. Harvey, of near Vindex, forgery; plea of guilty confessed. Sentenced to serve five years in the Maryland Penitentiary. In 1917 Harvey was tried, convicted and sentenced to serve a year in the Penitentiary for a like offense. The day he was to have been taken to the penal institution he and a fellow-prisoner, Poffenberger by name, succeeded in escaping from the local jail. Some time later Poffenberger was recaptured and served his sentence. Harvey was again seen in the community until during the past summer when he was arrested after having forged another check.

Daniel D. Harman, manufacture of liquor; plea of guilty confessed; $100 or 6 months in the House of Correction. Herman operated within a mile or two of Oakland, at Rosedale, and was arrested a week or two before the grand jury met during the present term of court.

DRIVER FAILS TO RENDER ASSISTANCE AFTER WRECK

Extricates Girl, Badly Injured, From Car and Then Leaves Her in Nearby Field

BEING HELD FOR HEARING

Grace Whetzell, 23, is a patient at the City Hospital, Kingwood, W. Va., for severe injuries sustained late Thursday night in a motor accident near Weber's crossing, south of town, while Clarence Lantz, about 40, her alleged companion and driver of the automobile, was apprehended at Morgatown, W. Va., and brought to the Oakland jail. Lantz, who is also known in Morgantown as Carl Lantz, is being charged with failing to give assistance after an accident.

Lantz is accused, from the statement made by Miss Whetzell, of deserting her after extracting her from the damaged machine, when it skidded from the road and collided with a pole. Miss Whetzell was found about 100 yards from the highway and from appearances had evidently been dragged across a cabbage patch.

She was unconscious when found and an examination by Dr. E. I. Baumgartner showed a compound fracture of the thigh, a broken shoulder bone, and deep flesh wounds in the limbs. An ambulance was called and she was taken to Kingwood hospital.

Garrett county officials learned that Lantz lived in Morgantown and he was arrested by Morgantown authorities and turned over to the sheriff. Lantz was employed recently in Shahan's garage. He received bad cuts and lacerations as a result of the accident.

A hearing will be held when Miss Whetzell is able to leave the hospital and testify in the case.

FAMILY OF SEVEN IN GARRETT COUNTY CAN LIVE ON $6.50 PER WEEK, ACCORDING TO RELIEF WORKER

Miss Ethel Miller Makes Out Food List, Which Is Scientifically Proven to Sustain Health

Two parents and five children under 15 years of age can live on $6.50 a week in Garrett county, according to Miss Ethel Miller, relief administrator of the Garrett County Welfare board.

"In normal times but few people would be interested in this statement," Miss Miller stated, "but during the present crisis when by far the greater percent of the people are living on a restricted income, it is necessary that the budget be balanced, especially where food is concerned."

A food list given out by Miss Miller, based on current Oakland prices, is said to be scientifically proven to be sufficient to sustain one's health. Those of restricted incomes and those who rely on the proceeds of their allotment by the Welfare Board, are urged to try this budget.

The weekly budget includes the following: Milk, pasteurized whole or its equivalent, 21 quarts; vegetables an fruit, potatoes, 19 pounds, dried beans and peas, 3 pounds; tomatoes, 3 No. 3 cans; leafy, yellow-colored and green-colored vegetables, 6 pounds; dried fruit, 1½ pounds; other vegetables or fruit, 5 pounds.

Bread, flour, cereals; all in form of cereals and flour, 27 pounds; fats, butter, margarine, one pound; lard, oils, salt pork, bacon, 4 pounds; sugars—sugar, 5 pounds, cane or sorgo molasses or syrup, 1 pint; other foods—American cheese, one pound; eggs, one dozen; lean meat, fish, 3 pounds; accessories—coffee, 1-2 pound; tea, 1-8 pound; cocoa, 1 pound; baking powder, salt, etc., as needed; cod liver oil, for child under 2 years, ⅔ ounce.

GARRETT COUNTY FOREST WORKERS WILL BE MOVED

Companies To Be Transferred to Other Camps For Winter

Instructions for the transfer of thirty companies, including two Maryland groups, of the Civilian Conservation Corps from their present locations to others more suitable for winter work, have been received at the headquarters.

The Maryland companies which are located in this county will be moved to the eastern part of the State, one of them going to Camp Ritchie and the others either to an Eastern Shore location or to forests near Beltsville.

To Quit Bird Refuge

The Garrett county company now working in the State bird refuge near Cambridge, on the Eastern Shore, also is to be transferred for the winter to a new location not yet selected.

The remainder of the thirty companies will be brought east from the Ninth Corps area and assigned to posts in this corps area.

Plans for housing members were delayed as the bids for the 18,000,000 feet of lumber, needed in building the winter quarters, will not be opened until Friday.

There will be a re-enrollment the first of October, as the six-months' period will be up by that time. Those now in the companies will be given an opportunity to re-enroll for another period of six months.

Hardware Store Entered and Robbed of Guns

GARRETT NATIONAL BANK NOW OPEN FOR BUSINESS

New Institution is Now Qualified to Transact all Kinds of Banking Business

CLAIMS MUST BE PROVED

The Garrett National Bank opened for business on Wednesday morning and is now qualified to transact all kinds of banking business. The charter was actually received on Tuesday, September 19, but the last minute details delayed the opening until yesterday morning.

Depositors in the immediate vicinity called yesterday to file proof of claim and practically all of them opened new accounts in the institution, it was stated by H. C. Riggs, cashier.

The new bank is set up with good, clean assets with 100 cents on the dollar, after having been scrutinized carefully by bank examiners and directors of the bank. In addition there is a new capital of $50,000 and a surplus of $25,000, and the bank has been assured by the national examiner that the new bank is now in position to qualify for the deposit insurance which goes into effect January 1, as a result of the 1933 Bank Act of the last Congress.

The institution is an entirely new bank, and does not own any real estate, but will rent the banking premises from the conservator. G. A. Fraley will remain as conservator of the old bank until the remaining assets are liquidated, further dividends paid, and the concluding details worked out. This may take a year or more, it was stated.

Each depositor in the old institution must first file proof of claim before he can receive his dividend of 60 percent.

Mr. Riggs will be the new cashier. Mr. Riggs is a graduate of West Virginia University, class of 1922, and has had 19 years of banking experience. He served in France during the World War and is a member of various veterans' organizations. He will move his furniture from Morgantown, W. Va., in the near future and take up his residence here permanently.

Lesson for September 24

REVIEW: SOME EARLY LEADERS OF ISRAEL

GOLDEN TEXT—Finally, my brethren, be strong in the Lord, and in the power of his might. Ephesians 6:10.

PRIMARY TOPIC—Friends From God's Book.

JUNIOR TOPIC—Some Heroes of God's Book.

INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOPIC—Lessons From Great Leaders.

YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOPIC—What Makes a Great Leader?

For senior and adult classes, two methods are suggested.

First—The grouping of the men and women as leaders.

The material of this lesson is adapted from the Lutheran lesson commentary.

I. The Military Leaders (Lessons 1, 2 and 5).

1. Josbua (Lesson 1). He was skillful in military tactics as well as organization. He possessed natural gifts, but his success was due mainly to his obedience to God.

2. Caleb (Lesson 2). As one of the twelve spies, he insisted that by God's help they could possess Canaan.

3. Gideon (Lesson 5). He obeyed God's strange command to reduce his army to 300 men. With them he routed the host of Midian, and made Israel free for about forty years.

II. Women (Lessons 3, 6, and 7).

1. Deborah (Lesson 3). She was called in an emergency and led the people forward to victory.

2. Ruth (Lesson 6). She adopted a new people, a new God, and a new country, with no thought of personal gain. She became the ancestress of David and thus of Christ.

3. Hnnnah (Lesson 7). In Hannah shines forth ideal motherhood.

III. Prophets (Lessons 4 and 8).

1. Isaiah (Lesson 4). He has the place of first rank among the prophets. He denounced the sins of Israel. Drunkenness was one of the sins which destroyed Israel.

2. Samuel (Lesson 8). He was director-general of Israel while serving as a prophet of God.

IV. Royalty (Lessons 9, 10, 11 and 12).

1. Saul (Lesson 9). He had the anointing of God and the approval of the people. His days were filled with blunders, largely because he trusted and exalted himself rather than God.

2. David (Lesson 10). David came into prominence unexpectedly. He had the inner qualities that God could use for a true king. He brought the scattered tribes under one government, bound together with the bond of one religion.

3. Jonathan (Lesson 11). He is noted for his friendship for David. He was legal heir to the throne, but renounced his right in favor of David.

4. Solomon (Lesson 12). He came to the throne welcomed by a united nation. The idea of building the temple as well as much material for its erection came to him from his father. He built the temple and dedicated it to God, setting forth that its supreme purpose was God's glory.

Second—The Summary Method.

The aim here is to state the leading fact and principal teaching of the several lessons. The following suggestions are made:

Lesson for July 2. Joshua's faith in the promises of God and obedience to the divine command enabled him to carry forward to success the work begun by Moses.

Lesson for July 9. Because Caleb wholly followed the Lord, his strength was preserved.

Lesson for July 16. It was out of the ordinary for God to call a woman to a place of national leadership. Deborah had the good judgment to urge Barak forward.

Lesson for July 23.—Drunkenness and other sins caused Israel's ruin.

Lesson for July 30. Gideon, with a small band of men, routed and destroyed the Midianites because he trusted and obeyed God.

Lesson for August 6. Because Ruth chose to identify herself with the people of God she was abundantly blessed.

Lesson for August 13. Hannah stands out as the ideal godly mother.

Lesson for August 20. Samuel heard the call of God while serving in the capacity in which his mother dedicated him.

Lesson for August 27. Saul shamefully failed because he disobeyed God.

Lesson for September 3. Because David was a man after God's own heart, God used him and blessed him in spite of his sins.

Lesson for September 10. Jonathan is an example of a true friend.

Lesson for September 17. Solomon chose wisdom rather than honor and riches. Because of this God was able to give riches and honor.

Poultry Problem Gets Attention of Adjustment Administration

Unless something is done to correct the situation, producers of poultry and eggs may face higher prices for feed and for labor, as well as a higher cost of living, without corresponding increases in the prices of the things they sell. This fact has been recognized by the new Agricultural Adjustment Administration and an attempt is being made to devise a plan whereby prices of poultry and eggs may be brought to pre-war parity. The problem is proving to be one of the most puzzling that has been tackled thus far, but a series of informal conferences with producers and distributors is being held in an effort to work out a practical solution.

A number of factors make the poultry problem especially difficult. First, poultry is produced on such a large number of farms. Records show that 5,400,000 of the 6,000,000 farms in the United States produce poultry or eggs, and only a relatively small number of the chickens are on farms that specialize in poultry. It is possible for producers to get into and out of poultry and egg production in one season, thus making possible wide fluctuations in supply and, therefore, of prices. Other factors that add to the difficulty are the facts that there are so many buyers, that poultry and eggs are handled by several groups of middlemen before reaching the consumer, and that no price-raising plan can be effective unless it takes into account the large supplies of cold storage eggs and poultry, which are said to be 40 to 50 per cent greater than a year ago.

Poultry and eggs were not included as basic commodities in the Agricultural Adjustment Act, so that the production control mechanisms being used on wheat and cotton cannot be applied to them.

Attention to Damaged Shade Trees Advised by Specialist

Valuable shade trees which were damaged by the recent storm need prompt attention if their beauty is to be maintained and long life assured, it is advised by W. R. Ballard, landscape specialist of the University of Maryland Extension Service. Many trees have broken limbs, he says, and the wounds left are openings in the defensive armor, which invite attacks of fungi and insects. He advises cutting off the broken limbs and stubs smoothly, so that the bark will have a better chance to cover the wound with new tissues and thus close the place where enemies may enter.

The abundant rains of the past season have made a wonderful improvement in the condition of many trees which had suffered in the preceding dry seasons. It is emphasized by the specialists that trees need food as well as other plants. In many cases, they say, it would pay to feed the trees well in addition to any surgical work that is done. Trees which thru neglect have suffered heavy inroads from fungus attacks or insects had best be replaced with young, vigorous growing trees.

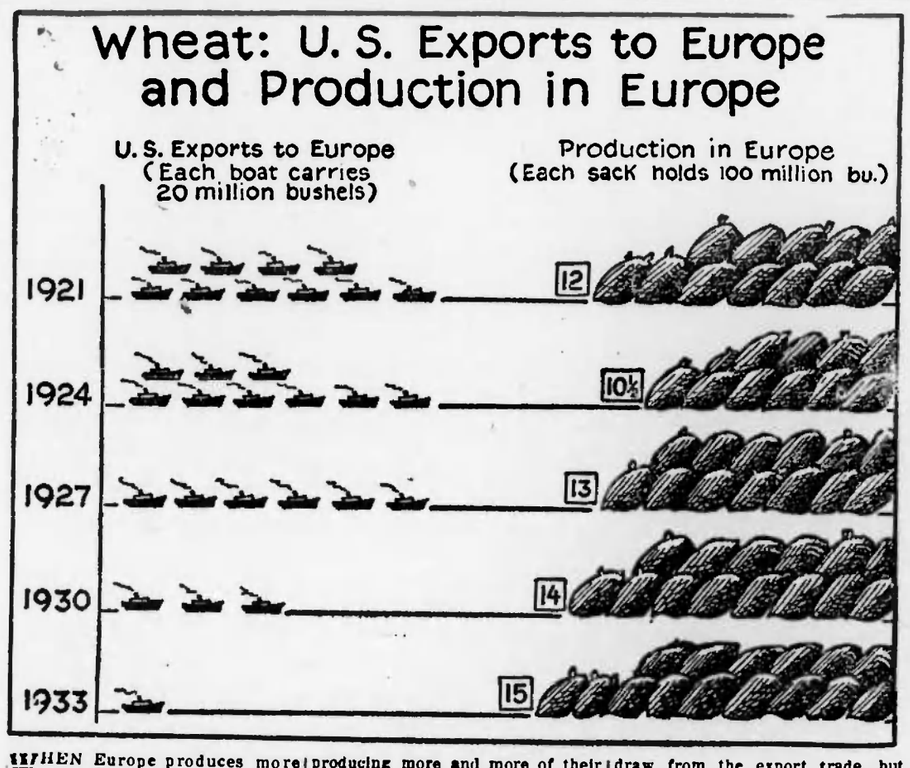
Wheat: U. S. Exports to Europe and Production in Europe



WHEN Europe produces more wheat for herself she buys less from the United States. That is the feature of the world wheat problem that this chart shows. For instance, in 1921, when many wheat ships were busy carrying the bread grain to Europe, that continent produced only 1,200,000,000 bushels. Since 1927, European countries have been producing more and more of their own wheat and the wheat traffic across the Atlantic has slowed up. In fact, efforts of European countries to supply their needs, and their buying wheat from other countries has just about cut off our wheat exports, as the lone boat for 1933 represented in the chart indicates. The United States doesn't want to withdraw from the export trade, but rather than have grain pile up in the United States or be sold at less than cost, the Agricultural Adjustment Administration has begun a wheat plan which will reduce acreage in the United States and bring production down to the point where it can all be marketed at a profit to the farmer.

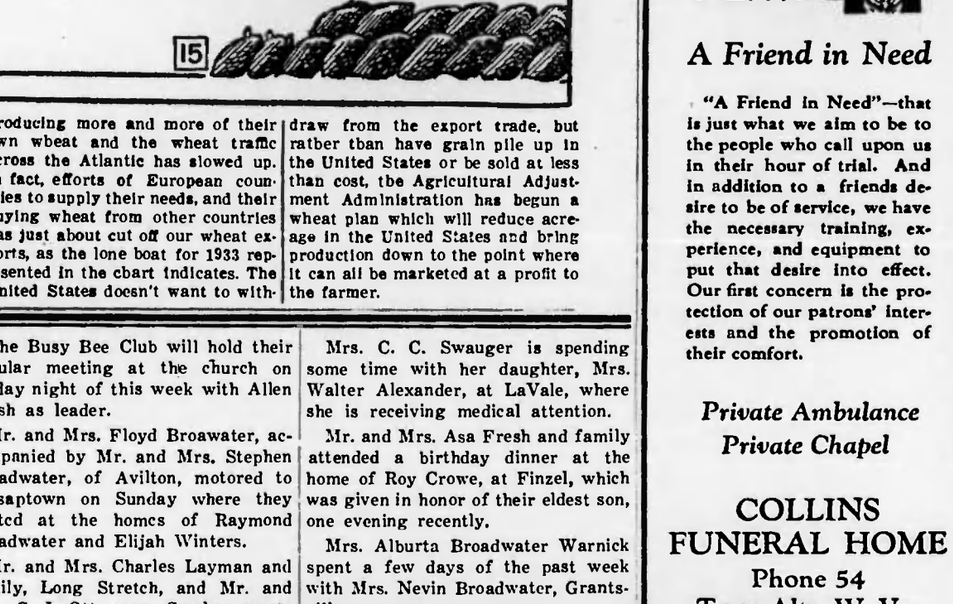
Take the word of a "Man about Gobi"



Next to a Camel
Chevrolet gives most miles per gallon

CHEVROLET No argument about the camel. When it comes to miles per gallon, there's nothing in all the Gobi desert—or Sahara—or anywhere else—that can beat him. No argument about Chevrolet, either. It's the most economical form of full-size transportation on wheels.

You can travel a long, long way in a Chevrolet Six without a single stop for gas or oil. In fact, you can get more miles out of a gallon of gas in a Chevrolet, than you can get in any other full-size car. The best proof of this is the way Chevrolet is being preferred by leading national business firms. These firms know their mileage figures. And today, Chevrolet is their first choice by an overwhelming count. Chevrolet is also first choice of the American public by the widest margin in history.

HEALTHY TEETH ARE A NECESSITY TO HEALTH

Personal Experience of Grown-Ups Prove This Statement

"The majority of grown-ups have learned from personal experience that there is a close connection between healthy teeth and good health generally, but comparatively few parents realize that this is just as true of children as it is of adults," Dr. Richard C. Leonard, Chief of the Division of Oral Hygiene of the Maryland State Department of Health, said recently in emphasizing the importance of regular dental supervision of children, as well as for adults.

"The ease with which children do their work in school, and the progress they make in their grades," he continued, "depends very largely upon their general health. A healthy mouth and sound, well-cared for teeth, are much more important factors in the general health of the child than is usually understood.

"Three things are necessary to maintain mouth health for old and young, alike. First, a well-balanced diet—including milk, bread and butter, other dairy products, green leafy vegetables, while grain cereals, and fresh fruits—which supplies the building material for strong healthy teeth. Second, care in keeping the mouth clean. Third, regular dental supervision, so that defects that occur may be detected while in the early stages, and corrected before they do serious damage.

"Bad teeth do not always ache, even when abscessed, but they can do a great deal of damage throughout the entire system. Children—even very young ones—are as likely to have abscessed teeth as are grown-ups, and they are as susceptible as grown-ups to the illnesses producted by such infections.

"Decayed teeth in children, especially their first teeth, are apt to be overlooked and neglected. But did you ever have the tooth ache? Do you remember how you suffered? Did you feel equal to doing hard mental work? A child with an aching tooth is really a sick child—and it is not surprising when children with neglected teeth fail in their studies.

"Parents who are anxious for their children to get along happily in school and to make good progress in their studies are learning that one of the best ways for them to do it is to watch the general health of the children.

"The best way to safeguard mouth health is through periodical inspections and the necessary corrections by the family dentist. It is a good thing to have inspections of this sort made at the beginning of the school year. An ounce of care of this sort will prevent discomfort and suffering later on. It will also be a help so far as the general health of the child is concerned."

PRICES AND INCOMES

The Roosevelt administration's effort to increase prices and average folk's incomes approximately equally, at one and the same time, is proving to be about the most difficult task that any government ever undertook.

If prices advance, in dollars and cents, and incomes advance correspondingly, in dollars and cents, then there has been no change in the relationship between the two, and, in effect, prices have not advanced.

If incomes advance, but there is an equivalent advance in prices, then the incomes' recipients are not better off than they were, and, in reality, there has been no advance in incomes.

If prices advance faster than incomes, the public's purchasing power dwindles, overproduction results, prices thereupon slump and times are worse than ever. If incomes advance too fast, production cannot possibly maintain them, and THEY slump, which makes times worse than ever.

The administration's problem is to make incomes advance faster than prices, and, simultaneously, to make prices advance faster than incomes.

It is difficult to find any other way of expressing it than to say that this is a mighty hard problem to solve.

SOME THINGS TO REMEMBER

In these days of national efforts to put over the recovery program as outlined by the administration, with the assertion frequently made by some of the over-enthusiastic proponents that unless the program succeeds fully there will be chaos, a great deal of doubt and confusion seems to occupy the public mind.

Any temporary recession of business, any report in a decline of car loadings, or electric power production, is apt to cause cold shivers to run down the spines of those who take these graveyard stories too seriously.

Everybody hopes that the national recovery program will succeed in speeding us on our way out of the depression. But the fact is that there has been abundant evidence that things had begun to get better any how, as the improvement in European nations evidences. This is not taken to mean that we should relax our efforts, but that we ought not become panicky when improvement does not come along as rapidly as we might wish. We have been in depressions before and have pulled out of them, just as we give evidences that we are going to pull out now. Other nations have been in depressions and have pulled out, some in the days even before the United States was a nation, when there were not enough brains to organize a trust.

In this respect, what the Baltimore Sun said recently is well worth reading. It runs as follows

"Amid all the hullabaloo about codes, blue eagles and processing taxes, we are in danger of forgetting that business is actually improving, that the improvement began before the hullabaloo set in, that it is in progress not only in this country but in Europe, and that it is running more or less true to the form of recovery set after each of the other major depressions since the Civil War.

"To recall the fact of normal basic gains is not, of course, to say that the present position is free from danger. There is always serious danger that by undertaking artificially to expedite recovery in one direction we may disturb the relationship between costs and prices, between supply and demand, in such a way as to retard rather than hasten our arrival at the goal. But the fact that we have begun to move along the lines by which we have escaped from previous depressions is the main and the truly encouraging thing. It is just as important to remember this fundamental factor as it is to hang on the latest ruling from the NRA."

Here is some pretty good food for thought. By all means let us "hope and pray for the NRA," (no poesy intended), but let us at the same time remember that natural factors are working for recovery, too, and that it may not mean anarchy or chaos if any phase of the recovery program doesn't happen to work out. What we need just now is less doubt and less shuddering and more confidence in the future of America. It may be, as some of the professorial members of the brain trust would have us believe, that we are now in a new era, and that the old days of individualism are gone forever and nothing but new ideas will work. But let's just wait and see. Individuals are still pretty important even if it does take a lot of them to make a big nation. Some of the old principles do seem to have a grain of truth in them, and it is barely possible that we may have to rely on them some of these days. They have never led us to anarchy and chaos before and maybe they won't this time.

At any rate, Mother Nature has always been a great doctor, and she doesn't even possess a college degree.

Appointed Agent in Blister Rust Control

Mr. H. E. Yost, of Grantsville, has been appointed agent in the Federal division of Blister Rust Control. He will work under the supervision of F. W. Besley, State Forester, and in cooperation with the State Department of Agriculture.

Mr. Yost plans to secure local labor under the provisions of NRA in Garrett county to carry on the work of protecting white pine timber from the blister rust. The men will cooperate with local owners of white pine by getting rid of the wild currants and wild gooseberries near the white pine area. These bushes act as alternate hosts for the disease.

The blister rust invaded Maryland between three and four years ago and has been found at a number of places in Washington and Allegany counties.

British bankers say so much American money is being deposited in British banks that they hardly know what to do with it. Can't the N. R. A. do something about this?

Crystal Spring Was Known 65 Years Ago By Oaklander

To The Editor:

Sir:-Your correspondent at Mountain Lake Park writes interestingly, and I always enjoy his or her weekly letter. However, said correspondent was greatly misinformed concerning the discovery of Crystal Spring. It is stated that 48 years ago, some youths were digging in the sand with a stick, and discovered a trickle of water. Encouraged thereby, they renewed their efforts, which were rewarded by a large stream gushing forth, and thus Crystal Spring first became visible.

The writer of this letter first visited Crystal Spring when a boy, more than 65 years ago, and at that time it was apparently a well-konwn and much-used watering place, as an old path led up to it, and a stream of ice cold water, as thick as one's arm, was then gushing from the foot of the hill. No doubt it had been then flowing for many years prior to that, quenching the thirst of man and beast passing that way.

NRA Telephones Among The Busiest In Washington

Establishing connections on one of the switchboards serving NRA and the Department of Commerce. The connections established by the cords shown in the picture are evidence of the extent of use of telephone communication over this switchboard system.

Use of the telephone by NRA and other recently organized government bureaus in Washington is increasing rapidly. Telephones serving the NRA office in the Department of Commerce building are among the busiest in Washington, according to officials of the Chesapeake and Potomac Telephone Company. Not only are these telephones used for inter-departmental activities, but innumerable calls are made throughout the city and to out-of-town points.

With the initial organization of NRA, a great number of these calls were made from the private brauch exchange systems serving the Department of Commerce, NRA, and the Federal Home Owners' Loan Corporation. In a short time the number of calls for and from the NRA headquarters increased to such an extent that it became necessary for the telephone company to assign separate numbers to this bureau with trunk lines connecting city central offices and tie lines to other government bureaus and departments.

The Department of Commerce Building which occupies eight acres of land was, when completed, said to be the largest office building of its kind in the world. It was generally conceded that the twenty-three acres of usable floor space would take care of the department's requirements for many years. Today, about two years after first being occupied, the building is reported as being crowded to the very doors.

So that the NRA and allied offices may be situated close to each other, it was necessary to move other departments to less densely occupied buildings. In such cases telephones have been shifted to meet the requirements of those concerned.

Electrical Watch Timer Bell System Development

New watch timer in use. Bell Laboratories scientist adjusting watch. Adjustments may now be made in ten minutes as compared with ten days, using different methods.

With the development of an electrical watch timer by the Bell Telephone Laboratories in collaboration with Electrical Research Products, any jeweler may regulate a watch to the maximum of its timekeeping efficiency in about ten minutes as compared with about ten days now required to adjust watches properly.

This new device is about the size of a standard typewriter. When a watch is placed in a compartment of the timer an image of the balance wheel is reflected on a mirror, permitting a stroboscopic comparison of the watch speed with a flashing lamp. By a very simple adjustment of the timer, the actual loss or gain in seconds per day made by the watch may be read directly from a dial on the timer. Readings are taken with the watch in four different positions so that it may be corrected for any position in which the watch may be used.

The timer is operated by a one hundred cycle per second current, the frequency being accurate to one part in ten million.

Facts And Figures On Your Telephone

By EDWIN F. HILL

Edwin F. Hill

There are now twice as many telephones in the world as there were seventeen years ago. The United States has more than half of all the telephones in the world, a survey recently compiled by the American Telephone and Telegraph Company shows. This survey made as of January 1, 1932, showed a total of 35,057,300 telephones, of which 56.17 per cent were in this country.

Canada with 1,364,200 telephones or 3.89 per cent, is outranked in number of telephones only by the United States, Germany and Great Britain. Figures for the latter country include Northern Ireland but not the Irish Free State.

In North America, Mexico takes third rank in number of telephones, and is followed by Cuba. Taking into account the other countries of Central America and the West Indies, North America has 60.69 per cent of the world's telephones.

In recent years there has been a great increase, not alone in the United States, but throughout the world, in dial telephones. Slightly more than 50 per cent of all the dial telephones now in use are located in the United States, and the number of such instruments throughout the world totals 12,500,000.

Telephone development, however, is a question not merely of the actual number of telephones in use, but also of the number in proportion to population. On this basis, averaging telephones per 100 of the world's population, the United States takes first place, with Canada second, Denmark third, New Zealand fourth, Sweden fifth, Switzerland sixth, Australia seventh, and Norway, eighth.

THE MARYLAND BIBLE SOCIETY'S CORNER

"The Word of Our God Shall Stand Forever"

NAHUM

Nahum may well be described as a declarer of the wrath of God. This wrath is to be launched against Nineveh, the capital of the Assyrian Empire. This great city had ruled the world for 300 years, destroyed Israel and continually raided and threatened Judah. But now her time was come. Her destruction is predicted and is graphically described. "God is jealous, and the Lord revengeth, and is furious; the Lord will take vengeance on his adversaries, and he reserveth wrath for His enemies." Nahum saw, as Dr. A. S. Davidson has finely said, that "one of those crises or turning-points in the history of the world was at hand at which God Himself interposes, revealing Himself as all that He is, and bringing to an end openly all the work which in hidden ways He has been perfoming from the beginning."

The date of Nahum's prophecy is generally accepted as 640 B. C. Assur-bani-pal had captured Thebes despite her camels, the defense of the sea, the strength of Ethopia and of Egypt, Put and Lybia. Shall Nineveh share any better? asks the prophets.

Jehovah brooks no rival. He will not condone iniquity If he seems at times slack to interfere, it is the patience of omnipotence, and neither the helplessness of impotence nor the apathy of indifference. When once He wills to act, none can resist His power.

Nineveh falls unwept. Who will bemoan her? She pitied none, and there is none to pity her. Nay, all rejoice, for all have been her victims. "All that hear the report of thee clap their hands over thee, for upon whom did not thy wickedness pass continually?"

Nahum's prophecy was remarkably fulfilled. In 607 B. C. the Medes and Babylonians destroyed Nineveh; they were aided by a sudden rise of the Tigris, which carried away a great part of the wall; the destruction was complete; the location was forgotten. When Alexander fought the battle of Arbela, near the site of Nineveh, no one knew of its existence.

In 1820 an Englishman named Rich visiting in the region of Mosul, on the Tigris, 250 miles north of the site of ancient Babylon, noticed among other mounds one called "Yunas," a native word for "Jonah." He instantly connected the name Jonah with Nineveh, and about 25 years later archaeologists made excavations among these mounds which brought to light the vast ruins of the ancient Assyrian civilization; all through the chance association of the name of Jonah with Nineveh.

This prophecy is not all condemnation of the wicked and warnings of impending destruction of God's enemies. There is a beautiful promise of deliverance based upon obedience and trust, as God's deliverances always are: "Behold upon the mountains the feet of him that bringeth good tidings, that publisheth peace! O, Judah, keep thy solemn feasts, perform thy vows; for the wicked shall no more pass through thee; he is utterly cut off." Yet the fall of Nineveh was not the end of Judah's servitude; it was not the immediate precursor of her complete restoration, though Nahum seems to have expected it would be. It was indeed one step in the evolution of God's purposes for His people; but the salvation of Zion was not to be yet. Judah's impenitence and faithlessness postponed God's purpose.

NATIONAL AFFAIRS

By FRANK P. LITSCHERT

September is a historic month in many respects, not the least of which is that it is the month in which the Constitution of the United States was completed by its authors. The date is September seventeenth and this year it marked the 147th anniversary of the signing of the Constitution.

When one has favorable things to say these days of our Constitution, he runs the risk of being called old-fashioned, if nothing worse. It is now the practice of certain educators and agitators to make light of the Constitution, to refer to it as an outworn document, the work of unlettered provincials who just happened to frame an agreement under which our forefathers were able to consolidate the thirteen colonies. They like to tell us that we would be much better off were we to do away with this fundamental law which they infer, "cramps the style" of the great reformers of the present day, statesmen who could make everybody prosperous and happy without work, if only given the chance.

The Constitution, however, needs no defense among thinking people. The results speak for themselves. Before its adoption, while the new American nationals were working under the Articles of Confederation, the country went from bad to worse and was facing dissolution so far as its political fabric was concerned. There was even talk of importing a European monarch to try to start the new ship of state in the proper direction.

But the new Constitution changed all this. The colonies grew into one nation, and colonists became Americans. The credit of the new nation grew at home and abroad and almost immediately the United States started on its new path of progress. This progress, with a few interruptions, has continued ever since. We are now in the latest and severest of these interruptions. But the Constitution is not to blame of this one, any more than it has been the author of those in the past. By its fine system of checks and balances it enabled the American people to develop the most prosperous nation of the world, to do it in a space of time the brevity of which amazed the entire world; to accomplish all this and still preserve the freedom of the individual to work out his own destiny according to his merits.

The interruptions to our progress have come not because of our Constitutional government, but through the errors of our people and their haste to become rich. In fact so long as we have adhered closely to the provisions of our Constitution and the teachings thereof we have prospered. Our sins have been chiefly those of straying away from sound and conservative principles of economics and government.

After all, a government can be no better than the people who compose it. No constitution written or unwritten can save a people who have become indolent, thriftless or dishonest, who have lost the ideals of the founders of the nation. Nor can a change of fundamental government alter such a people for the better. What we need in the United States just now is not a new Constitution but a rededication of our lives and our efforts to the task of keeping America what it has always been—the best place on the globe in which to live and rear a family, and to build a nation of families.

The Founder of Our Graded Schools

EDUCATION'S DEBT TO A. L. WADE

By HAL CURTIS, In The Sunday Sun

Nearly a century after the immortal textbooks of McGuffey, Ray and Harvey had made their imprint upon American education, a country schoolmaster, who, at the age of 14, had begun to support his mother and four brothers, lay awake in his tiny bedroom in a house in Monongalia county, Virginia, now West Virginia, envisaging a system of graded elementary schools that was to revolutionize the school system of the United States and come down to the present generation practically unaltered.

This man was Alexander L. Wade, who for more than half a century devoted his life to teaching in Virginia and West Virginia. Until his appearance the elementary school system of America was, in fact, no system at all, but rather a sort of listless hodgepodge, with pupils passing indifferently from one textbook to another with no particular goal in view. Wade realized the fallacy of this method and set about to give every pupil a definite goal toward which to work.

Today, wherever there are public schools in the United States, parents, pupils and teachers talk of the "grades." It is with joy that children everywhere are promoted from one grade to another—from first to eighth—yet few people are acquainted with how the schools of the nation came to be classified by grades, how long the system has been in vogue, and to what county and state, historically, the honor belongs.

Before one can fully understand how Wade worked out his system of grades, however, it is first necessary to have some conception of the American educational field as it existed when he first appeared upon the scene. That field was, to say the least, unsatisfactory. Multitudes of school children of the three generations following 1830 passed through the progressive stages of study required to master the McGuffey Readers, from first to sixth. Systematically, Ray also divided arithmetic into books and parts; he grouped the mental processes in one book, and in others he included the calculations which "scholars" were accustomed to make with slate and pencil. But there the system ended.

In Virginia the old field and subscription schools existed prior to 1810 without system or regulation, and in that year the General Assembly created the "Literary Fund," from which appropriation was made for the education of poor children. This came to be known as the poor or primary school system, which the Assembly of 1845 enlarged into a system of free schools which towns and counties had the opinion of adopting by vote. And there it ended in a lethargic condition.

But twenty years later, across the mountains in that region which had become known as West Virginia, a new turn was taking place in the field of primary education. The members of the convention which framed the first Constitution of the sister state of the Old Dominion conceived the idea that schools should be free, uniform and systematic. Therefore, they wrote into the Constitution this command:

> The Legislature shall provide, as soon as practicable, for the establishment of a thorough and efficient system of free schools, supported by a school fund and a local tax.

Then, after the Legislature of 1865 authorized the state superintendent of education to prescribe a series of textbooks, the Code of 1868 specified that the uniform series of studies should consist of orthography, reading, writing, arithmetic, English grammar, and geography. Soon children began attending rural schools as opportunity afforded, at almost any age from 6 to 21. They usually pursued only such studies as interested them, without purpose of graduation from a required course of study. Even after the law of 1868 prescribed the courses, it was a long time before all the branches were taught in all the schools, or all the pupils required to pursue them.

It is now just a little more than a century since Alexander L. Wade, author of the grade-school system was born. It was just a century after the signing of the Declaration of Independence that he first began to classify pupils by grades. This simple country school-master, who made such a unique contribution to American education, was born near Rushville, Ind., on February 1, 1832. Seven years later his father, George Wade, who had migrated from Monongalia county, Virginia, now West Virginia, to Indiana, returned with his wife and five children to his native county of Monongalia.

Alexander, eldest of the children, began teaching school in 1848, at the age of 16, and with the exception of 10 years which he spent as Recorder of Monongalia county, he devoted his long life to the schoolroom. After years of teaching in the rural schools he became principal of the Morgantown public schools. Here he contrasted the more orderly system of study and advancement in higher schools and academies with the haphazard and aimless procedure of the rural schools. Here he observed that students employed their minds in an arranged task, while in the rural schools the idea of passing consecutively through progressive grades to a day of graduation, by beginning at a proper age with a fixed goal in view, had not been thought of.

It is tradition that on retiring one night after a day of visiting in rural schools he observed a diploma hanging on the wall of his bedroom, and to his mind it brought the thought that it was evidence of order; indicated a definate work and a definate time in which to do it, with a memorial of excellence attained. Here his vision of the need of system crystalized into the "graded-school" plan. Tradition records that he lay awake all night envisioning a graded-school system.

When one considers the simplicity and progressiveness of McGuffey's Readers and Ray's Arithmetics it appears strange indeed that practically half a century should elapse after their use beeame general before a system of course of study should have been preseribed. Logically, it would seem that the textbooks should have been adopted to the requirements rather than that the organization of schools should be made to fit the texts.

In the autumn of 1874 Alexander L. Wade organized pupils into grades and grading classes in the rural schools of Monongalia county. The first examinations testing the fruits of this labor were held March 11, 1876, and the first free-school diplomas granted to 196 pupils. In 1878, George Wesley Atkinson, who was then editor of the Wheeling Standard, and who later became Governor of West Virginia, spent a week in Monongalia county attending the annual examniations in the primary schools. In an editorial published in his newspaper on March 4, 1878, he said: "Such crowds of people we have never seen assembled in the rural districts, even at barbacues during political campaigns." In the third annual catalogue of the free schools of Monongalia county, published in 1878, Wade records that "it is a matter of astonishment to many persons that, with a single excpetion, the largest churches in the several districts were insufficient to accommodate, even during the day, the vast numbers who came to witness the examinations."

The Wheeling Intelligencer, in its issue of December 25, 1876, contained an editorial entitled "A Great Step Forward in Education," reviewing the graded-school system and recommending its adoption throughout the State. In answer to the question, "What has produced this educational revival?" Mr. Wade, in his annual catalogue, answered: "It is what a student of human nature would expeet when the advanced pupils in the free schools publicly undertake to aecomplish a course of study in a given length of time. Let a pupil of 10 or 12 years of age take up and resolve to complete, by the time he is 15 years of age, a course of study which very few pupils complete by the time they are 21; let this resolution be made public and it will become a matter of interest to his parents and brothers and sisters and friends; let two pupils undertake the work, and the relatives and friends of each will take sides and each pupil will be greatly stimulated. Apply this to the several districts of a county, and the natural result is revival."

When the West Virginia State Teachers' Association met at Martinsburg in August, 1877, it adopted a resolution recommending:

> The system introduced by Alexander L. Wade into the free schools of Monongalia county, providing for (1) grading schools, (2) holding annual district examinations, and (3) granting diplomas to pupils who complete the free-school branches, be recommended to the county superintendents throughout West Virginia for their adoption.

The idea spread throughout the country to such an extent that General Eaton, chief of the National Bureau of Education, noted the plan in his annual report for 1878, which is accepted as historic basis for the origination of the system in the schools of Monongalia county. He said: "Of all the plans developed none has excited more attention than that known as the graduating system for country schools, devised by A. L. Wade, county superintendent of Monongalia."

The following year the National Education Association gave the plan public recognition by a resolution "that the attention of State superintendents of public instruction throughout the United States be called to the propriety of adopting a graduating system for country schools."

Yet, while the idea was taking root elsewhere, the prophetic zeal of its author did not slacken. Mr. Wade retired from teaching for the purpose of writing a book entitled "A Graduating systsem for County Schools." But still his long-experienced mind required further proof of his theory, and so, while writing his book, he asked for the principalship of the Morgantown colored school. Here, in 1880-1881, in the midst of pupils less adapted as the instruments for proof of his theory, he tested his methods in a new and untried field, under circumstances presumably less favorable to his suceess.

So, after experimentation in the rural school houses of Monongalia county, it came to pass that the first well-rounded and complete grade school in the United States was conducted on the left bank of Monongalia river, in Morgantown—and that a colored school. The old brick building, until recently used by the Morgantown Colored High school, still stands. Wade wrote and lectured and taught until his death at Richmond, Va., on May 2, 1904.

Miss Lavinia's Goblets

By H. LOUIS RAYBOLD

"THERE he goes again!" whispered Julia Bradley to her sister Martha, as she peeked through the tightly drawn lace curtains of their little-used parlor. "Third time this week. Now, what do you make of it?"

"Come out of this ice box," complained Martie fretfully, "and I'll tell you. There's nothing more to see now he's gone in."

The two shawled old ladies, both such victims of rheumatism that watching their neighbors and gossiping over them was the only social activity left them limped out to the more cheerful sitting room.

"I think," said Martha, "that 'Vinia has given up expecting Ben Cooper will get over his ten-year grouch and is setting her cap at this here old fellow from the city. Seems he's terrible well-to-do."

"Well—" said Julia emphatically, as she settled down to her knitting, "I don't blame 'Vinia, but what a city man can see in an old maid like that with his money and smart looks, he could get most anyone in his own town, for all his age—that's what gets me."

"Did anyone ever really know," queried Martha, "just what it was between the two of them that broke up the match and kept 'em not speaking to each other for going on ten years this spring?"

"Well, they say," said Julia, "it was something to do with those goblets of her grandmother's that 'Vinia sets such store by. She had the even dozen, until Ben up and broke one. They quarreled over it and one thing led to another—silly young things they were then—and—well, you know as much as I do."

"Folks are queer, sister," said Martie complacently. "They sure are queer."

It was really unfortunate that the cold had driven the two old women from their post at the window quite so soon. Hardly had they scuttled out to the stove than Ben Cooper walked slowly down the street, paused a moment at Miss Lavinia's clematis bower gate, then continued on his way.

"Is it possible," Ben was thinking, "that I am going to see the only woman I ever cared a hoot for, walk off with by an old duffer from town? He's called there now half a dozen times, if what everybody tells me is true and that means business. What a fool I have been not to have pocketed my pride years ago!"

A few minutes later, the Bradley sisters were rewarded for repeated trips into the parlor by seeing the courtly figure of Mr. Thomas Wendell emerge from their neighbor's house across the street. They would have given much to have heard what he said as he lifted his hat to 'Vinia who stood in the doorway.

"I can count on your answer Wednesday without fail? I thank you."

That evening, well after dark, when Julia and her sister were peaceably knitting together, Ben Cooper made his way to Lavinia's. They knew nothing of his visit. Lavinia herself, when she saw his once familiar figure at her door, drew back with her hand, still white and slender, against her throat. "Why, Ben—" she breathed.

"It's me, 'Vinia," he said hoarsely. "I—I—er—that is, I just had to see you. May I come in?"

A moment later and he was seated stiffly on the edge of the long horsehair sofa.

"Tell me, Lavinia," he demanded sternly, "is it true that you are going to marry that old fossil from the city?"

Lavinia gave an amused, throaty chuckle. "I don't know what business it is of yours," she said, "but I'm perfectly willing to tell you he's coming for an answer Wednesday."

"Wednesday," repeated Ben helplessly. "Wednesday." Then, with one single stride, he came over to her and picked her up in his two strong arms. "When he comes," he said harshly, "you tell him you're going to be married on Thursday to me. What fools we have been, Lavinia! What years we have wasted!" his voice broke and he pressed his head against Lavinia's hair, as Lavinia's two arms crept slowly up around his neck.

Wednesday, Mr. Thomas Wendell came for his answer, nor did it apparently displease him.

"I've dreaded to sell them, Mr. Thomas, for they were my mother's and her mother's before her. There were the twelve of them, but my fiance accidentally broke one of them. I'm sorry to have kept you dangling for a price, but at last, seeing I'm going to be married, I guess I can use the money for my trousseau."

"Is that so?" said Mr. Thomas Wendell politely. "My congratulations, and I'm grateful to get the goblets."

"Funny," said Martha Bradley crossly, "how some people have all the luck. Not enough men to go round and Lavinia with two of 'em on her hands at once, now that Ben's come courting again, and some say they're going to be married tomorrow!"

"Listen to me, sister," said Julia sagely, "I wouldn't put it beyond Lavinia to have kept this city man on tenterhooks just to make Ben jealous. In a small town he was bound to hear that some one was calling on his old girl. I think she did it on purpose!"

Martha laid down her tatting. "Julia," she said, slowly, "you said a mouthful!"

MT. LAKE PARK

This week's column promises to be less interesting—if possible—than usual. It is true there have been a number of parties, such as bridge luncheons and dinners, but we have been asked not to mention them. That makes it a little tough on the reporter for when items of news are omitted some one is sure to tell him that he must have been asleep at the switch.

Advantage is being taken of the library established by the Woman's Civic League. On the two days of the week the library is open, a large number supply themselves with reading matter. There is no charge for the books, except a penalty is attached if they are kept out longer than a week without being renewed. Arrangements are under way to place the library at some convenient place so that service may be rendered all winter. Eventually it is hoped to be able to have a librarian in charge all the time.

Nature has certainly joined the NRA to curtail and raise the price of food products. Reports are coming in that while the potato yield is good, yet many are rotting in the hill, due to the wet weather, or rather, as some believe, to blight, the effect of which is enhanced by a damp season. In any event it is said the crop will be materially curtailed.

The wet and chilly weather seems to have produced an unfavorable psychological reaction—the Bowling Alley windows are partly boarded up. A grim and unpleasant reminder that "the spectre of winter chills the marrow in our bones."

* * *

A detailed financial report of the towns has been made and appears in print this week. From this statement you may know just how much money has been collected by the authorities, in what manner it has been spent, and how much, if any, remains in the treasury. There is no excuse for not knowing all about your town's finences.

Drop in Freshman Class at State Normal School

The personnel of the freshman class at the Frostburg State Normal School includes a number of young women from Garrett county. Among the number is Margaret Mary Blocher, Frances C. Filsinger, Ruth Keefe and Helen Schlossnagle. Last year the entering class numbered 79, but this year it numbers but 26.

Now that three-year graduates are available for placement the county superintendents are almost all on record not to employ two-year graduates. The school has invited back those two-year graduates for an additional year.

Of the five graduates who have re-enrolled for the additional year there are two Garrett county teachers: Mrs. Myra Custer Taylor and Miss Mary Callis.

SCOOP'S COLUMN

Secret Diary Opened to the Public Century of Progress, Chicago, Illinois.
Special to The Republican:
September 16—

"Hello folks. Am having a grand time and wish you were here" That's how they would have said it a century ago, but since it has to be progressive we'll put it this way, "Hi-ya, everything's hot-cha. Come out and absorb it."

The fair is too big, there's too much of it. Just about the way you'd think if you saw Charlie Sprague, Andy Gonder, Henry Lauer, and a few others standing together.

We must have walked 15 miles today and haven't even scratched the surface. And sleep wasn't so plentiful either on the train enroute, especially for "Doc" Broad and Johnny Mac. The porter brought them hard pillows and after enduring them for hours they investigated and found the pillow cases had been stuffed with mail sacks. And those reclining seats which we didn't have! We had the seats but had to do our own reclining. And the pest from Mannington who always showed up when the autograph seekers weren't hounding you. It was a nice trip. Left my hat on train. Goodbye hat.

Saw in the guide book where there is a "garden of comfort" on the grounds. Wish I was there right now.

They charge you for everything here. Just went in a place to wash my hands for dinner and before I got out I had paid them a quarter and had nothing to show for it either. Not even a souvenir.

Had dinner at Ben Bernie's Casino. Didn't order anything to drink but when waiter arrived he had me down for a glass of milk. And did I look in the mirror when I went back to my room?

Lights out at not so early an hour, unless you mean early in the morning.

September 17

Feet still sore but still pointed toward Fair grounds. On bus Johnny Mac claims we're all dumb because we left his ticket in bureau drawer at hotel.

Haven't seen rest of travel party since first afternoon. Oh where, oh where can you be? Almost went into Streets of Paris to look for them, but controlled myself.

Strange how the souvenirs are the same in the Belgian village as in the Italian, Spanish and Indian village, not to mention the exhibit buildings.

"Doc" saw a building surrounded by a beautiful garden of flowers and wanted to go in to see the exhibits. We did. The building was by Kohler of Kohler.

Saw the Gutenberg Press, the first printing press in existence and wanted a slug from the easter but couldn't get one until I paid a quarter and bought a reproduction of a German Bible which I can't read, even if my ancestors could.

Just came out of the planetarium where there was a lecture. The seats were full and I think it must be because it offered a place to sit, rather than enlightenment on the stars, although it must have been wonderful to someone who could understand it. The lecturer reminded the people to take with them all pocketbooks, hats, canes, and shoes when they left. Oh boy, did it feel good to get my dogs out of cover for a good airing.

There's a whole college education right here without the trouble of carrying books, all the sensational advances in science, the arts, aeronautics, economics, inventions, machinery, transportation and fun.

I wanted to see something at the other end of this exhibit but it's four miles away as the buses travel so it'll have to wait until tomorrow. There are hundreds of buildings, all different, designed and painted in a way to prove that now and then an architect takes a few whiffs of the cork.

The bill for electric lights alone would pay for all the eggs that the government is going to pay the hens for not laying.

If I don't put these dogs to bed soon they won't be able to do anything but bark tomorrow.

September 18

The last day and still there's too much to see. Guess I'd better go up in the sky tower and take it all in at one glance.

It's a good thing you can get pamphlets in most every building telling you what you saw. I'll read up on them on the way home so people will think I gather in details as easily as I write this column.

Honestly though, you have no idea of the immensity of the spectacle. No matter how big yau thought it was, it's bigger when you see it.

Wouldn't I like to ride home in one of the all-aluminum, air-conditioned pullman cars, but instead I imagine I'll get a type 1890 car seat that I saw on exhibition.

What all did I see and where did I see them? Ask me another. I'd have to travel all over it again and write down each exhibit. Then when I re-read the written words I'd hardly believe I had seen all that I had put down.

Maybe next year I'll still be recalling something I saw.

Boy, will I be glad to get home. How my dogs are going to enjoy sitting underneath a typewriter while I just sit and write a column or so each week.

But I'd go again if I got a chance—and get pushed around in one of those jinrikishas for one dollar an hour—if I had the dollars.

In any case, don't miss going if you get the opportunity. Sez me, as if you cared anything for my opinion.

SHOULD EXERCISE CARE IN LAYING OUT FOOD MONEY

Welfare Administrator Gives Division of Dollar for People On Restricted Budgets

895 ON WELFARE PAYROLL

"It is important," said Miss Miller, of the Garrett County Welfare Board, "to buy foods that all the family need, especially the children, and to that end to lay out your money carefully."

Last week Miss Miller pointed out how a family of seven could live on $6.50 per week in Garrett county, based on Oakland prices. This week she continues with showing how the dollar for food should be divided when dollars are scarce.

"If you have very little money for food, it is recommended that each dollar be divided as follows:

"One-fourth or more for milk or its equivalent, providing for each child at least one pint daily. He should have one and one-half pints to one quart.

"One-fourth, or slightly less, for vegetables and fruit, consisting of canned tomatoes (use at least twice a week); cabbage, twice a week; potatoes, dried beans and peas and the cheaper dried fruits.

"About one-tenth for eggs, lean meat and fish; one-fifth or more for bread, flour and cereals. The rest, about one-fifth for fats, sugars and accessories. That is, lard, salt pork, margarine or butter, cane molasses, corn sirup, sugar, salt, baking powder, tea, coffee and cocoa."

Miss Miller emphasized the fact that "welfare work has a broader significance than merely providing the material comforts for those needing the assistance of the nation and the state. This, of course, is of primary importance. But lying deeper, and of more lasting benefit, is the effort being made to teach self-help and self-reliance. Thus alone can the morale of the people be sustained and an inferiority complex be combatted. Naked charity, or the giving with no thought of a compensatory return, is abhorrent to the great mass of a free and independent people."

The welfare payroll, as of September 16, was $4,378.50, with 895 on the roll. This shows a slight increase over August, in which month there were 847 on the payroll, drawing the sum of $4,121.30.

Miss Miller said the payroll should be somewhat reduced next week.

Work is in progress on 42 projects in the county.

Bayard Wins Deciding Game of Series; Friendsville Protests

The Bayard Eagles have won the championship of the Mt. State Baseball league by defeating Friendsville in the fifth and deciding game of their series on the Friendsville diamond by the score 4 to 3.

The game, however, has been formally protested by Friendsville. Friendsville declares the winning run was illegally made. The argument hinges on a "balk" of the pitcher.

A crowd of 2,500 saw the game. Frank Frost stole home in the eighth inning to break the 3-3 deadlock. Both Neal Hill, of Bayard, and Welch, of Friendsville, were stingy with their hits, the former yielding six and the latter five. Welch fanned 14 batsmen while Hill whiffed eight and was more steady in the pinches. Walters was Friendsville's outstanding player.

Should the league officially decide in favor of Bayard, they will get possession of a silver loving cup being donated by A. G. Spalding.

A meeting to discuss the possibility of arranging courses in bookkeeping, stenography and typing in Oakland high school for post graduates and others interested, was held on Tuesday afternoon in the school building.

If a sufficient number are interested classes may be arranged from 3:45 to 5:45 each afternoon, the Instruction to be given by Prof. Ervin S. Smith, the school's commercial instructor. A tuition charge would be necessary for the payment of the instructor and cost of text books.

Mount Airy Canning Company Completes Corn Pack

The Mount Airy Canning Company at Mountain Lake Park closed its plant for the season after completing the canning of the corn crop. Over 5,200 cases of corn were packed, which is considered a good yield. The canning company had contracted for only 98 acres.

Last year 300 acres were harvested and approximately the same number of cases were packed.

The company officials have invited all of its growers to an old-fashioned oyster roast to be held at the plant on Saturday, September 30, beginning at one o'clock. This day will also be pay day for all crops delivered to the plant this season.

The army will physicall examine all forestry applicants sent to it as was done in May and process the men in camps before sending them as replacements to the winter forest camps.

It is understood that Maryland will furnish about 815 men to fill the vacancies in the camps, due to at least one-fourth of the men withdrawing and returning to their homes.

Wooden barracks are to be built and the men supplied with winter clothing such as is used by the army.

Approximately 2,500 Attend Postponed K. of P. Picnic

The postponed annual Knights of Pythias picnic was held last Saturday in Helbig's grove when approximately 2,500 people gathered in the evening to participate in the festivities.

A parade of bands, organizations, clowns, and trades display was held at 10 o'clock in the morning which officially opened the day. Throughout the afternoon and evening band concerts were held and there was square dancing on the grounds.

The awarding of the car was delayed until a late hour when it was announced that Mrs. Ruby Sholes, of Mt. Lake Park, was the winner. A fireworks display at 10:30 concluded the entertainment.

The picnic was originally scheduled for Labor Day, but could not be held on account of the inclemenency of the weather.

No figures were available as to the financial success of the affair.

Four New Fire Towers To Be Erected In The County

Facilities for detecting and reporting forest fires in Garrett county are to be augmented during the next few months through the construction of four new steel lookout towers. These four towers have been purchased by the Federal Government from emergency conservation funds and are to be erected by the men in the conservation camps in this county.

An 80-foot tower is to be erected on the north end of Meadow Mountain on the Savage River State forest near New Germany. A new 80-foot tower will be built on the south end of Meadow Mountain near Deep Creek Lake, replacing the present 40-foot Thayerville tower.

In the western part of the county an 86-foot tower will be erected on Elder Hill. The final tower of the group is to be erected on High Rock, Savage Mountain, and will also be 86 feet high.

MILD SCARLET FEVER AND PARALYSIS CASES APPEAR

Are Scattered In Different Sections of County; No Alarm Felt

A number of mild cases of scarlet fever have been discovered in various parts of the county by the health authorities and it has been decided by them to postpone tonsil clinics for at least a month. The first clinic was scheduled for October 5 at Oakland.

The health nurses and Dr. Eugene C. Peck, health physician, are visiting the schools as often as possible and teachers are keeping watch for suspicious diseases among the children. Thus far only twelve have been reported.

"It is very important that the parents cooperate by keeping every sick child at home and calling a doctor if there is any suspicion of contagious disease," Dr. Peck stated. "The scarlet fever this year is very mild. There have been no deaths and very few children seriously ill, but this makes it all the more important that precautions against its spread be taken."

One case of infantile paralysis has appeared in the Grantsville community, the victim being a little girl who is partially paralyzed in one leg. No other cases have been discovered.

Dr. J. H. Mason Knox, director of the Bureau of Child Hygiene of the State Department of Health, and Dr. Peck held a conference in Grantsville on Wednesday night at which the situation was discussed.

It was pointed out by the physicians that scattered single cases late in the fall are common and that no epidemic spread of the disease is apt to occur when the first case appears so late in the season.

Even during a severe epidemic, only about one person in two thousand is affected by the disease, Dr. Peck stated. He said there was no cause for parents to become alarmed at this time. Increased attention to inoculation against diphtheria and the prevention of other common diseases was urged.

HALLOWE'EN CELEBRATION AGAIN TO BE SPONSORED

Local Fire Department Will Be in Charge of Festivities

That the Oakland Volunteer Fire Department would again sponsor a Hallowe'en celebration in Oakland on October 31, was announced this morning by Leo Helbig, chairman of the committee in charge of arrangements.

Other members of the committee named at the last meeting of the Firemen include Singleton Townshend, Paul McIntire, Alva Gortner and Dr. E. I. Baumgartner.

Although plans are very immature at present the committee is arranging for a mommoth parade of costumed individuals, a dance and street entertainment. A prize list is being prepared which is expected to reach above the 50 mark. These prizes will be given away following the parade and at the dance.

The Hallowe'en celebration has come to be looked upon as one of the big events of the autumn months, Mr. Helbig stated. Each year several hundred parade in all kinds of costumes and a much larger number have always lined the sidewalks to view the procession. This year is expected to be no exception.

CLAIM THAT HIGH SCHOOL EDUCATION IS EXPENSIVE IS UNFOUNDED; ONE GIRL SPENDS $15.00 IN 3 YEARS

Parents of Thirty or More Children Say It Costs Too Much to Send Them To School

ONE GIRL SPENT $10.00

Claiming that it's too expensive a proposition to send their children to high school, parents of thirty or forty children are failing to give their boys and girls an opportunity of higher education this year, according to figures in the hands of Foster D. Bittle, principal of Oakland High.

"But a high school education is not so expensive," says Dora Louise Spoerlein, of Gortner, a student and senior in the local school this year, who has been keeping an acurate account of all money spent during the past three years. Her total for the three years is less than $15.00.

"One girl cost her parents $40 each year," a parent told Mr. Bittle, and he based his assertion that it was too expensive on this knowledge. But Mr. Bittle thinks this one girl is an exception and one who spent money for many unnecessary outside items.

The exact figures of Miss Spoerlein for the three years are as follows: 1930-1931, $6.12; 1931-1932, $4.77 1932-1933, $3.34. This included pencils, notebooks, notebook fillers, athletic dues, class dues, school plays and entertainments, school newspaper, a gym suit and all incidental expenses that arose from time to time.

In addition, Miss Spoerlein has always taken part in all athletics and is loyal to all school functions. The figures given, of course, did not include clothing.

During the past week or two school authorities have been attempting to convince the parents of the thirty or more children that they should give their children the benefit of a high school education. All the children in question are under the age of sixteen years.

Garrett National Bank Busy Caring for Many Depositors

The new Garrett National Bank has been extremely busy this week taking care of the many depositors who have been coming in to file their proof of claim and, in the majority of cases, to transfer the 60 percent of their deposits in the old institution to the new bank.

Since the bank officially opened about 350 have had their accounts straightened out. H. C. Riggs, cashier, expressed himself as being very much pleased with the cooperation of the people and pointed out that there was no rush in filing claims on old accounts.

A notice from G. A. Fraley, conservator of the old bank, states that disposition must be made of the trust fund accounts before October 5, but this has nothing to do with accounts in the old bank, Mr. Riggs stated. Depositors have a year in which to prove their claims. The bank will continue to take care of about 75 each day.

Lesson for October 1

SAUL IN TARSUS

LESSON TEXT—Acts 21:39; 22:3, 27, 28; 26:4-7; Phil. 3:3-6.

GOLDEN TEXT—Study to show thyself approved unto God, a workmen that needeth not to be ashamed, rightly dividing the word of truth. II Timothy 2:15.

PRIMARY TOPIC—A School Boy.

JUNIOR TOPIC—A School Boy of Tarsus.

INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOPIC—Preparation for Life Work.

YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOPIC—Training Christian Leaders.

I. Saul's Birth (Acts 21:39).

He was born at Tarsus, the capital of Cilicia. Tarsus was a gateway between the east and west, therefore a great commercial center. It was a self-governing city, making citizenship therein honorable. It was also one of the great educational centers of the Roman empire. In the providence of God the great apostle to the Gentiles was born in the city where he would encounter men of every class and nation.

II. Saul's Education (Acts 22:3).

1. In the home (Phil. 3:5). His parents were pious people and doubtless carefully cultured him according to Jewish standards. He was brought up as a strict Pharisee.

2. In college at Jerusalem (Acts 22:3). About the age of thirteen, as was the custom, he became a child of the law. It was doubtless at this age that he went to Jernsalem and entered upon his course of study under Gamaliel, one of the most eminent teachers of Israel. His course of study here, doubtless, was largely restricted to the Holy Scriptures. In this school he was prepared for the great work of a Christian theologian. Included in his education was:

a. Patriotism. He proudly affirmed "I am a Jew." He was brought up to love his nation. He was a nationalist of the true type.

b. A love for the Bible. To him the Scriptures were the very Word of God, the final word of authority.

c. Zeal for God. The word "zealous" literally means "to boil."

d. He was conscientious. His supreme aim was to have a conscience void of offense. Because of the blight of sin conscience needs to be disciplined by the Word of God.

3. A trade at Tarsus. Perhaps after his college course at Jerusalem he returned to Tarsus and learned tent making. Thus in later life he was able to support himself while preaching the gospel. One rabbi said "He that teacheth not his son a trade doeth the same as if he had taught him to steal."

III. Saul's Citizenship (Acts 22:27, 28).

In the providence of God, the apostle to the Gentiles was a free-born Roman citizen. He was loyal to his country, while at the same time strictly religious. Right relationship to God sanctifies loyalty to one's country.

IV. Saul's Defense Before Agrippa (Acts 26:1-27).

He expressed his delight that he now could speak and tell his case to one who could follow his line of argument, but doubtless, he was more delighted in that he could witness to him of the Saviour.

1. His manner of life (vv. 4-12). He had been in accord with the most rigid sect of the Jews. Therefore, he possessed the common Jewish hope of a coming Deliverer.

2. His supernatural conversion (vv. 13-15). It was through the personal appearance of Jesus Christ to him on the way to Damascus.

3. Commissioned by Jesus Christ and sent to the Gentiles (vv. 16-18).

4. His consecration (vv. 19-23). Upon receipt of his commission he instantly obeyed.

5. His appeal to Agrippa (vv. 25-27). He was anxious to have Agrippa act on the knowledge that he had.

V. Saul's Ground of Confidence (Phil. 3:4-6).

He had everything a true Jew gloried in.

1. Circumcised the eighth day (v. 5).
2. Of the stock of Israel (v. 5).
3. Of the tribe of Benjamin (v. 5). Benjamin had always remained loyal to the national customs.
4. A Hebrew of the Hebrews (v. 5). He was of Hebrew parentage, not a proselyte.
5. Touching the law, a Pharisee (v.5). The Pharisees were a sect among the Jews most zealous for the rights and ceremonies of Judaism.
6. Concerning zeal, persecuting the church (v. 6). He proved his zeal by the positive effort to stamp out that which was threatening Judaism.
7. Touching the righteousness which is in the law, blameless (v. 6).

Pass Through Fire

Christians are like vases, they must pass through the fire ere they can shine. And often the very furnace and the flame, which they call destruction, are only burning in the graces which are to be their everlasting beauty and glory.

Joy Out of Sorrow

There are joys which can come to us only through sorrow. There are revealings of divine truth which we can get only when earth's lights have gone out.

SCOOP'S COLUMN

By Scoop Hinkoff

Pardon the personal reference, since I never talk about or mention myself in this column, but I'd like to take you back with me several years. It was when I was just a kid in Kingwood, W. Va. People lived a short distance from us who never failed to give us a snooty stare if we as much as dared to look over the fence at their property.

A beautiful pine grove, it was, plenty of ground for play, but a fence barred the way. A bawling out was always ready if we slipped over for just a few minutes.

Last Sunday I was back at the same place. Another family lived in the house. The fence was down, the grove was still beautiful and besides there was about an acre of dahlia gardens. More people visited that one place than almost any other place in town.

In the barn was a paradise for children; with cubby holes, secret shutes and whatnot.

The people didn't know us from Adam but we had hardly got the car stopped to look at the flowers before they invited us in.

Need it be said who had the most friends?

It's lucky that typographical errors are made at times. Otherwise I wouldn't have anything this week with which to fill up space.

The Washington Evening Post carried this paragraph in its news column, "George O. Sanford, engineer in the department of the interior, will deliver an illustrated lecture on "The Construction of the Hoover Dame." And they learned about women from him.

The Lexington (Ky.) Leader published an explanation saying the pastor of the Felix Memorial Baptist church is not giving dancing lessons as might be suspected from an announcement in a previous issue. The pastor telephoned in his sermon subject, "Handling Defeat." It appeared in the paper, "Handling the Feet."

As September goes whizzing by
My call to "Stop" unheeding,
I call to Summer, ling'ring nigh:
"Arrest that girl for speeding!"

All of which means that too fast is autumn and winter creeping upon us. And it's just going to be too bad for me. I never put down in writing just where all the wind whistled through the openings in our old homestead last winter, and now I can't remember.

When it gets cold enough for me to find out where they are it will be too late then to fix them. And so goes another winter.

A man out west whose dog had rheumatism had the animal's tonsils removed and the rheumatism disappeared. To cure the rheumatism in a watch dog it would of course be more advisable to remove his tonsils than to pull all his teeth.

Archibaldson, who keeps up on all the social graces, says that all kinds of social knowledge and graces are usful, but one of the best is to be able to yawn with your mouthclosed.

Yes, now will be a good time to practice.

The boss editor came in the other morning and said that Mike Carney had staged a dry parade up Third street all by himself for the especial benefit of the b. e. to take the place of the parde planned by Mike and some of his friends the night following the election—had the county gone wet.

In looking out of the window I am inclined to believe there was a special bargain sale somewhere in black and white sport oxfords.

It's funny how the talk about beer and all has died down so quickly. And I don't see anybody moving out of the county as a result of the vote.

The biggest disturbance the NRA seems to have caused thus far is the growing list of strikes in the various industries.

Maybe I should mention that prices are going up, and I'll bet 10 to 1 that the growers aren't getting the benefit of the rise.

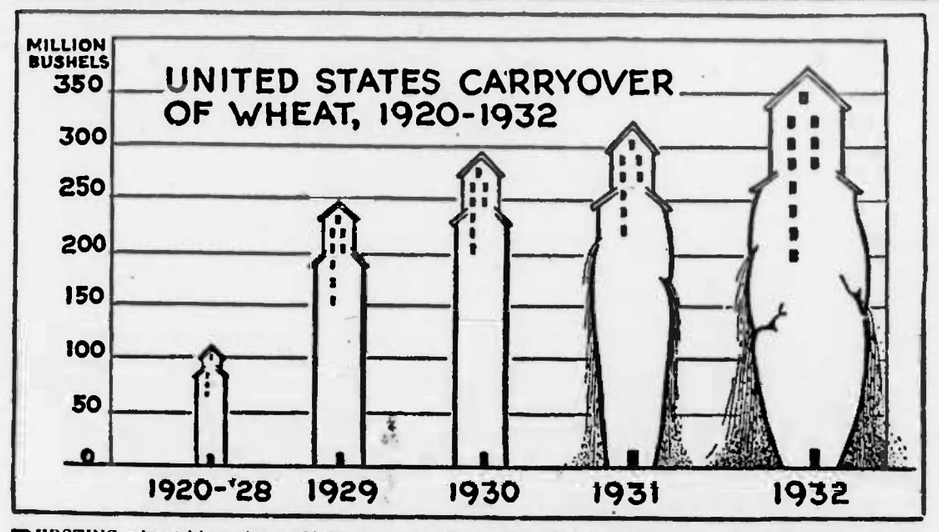
At the next Century of Progress I hope they have overstuffed roads and streets that are as easy on people's feet as such chairs are on their bodies.



BURSTING wheat bins pictured above indicate how the carryover of wheat in the United States has increased since 1928. From 1920 to 1928 the carryover was about normal and a bin or grain elevator capacity of slightly more than 100 million bushels was sufficient for supplies from year to year. Since 1928 the carryover in the United States has increased rapidly. In 1929 it was nearly 250 million bushels. In 1930 it was nearly 300 million bushels. It was over 300 million bushels in 1931 and in 1932 it reached a new peak of more than 360 million bushels. Secretary Wallace has estimated that even with our short crop this year, the carryover will still be above normal a year from now because of the present large carryover, the lack of export demand and reduced feeding and, unless something is done to check it, the carryover is likely to jump again to around 350 million bushels in 1935.

And I just happened to think (which you might consider a bit unusual) that people consumed a lot of time traveling on their own hind legs just to look at time-saving devices like airplanes, dishwashing machines, speed boats, telegraph, can openers, etc.

When we get all these gadgets in every home for saving time, what are we gonna do with time? It can't be pickled or salted down for old age when the days are running short. Time and kisses just aren't any good unless they're used, but you don't need to be promiscuous with either. And when it comes to saving time with electric dishwashers, I'm strong for it. Just ask any kind, considerate, helpful, benevolent, gracious, obliging, tender, affectionate husband.

And I might as well save some more time by calling this a column and closing up the typewriter for one more week. No use to keep staring it in the face for the rest of the affernoon.

Can there be any stronger recommendation for a car than this

WE DO OUR PART

CHEVROLET America can't be fooled when it comes to spotting the best "buy" in any field. America knows too much about motor cars for that. So when one certain car wins almost as many buyers as the next two put together, you know the answer: IT MUST BE BETTER. And that's what the new Chevrolet Six most certainly is.

Chevrolet is better looking—Chevrolet has better bodies—built not just of steel alone, but of steel reinforced by a sturdy hardwood frame. Chevrolet has a better engine—six cylinders for economy, cushion balancing for killing vibration! And Chevrolet gives better value—a long line-up of modern features which no other low-priced car can match.

Now is the time to start thinking about a new car for winter! And when you do so, think of the way Chevrolet is leading in sales. Could you ask for any stronger recommendation for a low-priced car than that?

GOOD MANNERS AND GOOD HEALTH GO HAND IN HAND

Is Closer Connection Between Them Than is Usually Realized

Speaking of personal habits in relation to health, Dr. R. H. Riley, Director of the State Department of Health, said recently, "There is usually some good reason for what we speak of as 'good manners,' and very often there is a closer connection between them and good health, than is commonly realized.

"Take the question of handwashing, as an illustration. It does not look well to sit down to a meal without having washed the hands. It does not look well to go to school and when 'hand inspection' is called for to present a pair of dirty, grimy hands for the teacher or the public health nurse to see. But when we insist on handwashing as a matter of routine, there is more in it than the mere appearance of cleanliness.

"A great many of the diseases we have—sore throat, influenza, colds, diphtheria, to mention only a few of them—are believed to be spread thru germs carried in the secretions from the nose and throat. Others, like typhoid, are spread through the discharges from the bladder and the bowels. We have what are called 'carriers' of disease, that is persons who are not ill themselves, but who throw off the germs of these various diseases, and who are a source of danger to other persons. You can readily see why it is extremely important for these 'carriers' to form the handwashing habit.

"But there is every reason why all of us should form the handwashing habit, especially after visiting the toilet, before handling food or preparing it for the table, and before eating. Our hands are also carriers. Literally, the most active we have. And in contact with all sorts of things all day long. If each of us would organize himself or herself into a handwashing league we would do a great deal toward protecting ourselves, and others, as well, from the disease producing germs that we pick up or carry around with us."

AID TO EDUCATION

Strong pressure in favor of federal aid to the country's public schools is expected at the next session of Congress, as a result of the financial pinch education is experiencing from the prolonged depression. That it is an altogether desirable tendency is unquestioned.

Youth everywhere seek avenues that will lead them onward and upward. They turn to schools and colleges, often to find that the increased tuition rates, abandoned courses, decreased opportunities for part-time employment and empty loan funds make more difficult their journey.

"The glory of America's schools," says Dr. John J. Tigert, former United States Commissioner of Education, now president of the University of Florida, "seems to me to lie in the fact that popular support is back of them. The community with a passion for learning will somehow provide facilities for it and utilize them, for it must love them, or it would not provide them, perhaps in the face of difficulties."

Dr. Tigert, evidently, questions the advisability of federal help for public schools.

Still, for all that, communities have faced serious financial problems. Some have piled up fiscal deficits. Many have sought to solve their problems as fairly and wisely as possible. It were well, however, for some to pause and reflect that as schools decrease their budgets and their service, the increased idleness and misdirection of the young will undoubtedly prove detrimental.

If necessary, we believe federal aid for education should be given. Economy in the expenditure of public funds is necessary. Waste should not be tolerated. It is, however, vital to the welfare of society that schools and the means of enlightenment, culture and spiritual growth, be not curtailed. Many things are more costly in their absence than when established and maintained by public funds. One of them is education.

TIGER GETS A JOLT

Commenting on the fact that "this is a bad day for political bosses," the Baltimore Sun draws attention to the severe jolt Tammany got last week in the primaries.

"In New York," says The Sun, "Tammany, as the result of something approaching a debacle, is confronted by a revolt of a number of its stalwarts and the loss of three of its district leaders in addition to suffering a stinging defeat—that of its candidate for comptroller."

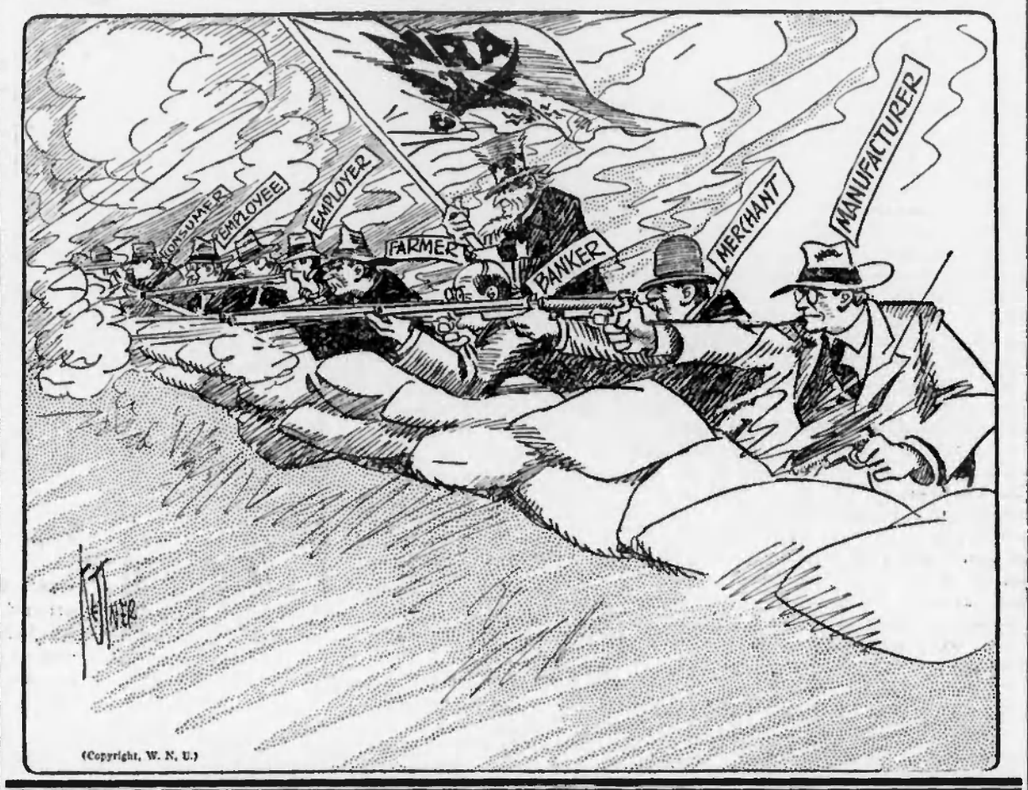
Truly this does not seem to be a good year for political bosses. It has become the fashion to throw scares into the leaders who control city politics. Tammany is one of the latest to experience this sensation. Even though the bosses did succeed in nominating Mayor O'Brien, they are not happy. The reason is that Frank J. Prial won the nomination for comptroller by a plurality of 80,000. Prial was anti-Tammany.

There is more to this setback for Tammany in New York. It is hinted that President Roosevelt may exert pressure to have Mayor O'Brien withdraw in favor of Joseph V. McKee, who made such a good record as acting-mayor when Jimmie Walker quit rather suddenly. In the meanwhile, more distressing to the Tammany chieftains, the Fusion movement headed by Major LaGuardia seems to be making some progress. It is bound to benefit by the seeming confusion existing among the Tammanyites.

To lose a primary election is an indication that Tammany is weakening. Tammany has big breaks in its own ranks. Tammany cannot afford a primary failure such as this one was. An army that is united can afford an occasional failure, but Tammany, with breaks in its own ranks, the worst may be expected for the Tiger.

Mr. Parley DeBerry and daughter, of Terra Alta, spent Tuesday afternoon in Oakland on business.

A Solid Line of Attack



PIGS AND CATFISH

Hush little porker, don't you squeal,
You may be a catfish, in the new deal.

According to a recent Associated Press dispatch under a Kansas City date line, a large part of the pigs slaughtered at St. Joseph, Mo., and East St. Louis, Ill., under the government's pork reduction program, has been thrown into the Mississippi and Missouri rivers, while those purchased at Kansas City are being converted in edible pork and fertilizer. It was estimated also by Frank Hunter, Sr., representative of the American Institute of Meat Packers, that about $332,000 of the $510,000 paid by the government at East St. Louis, in the premium hog market, was expended on meat which was thrown away. A major part of the pigs killed at St. Joseph, it is said, has been thrown into the Missouri River.

Now the catfish in the Missouri and Mississippi rivers are famed in song and story for their delicacy and racy flavor. Just how they will grow and wax even fatter on a diet of Secretary Wallace's premium pork remains to be seen, but the prospects ought to be favorable, and we expect to hear even more eloquent stories than usual this season about the size and eating qualities of the catfish caught along the banks of the two historic rivers.

But this isn't all. According to a United Press dispatch from Chicago, "where breezes blow west or south, residents of three Chicago suburbs have pungent reminders of Uncle Sam's plan for slaughtering thousands of pigs to increase hog prices. Complaints on file here told of 'indescribably revolting' odors wafted by winds which blow over the carcasses of animals dumped in the Markham yards of the Illinois Central Railroad."

"Packers," continued the United Press, "said the animals had been deodorized before they were dumped. Complainants disagreed. No one knew what would be done with the millions of pounds of pigs already dumped, but officials promised that hereafter carcasses would be taken at least 200 miles from Chicago."

So the government's hog-price raising program seems to be continuing. It will doubtless be popular with the horned fish slipping sinuously through the muddy waters of the Mississippi and the Missouri, even if it is in bad odor in Chicago.

A great many people decry what they term this ruthless wastage of good food. But it seems that the farmers responded more enthusiastictly than expected to the proposal of the government to buy their pigs at twice the market price—which by the way is just about what the government usually pays for what it buys. As a result more little pigs came to market than could be converted into human food and the fish-feeding and production of bad odors was a necessary complement to the plan.

If a big surplus of pork products is built up by government purchases, a great many people are wondering whether it will not hang as a depressing cloud over the hog market just as the mountain of government wheat purchased by the late lamented Farm Board acted as a drag on the wheat market for so many long months.

To turn the pork products over to the Red Cross to feed the hungry during the coming winter would seem like a sensible and humane thing to do. But this would defeat the purpose of the administration in buying the pigs, which is to increase hog prices for the farmer. For the pork turned over to the Red Cross would displace the supply which that organization would have to buy anyhow, so that the same old surplus would still be with us.

So, once started on its program of getting the little pigs to market there seems nothing for the government to do but to feed the catfish and furnish an official, if undesirable, odor for the Century of Progress.

It will be noted that while disposing of their pigs to Uncle Sam, the farmers are not availing themselves of the administration's invitation to sell their brood sows to the government, too. There is sound reasoning in this. If the government's pig dumping program temporarily raises the price of hogs, the farmers, with their brood sows on the job, will be ready to raise another bumper crop of pigs next spring—another crop to sell to the government at premium prices. And so on through the years.

All of which should remind us of the old saying that it takes a pretty hefty man to life himself over the fence by his own bootstraps.

Judge Rutherford In Person

ALL NATIONS are now in "the valley of decision". The peoples must now decide whether they will follow "blind leaders of the blind" and "fall into the ditch" of world catastrophe or follow the divine Word and the way of escape it points out.

May the people now get the true knowledge of the true God and his purpose concerning man? Is there a false god who has deceived the people and turned the whole world into a trap, and who is responsible for the present world woe and waste yet to come?

JUDGE RUTHERFORD, of New York City, will discuss these vital questions over a nation-wide chain of radio stations. There is not another writer on earth today whose writings are so widely distributed and read—over 140,000,000 copies since 1921—not another public speaker whose voice is heard weekly by eager multitudes over so great a number of radio stations.

Advised to Fight Peach Tree Borer

Orchard owners are advised at this time to begin operations against the peach tree borer by applying Paradichlorobenzene crystals, according to Dr. Ernest N. Cory, State Entomologist of Maryland. It is important that the Paradichlorobenzene, known also as P. D. B., crystal gas and P. C. B., be applied at this time of the year as the crystals volatilize and generate the gas necessary to kill the borer larvae at a temperature of seventy degrees. Further information can be obtained from the county agent.

'NEW DEAL' IN TRANSPORTATION BRINGS AIR SPEEDS TO EARTH

WHILE the Blue Eagle of the NRA is busy these days forwarding a new industrial era, science, calling for a "new deal" in transportation to meet the accelerated pace, is bringing air speeds down to earth. Hidebound conservatives may stick to their conviction that air travel has its hazards, but with engineers now adapting the streamline principle of airplane design to boats, railroad trains and motor cars, Twentieth Century Americans soon will be seeing the country at a speed of nearly two miles a minute whether from a transcontinental air liner or the cushions of modern earth-bound speedsters. Ordinary citizens, statesmen, baby chicks, grocery orders and spare parts will go whisking along the surface of the earth with almost the speed of the night air mail. Above, left, a new tear-drop, three-wheeled automobile capable of a speed of 120 miles an hour. Right, a new air transport, hailed as the latest achievement of streamlining in air planes, on its initial flight. It is used on one of the transcontinental air lines. Lower right, modern streamlined train now under construction at Philadelphia for a transcontinental railroad. It is expected to travel at a speed of 120 miles per hour. Lower left, blocks of wood used in actual wind tunnel tests, illustrating how streamlining lessens air resistance, greatly increasing speed, through elimination of back drafts and unnecessary air turbulence.

H. G. WELLS WRITES OF LIFE IN 2106 A. D.

No skyscrapers will be standing two centuries hence, prophecies H. G. Wells, British historian and novelist. They will have been demolished to make way for larger, finer, more livable cities. Social life will be organized around public clubs in which will be grouped sports halls, perpetual news cinemas, studios and social centers. In the current Rotarian Magazine Mr. Wells sketches a graphic preview of the world of 2106 A. D. as he will give it in a history written as of that year.

"The twenty-first century," he says, re-discovered an experience of the nineteenth century and the first centuries of the Christian era, a discovery also made by Alexander the Great, that it is much easier to build great modern cities in new places than to modernize the old centers of activity. And the more vital these old centers remained, the more difficult was their reconstruction. New York was typical of this lag in rebuilding. Up to quite recently Lower New York was the world's most old fashioned city, unique in its gloomy antiquity. The last of the ancient skyscrapers, the Empire State building, is even now under demolition in 2106!"

Mr. Wells sees a new era of homes, quickly erected and even more quickly demolished. "We no longer think it meet," he wries, "to wear another man's abandoned house than to wear the old clothes of the dead."

And speaking of clothes, he recalls the filthy twentieth century, when "men would wear their underclothes for years, having them painfully washed out, dried, ironed and returned weekly, and they would wear their complex outer garments with all the old fastenings, buttons, straps, buckles, and so forth, sometimes for years. They had to be made of dark fabrics with broken patterns to conceal their griminess." But in the new day, he goes on, clothes are scanty and healthful, and are replaced at least every three days by new garments. Nothing is washed. Laundries are forgotten. Cobblers are unknown.

And in the world of 2106, travel becomes the simplete of matters. Mr. Wells sees the ordinary man of that day arranging overnight for a vacation to the ends of the earth. Off he goes in the clothes he wears, armed only with his wallet, his identification papers and perhaps a memorandum book or something he may desire to read. Whatever else he is likely to need he is likely to find on his way. Everyone moves about freely—and poverty is something about which one reads in history books.

LET'S START WITH BUYING POWER

According to General Johnson there is no thought of returning to the "fantastic economic conditions" of the times of Calvin Coolidge, yet President Roosevelt is saying often that the goal of prices and buying power is that which prevailed in 1926.—The Springfield Union.

NATIONAL AFFAIRS

By FRANK P. LITSCHERT

The NRA drive in political circles is now being compelled, for the time being at least, to share the spotlight with Old Man Inflation. Every day now we see in the public press interviews by prominent men and editorial speculation on the possibilities of inflation. On just what would happen, were we to have currency inflation, there is of course no general agreement. Those opposed to the method point to the unfortunate experiences of Germany and other nations in which inflation was permitted to run riot. The inflationists tell us that Germany's trouble was due to the fact that she did not control inflation. The anti-inflationists counter with the reply that once the plan is put into effect it is impossible to control the amount of inflation for the reason that each "shot" requires a subsequent more powerful one to prevent collapse, until finally collapse comes anyhow. Germany, they add, did not intend to have uncontrolled currency expansion either when she embarked on a program of inflation.

The big demand for inflation now is coming from the wheat farmers of the west and the cotton farmers of the south, who say that the prices of their product, under the NRA have not risen as fast as the things they have to buy. They are sure that inflation is the only remedy for this condition. Whether or not that is true, remains open to question. If we once embark on inflation there is no assurance that the price of the commodities the farmer has to buy will not continue to rise as fast as the price of those the farmer has to sell. Certainly in a short time the thing would equalize itself and the farmer would be not better off compared to the rest of the country, than he was before. And it is more than possible that he might, in the long run, be infinitely worse off, due to the disruption of general stability.

Now with inflation one of the principal topics of the hour, it is interesting to note the view of foreign "experts" on the American situation. It is generally believed in London and Paris, by students of American affairs, that we are sooner or later in for a period of experimental inflation. They take the view that our recovery is not coming fast enough under the recovery act, and that the administration will be forced by political pressure and the approach of a new session of Congress, to go in for some kind of inflation. They are counting on our impatience as a nation to bring this about. The late fall of the dollar on the European exchanges is said by many authorities to be due to the expectation that there will be inflation in America, which has induced foreign financial interests to sell the dollar in the hope of reaping large profits when inflation comes to Uncle Sam. The weakness of the dollar is probably due in some part, however, to the flight of capital from America, which is said to have been going on for some little time, this, too, in anticipation of inflation. If and when Americans turn their American money into European money or securities there is, of course, a natural weakening of the dollar. How much of this there has been is, of course, problematical.

What the outcome of it all will be remains to be seen. Most Americans are hoping that the rate of recovery will be accelerated again real soon, so that anything more radical than credit inflation can be avoided. Of course an increase in the price of farm products would greatly lessen the agitation for inflation. The mere discussion of inflation is enough to cause a spurt in the price of wheat and cotton, but there is the inevitable reaction when the talk is not followed by real inflation. In past depressions the agitation for inflation has usually come at the end of the hard times, and the defeat of the inflation campaign has usually marked the beginning of better times. Let us hope that such will be the case in the closing of 1933 and the beginning of 1934.

HABAKKUK

Standing at the crossroads of the world, Judah and Israel were in the path of every marauding host that marched to battle. It would have been well-nigh impossible to avoid clashes with the Assyrian, Babylonian and Egyptian armies, even though their national integrity remained unbroken and their loyalty to Jehovah undisturbed by idolatry and other forms of wickedness.

Habakkuk is thought to have uttered his prophecy between 625 and 600 B. C. Many important events were taking place in the Gentile world at this time. Babylon gained her independence from Assyria and destroyed Ninevah. Another evidence of the Babylonian supremacy in the ancient world of this period was the defeat of Egypt in the battle of Garchmish.

In 586 the Babylonians invaded Judah, burned Jerusalem and carried away the chief of the rulers and nobility as captives to Babylon. Just before the destruction of Jerusalem, Habakkuk complains to God that his nation should be destroyed by a nation more wicked than themselves, as the instrument of the Divine wrath. He is assured that Babylon and her gods would yet be destroyed, and that Judah's God should eventually prevail in the whole earth. Brute force was not to be the arbiter of human destiny. Righteousness would finally exalt the nation and the earth "filled with the knowledge of the Lord, as the waters cover the sea."

Faith is the keyword of this book. As interpreted in Habakkuk's message, faith is the ability to feel sure of final victory despite present defeat. Jehovah's people are destroyed but it is not forever. Jehovah cannot be permanently defeated; He will yet be triumphant, and then will be a glorious future; it may be delayed a long, long time, but it is sure to come. "The righteous shall live by faith."

This prophet denounces with great boldness dishonesty, covetousness, bloody building enterprises, idolatry and the debauchery of his people. Chapter 2:15 has a very modern application: "Woe unto him that giveth his neighbor drink, that puttest the bottle to him, and makest him drunken also."

He paints a glorious word picture of Jehovah in his third chapter, beginning with the ninth verse: "Thou didst cleave the earth with rivers. The mountains saw thee and they trembled: the overflowing water passed by: the deep uttered his voice, and lifted up his hands on high. The sun and moon stood still in their habitation: at the light of thine arrows as they went, and at the shining of thy glittering spear."

Contrasting this impotence of idols with the omnipotence of Jehovah, he exclaims: "The Lord is in His holy temple: let all the earth keep silence before Him." The prophecy closes with a paen of praise and confidence even though famine be in the land: "Although the fig tree shall not blossom, neither shall fruit be on the vines; the labor of the olive shall fail, and the fields shall yield no meat, yet I will rejoice in the Lord, I will joy in the God of my salvation."

Here's what YOU CAN DO to help President Roosevelt's National Administration Recovery Plan

MAYBE you're wondering just what all this talk of NRA means, and if there's some place in the plan for you. There IS. Here's the dope.

Business is better. All over the country, men are going back to work.

"FINE", says the President, "AS FAR AS IT GOES."

But, the President thinks that unemployment and business can pick up much faster. The NRA (National Recovery Administration) has worked out a plan to speed things up. The President wants YOUR help to make it work 100%.

You are asked to try the plan from now until the end of the year.

In a nut-shell, this is what he urges:

"Split up the existing work to put more men on the payroll and raise the wages for the shorter working-shift so that no worker is getting less than a living wage."

Everybody will give up something. Everybody will gain something in the end.

The worker is asked to accept a shorter working week to give some neighbor a chance to earn his living. He will work less; have more time for play; and fewer unemployed relatives will be dependent on his help.

Business is asked to split-up work and add to payrolls so that jobs and pay envelopes can take the place of charity and contributions this winter. Present profits may be temporarily sacrificed while next year's customers are being built.

Never before has there been such a simple and definite plan for wiping out unemployment and restoring the purchasing power of all the people. If we all join together, act at once, unemployment might easily be licked by Labor Day!

Sign the agreement. Display the NRA Members seal if you're a business man. Display the NRA Consumer's seal if a consumer. Everybody has a part to play.

THE EMPLOYERS PART

Sign the President's Reemployment Agreement. Join with every other employer in the land to make jobs throngh shorter hours and distribnting work. Raise wages to the minimnm suggested by the President, at least. Abolish child labor. Cooperate with employees in peaceful adjustment of opinions. Remember—an unemployed man is a poor customer for you in the long run. More and fatter pay envelopes is the best way to boost the public's buying power and your own business.

THE PUBLIC'S PART

Support those employers and employees who do their parts to pnt breadwinners back to work. Patronize the stores and services displaying the NRA sign; it means they fully comply with the President's plan.

THE EMPLOYEES PART

Do your best on the job. Share your hours with the neighbor who has no work now. Cooperate with the NRA to make this plan a success. Remember—more can be done now for workers through this cooperation of 125,000,000 people than can ever be done by discord and dispute.

SIGN-TO-DAY

MT. LAKE PARK

Crystal Spring Discovery

Concerning the discovery of Crystal Spring, we must bow to the preponderance of primary evidence and acknowledge that "Native" has proven that we, like the spring, are all wet. However, it was a good story until its truth was successfully challenged, and at that may serve the purpose of stimulating the memories of other "old timers" and thus enable us to piece together the early intimate history of the Park. "Native" has our thanks for the correction.

We have known for some time that Dr. Logan Carr was an adept at jig-saw puzzle making, but until recently we did not know what he did with the dozens he has made during the past year or so. We finally found out.

Some years ago, when the craze first started, Dr. Carr, for a diversion, made a number of puzzles with a foot-driven saw and gave them to his friends. Then, when the interest in jig-saw puzzles was revived, he conceived the idea they would be just the thing with which convalescents in hospitals and in homes could while away many a lonesome hour. He secured a motor-driven apparatus and began work in earnest, since which time he has made approximately 150 intricate and beautiful puzzles, cut from pictures pasted on 3-ply board, which will not warp, and has distributed them among his friends, shut-ins in their homes and among Johns Hopkins and other hospital patients. Indeed, some have gone to far-off China and a consignment is now in the hands of a Chinese girl student-nurse and will be taken home hy her this fall on her return. Of course Dr. Carr receives nothing in return—except the satisfaction of bringing happiness to others.

The memory of poets, authors, heroes and statesmen have been perpetuated in stone, marble and bronze in all ages. We doubt, however, if the memory of any is more worthy of perpetuation than that of Dr. Alexander L. Wade, of Morgantown, West Virginia, who founded the first graded school system, thus bringing order out of chaos. On this subject an illustrated article appeared in last week's Republican.

It might be a fitting tribute if a monument could be erected on or near the site of his achievement, to be paid for, not out of public money, but from funds raised by a "penny subscription" among the pupils of the public schools.

The many friends of Representative Jennings Randolph, of West Virginia, will note with pleasure the approvel with which his proposal that the government purchase ten million tons of coal to be distributed among the needy this winter, has been received in West Virginia and Maryland. Mr. Randolph, you know, is an annual summer visitor here during the tennis tournament.

IN DAYS OF OLD

FORTY YEARS AGO

Henry Weber left at The Republican office two mammoth stalks of celery, measuring twenty-six inches high and nine inches in circumference at the base.

Mr. Stephens, jeweler, of Confluence, Pa., purchased the entire plant of the Friendsville Collaborator, a weekly newspaper, and moved it to Confluence.

A young man at Friendsville saw the World's fair on $29, after deducting $13.60 for car fare. He stayed one week.

At the Garrett county Republican convention in Oakland the following nominations were made: for Senator, Dr. R. A. Ravenscroft; for Clerk of Circuit court, E. Z. Tower; for County Treasurer, E. E. Sollars; for House of Delegates, A. F. George and George J. Kolb; for Sheriff, Charles Wegman; for County Commissioners, Ira E. Friend, Isaac Abernathy and Henry Weitzell; for County Surveyor, John Harned. Edward H. Sincell was chairman of the convention and William Sweet, secretary.

[Henry Weitzell, candidate for Commissioner, died three days prior to the election and a committee named Thomas Layman in his stead.—Editor The Republican.]

Chestnuts were making their appearance on the market, being worth about $6 per bushel.

At the M. E. conference George W. Kepler was assigned to Oakland; C. E. Feather, Deer Park; C. W. Fox, Friendsville; J. H. Enlow, Grantsville.

TWENTY YEARS AGO

The largest of the three pumping stations of the town was burned but water users were not inconvenienced.

Vacant schools in the county for which there had been no applicants were Yoder, Dry Run, White Rock, Red Oak, Piney Run, Fairview and Ridgeley.

Truman W. Casteel became the owner of the Oakland Dairy Association's property, consisting of the creamery and ice plant, purchasing it for $6,300 at a mortgagee's sale.

Minner's Schoch, Crellin, was operated upon for appendicitis at Western Maryland hospital.

Heavy frosts for several mornings cooked everything in the gardens. There was a slight snowstorm at North Glade.

Repairs were being made on the Oakland Grammar school.

E. R. Jones located in Oakland for practice of law and was associated with G. Semmes Hamill, Jr., in the First National Bank building.

Fish in the Potomac river were dying on account of the low stage of the water and the pollution from the mines.

Signs of Autumn

Signs of autumn have been leisurely in their approach, despite August days with the feeling of October. The summer itself was late and indecisive, so autumn may he expected to lag. But there are signs seen now, unmistakable omens of the season's change.

Sumac is turning scarlet and its "buckthorn" spikes of frult havelost their crimson luster. Dogwood leaves are showing tinges of October red. The elms are becoming rusty. Sear leaves of the sycamore begin to scatter in the breeze. The poison ivy's foilage is taking on its autumn color.

Blackberry patches, long since picked clean by birds and boys, begin to glow in forgotten fence corners. Queen Anne's lace, the untamed carrot, lifts flat-topped heads of brown above its withered, fern-like leaves. Jack-in-the-pulpit is gone, and where he stood now lie clusters of bright red berries. Walnuts hang fat and rusty green, waiting for the frosts. The graceful stems of the deceptive ink berries bow beneath a load of purple fruit. Even the goldenrod begins to look shabby.

The signs of autumn are most unmistakable in the evening, when great flocks of birds, full of chatter and restlessness, gather in the trees or on the wires, only to go winging off in long and scattering lines for any cause or none at all. A mist has hung over the hills at sunset each evening for the last week, a forerunner of Indian summer days ahead. And the sun itself sinks out of sight before seven-thirty. Summer is gone. Indian summer is on the way and then autumn cannot be far in the future.—Philadelphia Ledger.

BETHEL

The first meeting of the P.-T. Association of Bethel school will be held on Tuesday, October 2. An interesting program will be presented.

Dr. E. C. Peck, health officer, and Mrs. Yolanda Cole, health nurse, visited Bethel school Monday. Many mothers were present with their children, all of whom were examined by the officials.

NICE WANTS COMPLETE AUDIT OF STATE'S BOOKS

Republican Candidate Outlines Platform for Campaign

Assailing the present Democratic administration of Maryland, Harry W. Nice, in a statement issued at Baltimore on Saturday promised, if given the gubernatorial nomination on the Republican ticket to "advocate and obtain an audit of every financial book of the State."

Nice, after voicing the hope that he receive the nomination without a primary struggle, outlined a platform of nine points for a party campaign. He was one of the principal speakers at the opening of the Third Ward Republican Club headquarters Saturday night.

Assails Banking Conditions

The banking conditions in Maryland also came under the fire of the Republican leader, after he had asked "just the reason for the placing of almost 50 per cent of the State's available cash of over $8,000,000 in four banks, now in distress and so smeared with politics as to make the people's money unavailable."

"I think sufficient intelligence can be found," he asserted, "to write a banking law to supercede the present archiac, loosely drawn and wholly inefficient ones, which only feebly attempt to provide protection of the people's money."

In asking for an audit of every financial book of the State, Nice said it should be done with "particular emphasis upon an audit dealing with the receipts, expenditures and activities of the roads, automobile and conservation departments."

Would Abolish Tax Exemptions

He would seek "the abolition of the many laws now providing tax exemtion to many people and varied industries, involving millions of dollars of assessable property at present being made up hy and paid for in the way of taxes by the small property owner."

He would wish "illumination on the reason for a 22-cent tax rate based upon a patently hypocratical, downright dishonest assessment of real estate" and would try to find out "why have the expenditures of the State increased from $17,000,000 in 1922 to $40,500,000 in 1932."

He also would insist "upon accomplishment of a complete, absolute divorcement of the school system from political control, manipulation and influence."

The last point of his platform asserted he "would feel myself obliged to insist upon the use by State departments of Maryland products, with special reference to the cosumption of Maryland coal.

"Even though our coal may not be the cheapest, it is of the best and its purchase would insure functioning of the mines, wages to our miners and probably in that particular section of Western Maryland would prove almost as efficient as the great NRA."

COUNTY HAS HAD A GOOD GROWING SEASON–CARTER

Absence of Autumn Frosts Account for Long Growing Season, County Agent Says

The general crop outlook for Garrett county for 1933 is excellent, despite the fact of the late frost in the spring and the yield of oats being the poorest in the history of the county, John H. Carter, county agent, stated this morning.

Oats is a cool weather and moisture loving crop and the hot weather in the month of May ruined the grain, it is said.

The hay yield has been one of the best on record. There is an excellent corn crop and many corn cribs which have been empty for years will be filled because the grain has been enabled to mature, due to the lateness of a killing frost this fall.

When a killing frost came on June 15 it was feared that crops in general would be poor, but according to Mr. Carter, those who replanted are having one of the best yields in their history.

Wheat, although never considered a large crop, is said to be the best in many years.

Fruit as a general rule is plentiful, but the appearance is never considered the best in this section. The taste, however, especially of apples and the smaller fruits, connot be equalled.

The potato crop in Garrett county this year will be one of the most important in the history of farm production. Although in some communities plants died early those who used a spray are reaping the benefit in a better crop, and there will be a better than the average yield.

Although a severe storm from the east damaged the growing buckwheat the yield is said to have been fair and of excellent quality.

Truck gardens have yielded good returns where replanting was made after June 15.

Taking the county as a whole, Mr. Carter said, this had been one of the most successful growing seasons in its history. With the exception of the potato crop practically everything has been harvested and the silos and barns are full, and those of the farmers who planted good seed are now prepared for the coming winter, with plenty to eat, even if they do not have much money.

Scouts Pass Eleven Merit Badges At Court of Honor

Eleven merit badges were awarded to seven first and second class scouts of Oakland Troop, No. 1, Boy Scouts of America, at the regular meeting of the court of honor on Monday evening.

Members of the court present included H. L. Jones, chairman; H. A. Loraditch, vice-chairman; Walter W. Dawson and George H. Hanst, scoutmaster.

Membership cards were also received from national headquarters for Joseph Johnson and Wellington Smouse, and they will be regularly enrolled at Friday's meeting of the troop.

Lot of Oysters Consumed

Just about nine barrels of oysters, five bushels of shucked oysters and one barrel of steamed crabs were consumed at an oyster feed last Saturdoy afternoon at the Mt. Airy Canning plant at Loch Lynn Heights. At least that was the amount provided by Senator H. N. Fooks, president of the company, and there were very few left.

All pea and corn growers throughout the county who had furnished the plant this year with crops, and a number of others were invited. Three professional shuckers were kept busy during the affair, and oysters could be had in any style.

About 200 were present. The occasion was also the pay-off, and about $11,000 was paid out to farmers of the county. It was also stated that much more than this amount went for labor during the canning season.

POTATO SHOW TO BE HELD HERE OCTOBER 27 AND 28

Will Be Fourth Annual Event; Classes Open to Everybody

The fourth annual county-wide potato show will be held in Oakland on Friday and Saturday, October 27 and 28, John H. Carter, county agent, has announced.

There will be classes for anybody who grows potatoes and cares to enter, Mr. Carter stated, which will very likely include the certified, seed class for both adults and boys, and the commercial class, and possibly others.

Mr. Carter is planning to have more educational exhibits at the show this year showing potato diseases, the difference between grading and sizing, storage, etc. The place for holding the show and the list of premiums will be announced next week.

These potato shows have been held for the purpose of arousing more interest and improving the potato industry in the county by distributing better seed and increasing the yield.

There have been 80 or more exhibitors for the past two years, and more are expected this year. People who expect to exhibit at the show should pick their entries at the time of digging, Mr. Carter suggested.

He said there was a special need in Maryland for thousands of volunteer workers as the annual roll call begins October 14. The Maryland chapters are seeking to enroll 65,000 new members for the State.

Mrs. E. Z. Tower, county chairman, could not be located this morning to learn the county's quota this year and the local set-up. The roll call is usually held in November, from Armistice Day until Thanksgiving.

NEW FEATURES PROMISED FOR HALLOWE'EN JUBILEE

Mammoth Mummers Parade Is Still to be Main Attraction

While the mammoth Mummers parade on Hallowe'en will remain the biggest drawing card for the annual celebration sponsored by the Oakland Fire Department on October 31, special new features are being planned by the committee in charge, according to Leo Helbig, chairman.

There will be the usual round dance in Offutt's Hall following the parade and a square dance, providing a suitable place can be obtained. The committee would not yet make public the new features.

The evening's festivities will begin with a mummers' parade at seven o'clock. There will be bands, drum corps, other organizations and individuals taking part, with a large number of prizes to be awarded for various costumes worn by those in the procession.

Oakland will be decorated with numerous colored lights and other things emblematic of the fall season and of Hallowe'en, the committee stated. Second street, from Alder street to Liberty, will be roped off, and the major portion of the merriment will take place within this area.

ONLY ROUTINE BUSINESS TRANSACTED BY COUNCIL

Mothers' Circle Delegation Wants Swimming Pool Built

Only routine business was transacted at the regular monthly meeting of the Mayor and Town Council on Monday evening, according to Grover C. Stemple, mayor.

A delegation from the Mothers' Circle appeared before the council requesting the erection of a swimming pool in Oakland for the children, but those appearing were told that the cost would be approximately $25,000, and that the town had no extra funds at this time.

In commenting upon the erection of a swimming pool, Mayor Stemple stated to a Republican reporter this morning that if finances could be raised in some way, the thing to do would be to make the swimming pool at the water farm property, near town, in connection with a golf course there. This would have to be financed by some group or organization, he stated.

Street Work About Completed

The street committee reported that work upon the streets of the town would be completed within the next few days. Green street is yet to be finished by R. F. C. labor, and when this is done, it will make quite a few stretches of new pavement for Oakland, parts of Fourth, Seventh and Pennington streets already having been improved.

A cement walk has also been completed on Third street in front of the James P. Treacy and Warnick properties, and repairs were ordered made to the west end of Center street, on the Swallow Falls road.

The monthly bills, amounting to $2,800, were ordered paid. The amount included payment for oil and chips with which the already improved roads were covered. This added top dressing is expected to last for three years. The next regular meeting will be held on Monday, November 6.

SENATOR J. ALLEN COAD VISITED HERE YESTERDAY

Pledges Full Measure of Economy Should He Become Fovernor of Maryland

CALLS ON REPUBLICANS

A matter of more or less political importance from the Democratic point of view was brought forcibly to mind yesterday when Senator J. Allen Coad of St. Mary's county, spent a few hours in town at which time he called upon some of his acquaintances here but passed up the local Democrats, especially the leaders, among whom was the chairman of the Democratic County Committee.

Senator Coad was accompanied by former Mayor Roland B. Duke, of Leonardtown. Last night the Senator was a dinner guest of State Senator J. Glenn Beall at Frostburg where he met a number of prominent citizens, including leaders in the Republican and Democrat parties.

Senator Coad, who has been prominently mentioned as a candidate for Governor of Maryland on the Democratic ticket, while he does not admit the fact, declared in an interview here yesterday afternoon:

"If I become a candidate for Governor, and this is in the air, I will make two promises to the people of the State:

First, to reduce the cost of State government by at least 25 per cent;

"Second, that under no circumstances and under no conditions would I be a candidate to succeed myself as Governor."

Senator Coad makes no hesitancy in stating that he believes the Ritchie administration has been extravagant in operation. He is a Democrat with fourteen years of service in the Maryland Legislature, and has been prominent in and out of the Maryland Assembly for many years.

"I am making a survey throughout this State," said Senator Coad, "with the purpose of contacting as many people as possible with the idea of learning, first hand, as to their idea of the conduct of the financial, economic and agricultural conditions as they actually exist.

"Further," said Senator Coad, "I have very definite convictions regarding the policy Maryland should pursue in reference to State expenditures during the next few years.

"I am firmly convinced that there must be a very sincere and honest effort made by all branches of the State government toward substantial reduction in State expenditures. As I see it, the people of this State, regardless of occupation or section, are finding it very difficult to meet their own individual private needs."

Oakland Band to Lead Pittsburghers in Forest Festival Parade

The Allegheny Tableland Council of the Chamber of Commerce of Pittsburgh will leave that city for Elkins, W. Va., on Thursday to participate in the fourth annual Mountain State Forest Festival, to be held there October 5, 6 and 7.

An escort of police will conduct the procession. All cars will be suitably decorated with Pittsburgh and U. S. flags.

In the parade on Friday the Pittsburghers' section will be led by a float done in black and silver, and the Gilbert-Brown Boys' Band of Oakland. An invitation to lead the group by the local band was received here last week by Mayor Grover C. Stemple.

Oakland Visited by Harry Nice

Harry W. Nice, of Baltimore, visited Oakland and Garrett county last Saturday and in the evening was host to a party of friends at a dinner at the William-James Hotel when Mr. Nice laid his claims for the Republican nomination for Governor before his guests. He was accompanied to Oakland by his nephew, Mr. Diall Nice, the return to Baltimore being made on Sunday morning.

Circuit Court Session Held Friday and Saturday

Friday morning Judge D. Lindley Sloan came to Oakland and reconvened the recessed term of the Circuit Court and heard and determined several civil causes set for a hearing at this time. Court finally adjourned Saturday evening when the Judge returned to Cumberland.

OAKLAND'S AFFAIRS SOLID

An Editorial

The people of Oakland ought to feel like holding a celebration on account of the excellent condition of their city affairs when they are brought face to face with the tragic plight of many other leading communities of the country.

During a recent convention of mayors in Chicago it was stated that hundreds of American cities are hopelessly insolvent, that many cities had interest obligations which they could not meet, and that the only way out for most of them would be to enter bankruptcy.

Oakland has been managed in a business-like manner. It pays its debts monthly, and, according to Mayor Grover C. Stemple, owes nothing except its bonded indebtedness. Its tax rate was lowered this year and by good management the town is on a sound financial basis, instead of being swamped with debt. Its credit is first class.

Many papers of nearby towns carry stories that street lights will have to be turned off, policemen and firemen laid off, and perhaps schools closed. They are indeed in dire financial straits.

Oakland should rejoice that its financial condition is sound.

$30,618.67 PAID OUT BY R. F. C. IN PAST 8 WEEKS

Itemized Account Has Been Prepared by Relief Administrator

For the past eight weeks the R. F. C. has given out $30,618.67 for labor projects in Garrett county, which is an average of $4.35 per week per family, for over 800 families who are depending upon this income for food and clothing.

An itemized account for the weeks since August 5 has been prepared by Miss Ethel Miller, relief administrator. The number of men on the payroll has varied from 769 on August 12 to 934 on September 9. The payroll for the first two weeks in August was less than $2,500 each week, but since that time it has been above the $4,000 mark. During the week of September 23,874 men received $4,284.20, which was an average of $4.81 per week per family.

The Oakland project is expected to be completed this week.

The men heretofore employed in Loch Lynn will be moved to the Pleasant Valley section near the farm of Otis Riley.

Miss Miller will go to Baltimore the latter part of this week to attend the monthly conference of all county welfare directors on Octrober 9. The meeting was called by Harry Greenstein, State relief director.

The offices of the Welfare board have been moved to the second floor of the First National Bank building.

Slight Frost Tuesday—Nothing Damaged Seriously

The first frost of the fall season descended on Tuesday morning but there was no injury to crops and vegetables that had not been gathered. Flowers were nipped slightly, but not killed.

The government thermometer at Weber's registered 32 degrees but it was stated a shift in the wind and the large amount of moisture in the air prevented a killing frost. The thermometer registered 39 on Sunday night and slightly lower on Tuesday night.

The amount of rainfall recorded for September was 4.39 inches which was said to be about average.

Frostburger Badly Hurt in Accident on Finzel Road

Gilbert Garlitz, 21, son of Mr. and Mrs. Norman Garlitz, Frostburg, was seriously injured late Saturday night when his car plunged from the Finzel road, in this county, and overturned at the bottom of an embankment.

He suffered a fractured skull, and was reported in a critical condition at Miners' hospital, Frostburg, where he was taken following the accident.

Two girls who were with Garlitz suffered minor injuries. They were treated at the Frostburg hospital. Officer J. R. Buckworth, of the State police, investigated the mishap.

SAUL IN DAMASCUS

LESSON TEXT—Acts 9:1-31.
GOLDEN TEXT—Therefore if any man be in Christ, he is a new creature: old things are passed away; behold, all things are become new. II Cor. 5:17.
PRIMARY TOPIC—Saul Learning to Love Jesus.
JUNIOR TOPIC—Saul Becoming Jesus' Friend.
INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOPIC—Saul Becomes a Christian.
YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOPIC—What Is Conversion?

I. Saul's Violent Hatred of the Lord's Disciples (vv. 1, 2).

He knew full well that unless the movement set on foot by Jesus was stopped it would supersede Judaism. He was ignorant of the genius of Christianity. He did not know that "the blood of martyrs is the seed of the church." Prosperity may ruin the church, but persecution never. Stephen's testimony intensified his hatred instead of softening his spirit.

II. Saul Kicking Against the Pricks (vv. 3-9).

The figure here is that of the eastern ox driver following the ox with a sharp iron fixed to the end of a pole. If the animal rebels and kicks against the sharp iron, it but injures itself.

1. A light from heaven (v. 3). The time had now come for the Lord to intervene. Saul was stricken with blindness and fell to the earth.

2. A voice from heaven (vv. 4, 5). This was the Lord's voice calling personally to Saul. In answer to Saul's inquiry, Jesus said, "I am Jesus, whom thou persecutest."

3. Saul's inquiry (v. 6). The dictator is now willing to be dictated to.

4. Christ's answer (v. 6). He told Saul to go into Damascus where information would be given him as to what he must do.

5. Saul entering Damascus (vv. 7-9). The savage persecutor went quite humbly into Damascus, led by his attendants where for three days he remained blind and fasted. The day is coming when all who oppose the work of God shall get a sight of the glory of the Son, either in salvation or in condemnation (Phil. 2:10, 11; Rev. 6:15-17).

III. Ananias Ministers to Saul (vv. 10-19).

1. Ananias' vision (vv. 10-12). He was instructed to go to Saul, given the name of the street and Saul's host.

2. Ananias' fear and hesitancy (vv. 13-17). He knew of Saul's ministry and the authority by which he came. The Lord encouraged him to go, assuring him that Saul was no longer an enemy but a chosen vessel to bear his name before the Gentiles.

3. Ananias' obedience (v. 17). He went to the house where Saul was staying, put his hand on his arm, and affectionately addressed him as brother. He informed Saul that the Lord had sent him with a twofold message.

a. "That thou mightest receive thy sight."

b. "Be filled with the Holy Ghost."

4. Saul baptized (vv. 18, 19). After Saul received his sight, Ananias baptized him. It was fitting that Saul should be baptized by one not having official rank, since his ministry as an apostle to the Gentiles was to be entirely independent of the twelve.

IV. Saul Preaching in Damascus (vv. 20-25).

1. What he preached (v. 20). He preached Christ, that he is the Son of God. This is the heart of the message of every minister and Sunday school teacher.

2. Where he preached (v. 20). It was in the synagogue. Because this was the place of assembly for the Jews, Saul took advantage of the opportunity to tell them that Jesus of Nazareth was the very Son of God.

3. The effect of his preaching (vv. 21-25).

a. People amazed (v. 21). They knew that the very one who had been the leader in persecuting the Christians in Jerusalem and had come to Damascus for the express purpose of bringing them bound to the chief priest, was now passionately advocating that which he had vehemently sought to destroy.

b. Jews confounded (v. 22). Saul increased in spiritual strength and knowledge so that he confounded the Jews, proving that Jesus was not only the Son of God, but their Messiah.

c. The Jews sought to kill him (vv. 23-25). Being unable to meet his skilful use of the Scriptures, they took counsel how that they might destroy him. So intent were they upon killing him that they watched the gate of the city day and night that they might take him. He escaped their wrath, being let down at night in a basket by the wall.

SCOOP'S COLUMN

By Scoop Hinkoff

These motor accidents certainly do get one excited. There's no doubt of it. Just the other day I was questioning a lady who had recently been in a wreck.

"My husband," she explained, "got incited and stepped on the celery instead of the brake puddle, so we had a head-in collusion. So our regulator was dentaled, the mud gutters was shuttered, the lanees of the headlands was smashed to smattereens, and the man had to come from the surface station with the whacker and tow us in.

"When we got to the barrage we found out one of the cinders was craekled and had to be wilted. And besides that, we had to get new pistols and a new commentator and a new correcting rod."

Up-To-Date

What the supposedly well-dressed woman about town might be wearing this fall. It's about as sensible as some of the things they put on their heads anyhow. Sez me—and maybe you.

Instead of subsidizing acreage reduction for the different growers, why not subsidize people like me. For instance, who wouldn't like to smoke twice as much tobacco, if they were paid for doing it, providing they smoked at all. And who wouldn't like to be paid for eating twice as many chickens as they do? That would take care of the overproduction of eggs.

And I could even be persuaded to wear more shirts than I do, if I were paid for throwing them away when they got dirty instead of having them washed and used over and over again.

And if I were paid for eating only fresh bread, I'd gladly buy more bread than I do. Wouldn't that be better than paying somebody for plowing under the cotton, or raising less wheat?

And I could make quite a lot over fresh pork sandwiches, if somebody would pay me for eating more piggies.

Who remembers the good old days when we bathed once a week by the kitchen stove in a galvanized tub and having ten bushels of potatoes, a barrel of flour and a couple of home-cured hams in the cellar, thought we were prosperous?

I don't.

The squirrel hunters around Mt. Lake Park had better look out for two reasons. First is that they don't want squirrels killed in that section. Second is that there is a monkey loose over there and if in the course of hunting they should happen to look up in a tree and spy that thing up there, there would be a couple of bootleggers shot for selling such stuff.

When the fire department was called last week-end to come to the Park and help catch a monkey, the one on the receiving end of the phone stated the fire department didn't go in for monkey business.

But they forgot. They mean business all the time except on Hallowe'en. And there'll be plenty of monkey business that night, with more than members of the fire department being the monkeys.

Last year it was a line-up of ragged looking men with a sign "We Want Work." This year the line-up is just as long, only they are carrying a different sign, "On Strik."

Last Sunday I heard two men talking of General Crook and his fights with the Indians. The time was just fifty years ago when the General was in the midst of his bloodthirsty battles with the redskins in the Dakotas. Just twenty-two years before I was born, if you want to know.

It doesn't seem possible that we are only that far removed from Indian fights. This country is still pretty young, I guess, which might account for the lack of judgment on the part of so many of our people.

From the way goose pimples have been hovering about me for the past few evenings, and early mornings, it would seem about the time to again bring up the question of a skating pond in the hotel grove.

Yes sir, it can't be long now.

Something Hot for the School Day Lunch

Does your child come home to lunch or does he carry lunch to school? Has the school a cafeteria? Does the school serve milk, or any part of a lunch for the children? This subject of school-day lunches is important to mothers, to teachers, and to every community, especially now as the school term begins. The school child's lunch has much to do with his health, his education, and his behavior, says the U. S. Department of Agriculture.

If your children come home at noontime you serve them a hot lunch, if you possibly can, or at least you serve them one hot dish. You give them at least one glass of milk to drink, unless the milk is used in soup or in cooking something else for lunch. That is one way to make sure each child, each growing boy or girl, gets a daily quota of at least a pint-and-a-half of milk, or 3 glasses a day. If the child cannot come home at noontime, and must carry his lunch, then the problem is one that taxes the mother's imagination, for the things that can be put in a carried lunch are not very numerous or of great variety. The box lunch must depend on sandwiches, and unless the child can carry a thermos of hot chocolate, or hot soup, or unless the school provides something hot, the box lunch offers, literally, only cold comfort, and a greater effort must be made to have it satisfying.

Occasionally one hot dish can be prepared at school. These are not too different and they are nutritious.

Cream of corn soup; split pea soup; oatmeal and potato soup; creamed hard-cooked eggs on toast or toasted crackers; whole wheat chowder; meat stew with vegetables; Spanish rice; creamed mixed vegetables; scalloped or creamed dried lima beans with crisp bacon.

But if you must resort to the cold box lunch, then here are some sandwich variations—always to be accompanied by milk in some form: Sliced hard-cooked eggs and salad dressing; thin slices of crisp broiled bacon may be added; chopped cooked beef, chopped pickle, salad dressing; broiled diced bacon, chopped raw mild onion, salad dressing; sliced boiled tongue, a very little horseradish; flaked salmon, chopped cabbage, a little pickle, salad dressing; cottage cheese on one slice, jam, jelly, honey, marmalade or conserve on the other; shredded cabbage or other salad greens, chopped nuts, salad dressing; baked beans or cooked lima beans, mixed with chili sauce or tomato catsup.

Whole Wheat Chowder

Two cups diced carrots, 1 pint boiling water, ½ cup diced salt pork, 4 tablespoons chopped onion, 1 tablespoon flour, 1 pint milk, 2 cups cooked whole wheat, 1 teaspoon salt, pepper, 1 tablespoon chopped parsley. Cook the carrots in the boiling water until tender. Fry the salt pork until crisp, remove it from the fat and cook the onions in the fat. Stir in the flour and cook a few minutes longer. Mix all the ingredients in the upper part of a double boiler, stir until well blended and cook for about ten minutes.

Judge Rutherford In Person

ALL NATIONS are now in "the valley of decision". The peoples must now decide whether they will follow "blind leaders of the blind" and "fall into the ditch" of world catastrophe or follow the divine Word and the way of escape it points out.

May the people now get the true knowledge of the true God and his purpose concerning man? Is there a false god who has deceived the people and turned the whole world into a trap, and who is responsible for the present world woe and waste yet to come?

JUDGE RUTHERFORD, of New York City, will discuss these vital questions over a nation-wide chain of radio stations. There is not another writer on earth today whose writings are so widely distributed and read—over 140,000,000 copies since 1921—not another public speaker whose voice is heard weekly by eager multitudes over so great a number of radio stations.

PLEASE TAKE NOTICE!

While our future plan of advertising for both stores has not been fully worked out, we feel sure that we will not cause any confusion to our customers. Never-the-less, may we suggest that whatever the plan might be, the merchandise as advertised will be found at one or the other of our stores.

With the exception of the square at the bottom of this page, all other merchandise advertised will be found at our New Store in The First National Bank Building.

With a BIG FALL and WINTER SALE

STARTING ON SATURDAY, OCTOBER 7TH, 1933

Unusual? Of course it is, to stage a sales event like this just at the beginning of the Fall Season. It is being done for but two reasons. First, that early buying has made possible the following prices, and secondly, for the sole purpose of bringing to our Brand New Store, where only Brand New Merchandise will be displayed, every Woman and Child in this section!

This New Store is being opened for the convenience of the Women and Children—to give them the advantage of making their purchases under less crowded conditions, and to provide for them an Exclusive Store wherein they might be more comfortable while purchasing new wearing apparel or merely shopping around.

We extend a cordial invitation to every Woman and Child to visit our New Store on the opening day and inspect our New Line of Merchandise, bought especially for our opening date and positively never before shown at our other store.

Our Green Street Store will remain open where business will be conducted as usual. There we will always provide wearing apparel for every member of the family and the usual low prices will prevail.

While our Alder Street Store is intended for the Ladies and Children, and where prices will always be low, we extend the same invitation to the men, and will promise them every courtesy and assistance should they desire to make a purchase in the ladies' or children's department.

CORPORATION FARMING WILL NOT LAST, SAYS SENATOR CAPPER

Will farms run by corporations on mass production principles crowd out the small farmer? Senator Arthur Capper believes they will not.

"The reasons," the Kansas Senator writes in the current Rotarian Magazine, "why the corporation farm will not become well established as a practice in this country reach much deeper than temporary economic difficulties, vicious as they may be. The great strength of the individually operated farm is in its competitive adaptability. The weakness of the corporation farming enterprise lies in its inability swiftly to change or materially to modify its production program.

"Failures of corporation farms during the last two years, and they have been numerous, were caused by the failure of the one source of income on which they depended. They cannot happen on a farm where there are numerous sources of income, including livestock and poultry. The corporation must have income or all activity will cease.

"Hired management, even though expert, cannot entirely offset the gains that are certain to accrue from the operation of a farm by a man who is personally interested in making a success of it, even though he may not be an expert. There enters the human equation, and it is a vital one," he continues. "The fact is that the corporation farm does no better job than the good, average farmer in crop production, and at a lower cost.

"One aspect of the question, which has nothing to do with the conflict between the individual farm and the corporation farm, or the ability of one or the other to survive," he points out, "nevertheless is of general concern."

"The United States has been built on a foundation consisting of two parts. One is the great industrial and manufacturing development. The other is an independent, vigorous, virile agriculture, made up of individual families. The farming industry is fundamentally conservavtive because it is individualistic. It is anti-communistic, anti-socialstic. It is essentially democratic and I hold it to be the greatest bulwark of the democratis form of government that the United States possessses."

AN INSURGENT PROBLEM

There have been a great many guesses, since the last election, of what was to become of the so-called progressive Republicans who supported President Roosevelt so valiantly in the last campaign. Are they to remain progressive "Republicans" or to be incorporated in the Democratic Party?

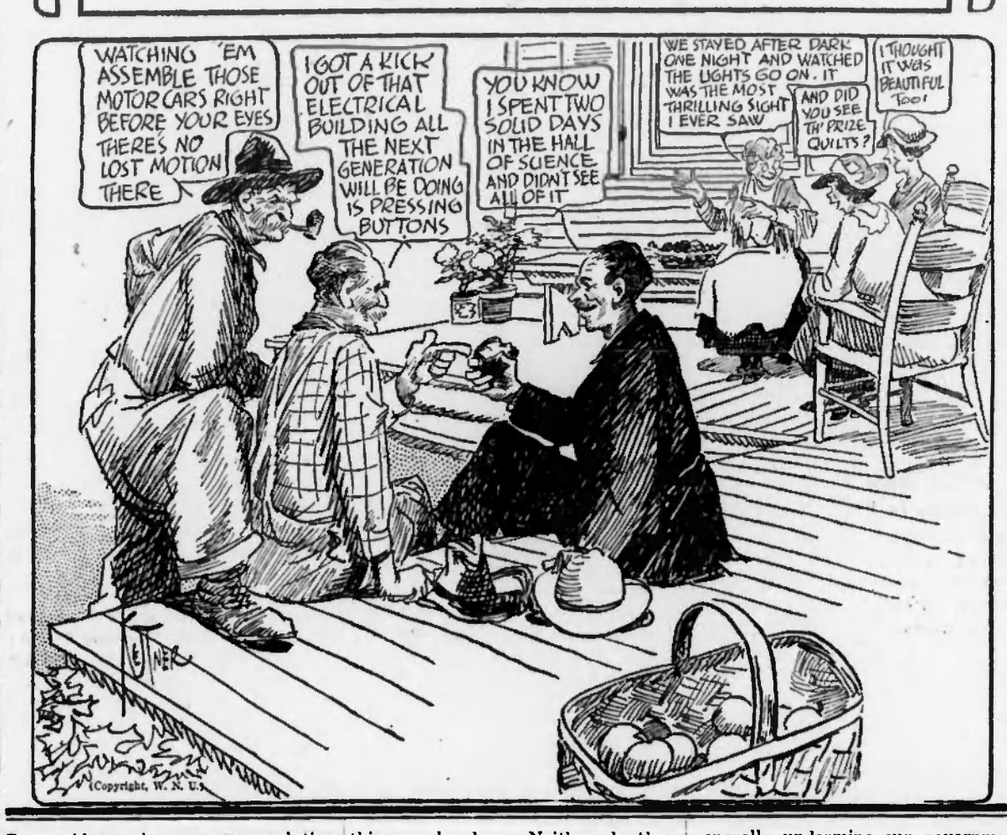
Since his administration commenced President Roosevelt has been handling them skillfully like the good politician he is. He has given them recognition in his cabinet even at the expense of his own party. His policies have been sufficiently progressive to keep statesmen like Senators Norris and LaFollette satisfied.

But now the primarles and convcntions preceding the congressional and state elections of 1934 are coming uneomfortably close and it won't be long until there will have to be a showdown. Some of the progressive statesmen who supported President Roosevelt will be up for re-election and they will have to run either as Republicans or Democrats.

One of the supporters of the Democratic ticket in 1932 who may be embarrassed in this respect, is no less a person than Hon. Hlram Johnson of California. Senator Johnson was last elected in 1928 and had little difficulty, having the benefit of the Hoover landslide as well as his own popularity in California. But this means that he will be up for re-election again next year. The politicians in Washington are wondering just what he is going to do about it.

There is one story to the effect that Senator Johnson when he declared for Roosevelt in 1932 had an understanding with the Democratic leaders in his home state that they would not oppose him when he came up in 1934.

The Topic of Conversation



But evidence is now accumulating that the promise was given inadvisedly, to say the least. It is reported that some of the California Democratic leaders now want Hiram to go the whole route and run on the Democratic ticket for reelection next year. If he does this he will of course forfeit what standing he has left as a Republican, and it is not to be forgotten that California is normally an overwhelmingly Republican state. But if he elects to run as a Republican, there are two dangers confronting him. He may be defeated in the primary by regular Republicans who still resent his desertion of the party last year. With respect to this danger much depends on whether or not Democrats are permitted to go into the Republican primary and vote for Johnson for the Republican nomination. Latest reports are to the effect that they will not so be permitted.

Then another danger is that even if Senator Johnson gets the Republican nomination he faces defeat in the final election if the Democrats make good their threat to run an out and out Democrat against him. Ordinarily this would be an empty threat because Johnson would win in spite of anything the Democrats offer against him. But if Johnson is nominated in the Republican primary and then the regular Republicans desert him in large numbers in the fall election, he might be defeated. So all in all, the situation will take a great deal of thinking over.

It is a good bet that most of the Progressive Republicans will not choose to "go the whole route" and become Democrats. Their principal has been their spirit of independence. If they become out and out Democrats they will lose a great deal of prestige. The Democratic party will continue to be controlled by the leaders of the South plus those of Tammany and its allies, and the insurgents, turned Democrats, would have to become good Democrats or outcasts. So it is not likely that many of them will choose to ride the donkey from start to finish.

MR. WALLACE'S TROUBLES

Secretary of Agriculture Wallace is finding that the direction of the farm activities of the government is not altogether a journey down a path of thornless roses. In fact, of late, since the farm recovery program has failed to lift agriculture out of the depression, and Mr. Farmer has found that the price of the things he buys under the Blue Eagle is going up as fast if not faster than the things he sells, Mr. Wallace has found his path beset with many difficulties.

There have come demands for the elimination of the processing tax and for inflation enough to bring cotton up to twenty cents a pound, and wheat to a dollar and a half a bushel. Mr. Wallace no doubt sees the fallacy of the arguments that the adoption of currency inflation would help the farmer. But it is a little difficult to explain this to the agriculturist while he is in an angry mood.

For example, Mr. Wallace in a recent speech in Chicago outlined his views on the question of agricultural recovery. He declared that if the farm prices are restored to the 1926 level farmers will have to cut down production in order to hold it there. But this is not what the professional farm politicians ask. They demand a restoration of the prosperity price level with bumper crops to go along with it. Mr. Wallace doesn't know how this can be done. Neither do they. Their duty is not to say how a thing should be done but what ought to be done.

Mr. Wallace was unskilled enough in political lore to admit that the present government plans for agriculture would not make the farmer rich over night.

"You will not make much money now, perhaps," he is quoted as saying. "But your children and grandchildren will get the benefits if this effort succeeds."

Small wonder then that a farm group in Mr. Wallace's own state immediately passed a resolution demanding that he resign from the cabinet.

If Mr. Wallace had consulted a skilled farm politician he would never have admitted that his farm program would not work immediately at a 100 percent clip.

He would have declared that the processing tax, and other phases of the farm recovery program would make agriculture prosperous over night and that every farmer would awaken with a pocketfull of money on day after tomorrow morning. Of course the prediction wouldn't prove true, but that wouldn't matter to a professional farm politician. He would have been out of town before day after tomorrow anyhow, and busy promising something to somebody else

AMERICA WAS CAUGHT ONCE

Wickham Steed, a correspondent who knows his Europe inside out and upside down, recently addressed the London contingent of the American Chamber of Commerce and told his listeners that concerted action by the United States, Great Britain and France against Hitlerism is highly necessary because the Nazi regime is threatening "Western civilization with the greatest crisis since the French revolution" unless there is a "vindication of the principles of liberty by these three nations as a lead to the world."

It would be a piece of temerity to dispute Mr. Steed's diagnosis of the tendencies and perhaps conscious aims of the Nazi movement, and there is no room for disagreement with his assertion that "we are confronted with the growth of systems which have nothing in common with ours, based upon uncontrolled violence and the overriding of individual rights by the supposedly superior rights of a state controlled by an armed minority." Nor will there be any inclination to dispute his declaration that we "cannot have the Declaration of Independence and the Magna Charta swept away by the doctrine of violence."

But somehow the speaker's statement that he would "welcome a concerted declaration by the governments of America, France and England which stand for liberty, that those who trample liberty underfoot cannot expect our good-will" leaves us quite cold.

It is not the habit of this republic to tell the people of other countries what form of government they should have, as long as they attend to their own business and do not try to interfere with ours. Nor was the refusal of Washington to recognize Soviet Russia caused by the communistic form of regime. It was the result of debt repudiation and attempts to spread seditious propaganda among the people of the United States and generally undermine our government and institutions. So far, there is no evidence that the Nazi government has attempted anything of the sort.

Beside that, America has about had its fill of trying to aid Europe when it gets into difficulties. What this country did for the allies during the war period has caused it nothing but grief, suffering and loss, plus the flagrant ingratitude of France, the nation which of all others is indebted to us for continuance as a free people. If the American government ever finds it necessary to talk plainly to Herr Hitler, it should do so exclusively on its own account and not to please or assist any third nation.—Detroit Free Press.

OYSTER SEASON IS UNDER WAY TO DELIGHT OF MANY

Strict Requirements Must Be Met By Handlers of Oysters

Oysters are back on the menu, to the delight of housekeepers and of all who enjoy good eating. You can get them on the half shell, in spicily flavored cocktails, or steamed, stewed, fried, broiled, tucked away in pie crust, or in turkey stuffing—just as you like them best.

Certificates granted by the State Department of Health to oyster handling concerns, now expire at the close of each season. They are renewable only after inspection by representatives of the Bureau of Food and Drugs of the State Department of Health has shown that State and Federal regulations have been complied with.

In preparation for the season of 1933-1934, proprietors of oyster handling concerns throughout the State were reminded during the summer of requirements which must be met for shucked and canned oysters, in order that the product may be accepted for sale or for shipment, within or without the State.

In the notices sent to oyster handlers, Mr. A. L. Sullivan, Chief of the Bureau of Food and Drugs, emphasized the care that should be given to structural requirements, with particular reference to sound flooring, adequate light and air space, benches and other equipment. Attention was directed to the need for sanitary dip cans, for provisions for handwashing, for adequate supplies of soap and towels. handwashing signs, properly cared for hose, paddles, skimmers and for adequate provision for sterilization of containers and equipment and for storage of equipment. The oyster handlers were also notified that medical examination of shuckers should be made before they are taken on; and that unless otherwise advised, certificates would be accepted from physicians employed last year.

It is expected that over 200 plants will apply for certificates during the season of 1933-1934.

SKIN AILMENT IS COMMON TO ALL SCHOOL CHILDREN

Health Officer Explains Care of Empetigo—Only One New Case of Scarlet Fever

Only one new case of scarlet fever was reported this week by Dr. Eugene C. Peck, county health officer, but he has discovered a few scattered cases of typhoid fever, bringing the total for that disease in the couunty to six.

These are widely scattered in the Swanton, Eagle Rock, Deer Park, Friendsville and Bloomington sections and those who have come in contact or who are likely to do so, are being given inoculations by Dr. Peck.

The total of scarlet fever patients remains at 12, since one reported last week has been pronounced well.

Care of the Skin

"Although certain soaps advertise praise of the school girl complexion, every teacher and health worker knows that school children are very apt to have skin trouble," Dr. Peck stated. "Certain of these such as the blackheads and pimples which are common in adolescence are of no importance to other people, but every summer there are many cases of skin trouble which show as rapidly spreading sores which appear at first like clear blisters but which soon break and are covered with crusts.

"This condition is usually impetigo, commonly known as contagious sores. It is due to germs in the superficial layer of the skin and is very easily spread to other people by contact with a patient, or by indirect contact through towels, clothing, or other articles which have been infected by these germs.

"The patient needs an antisepic and healing ointment prescribed by a physician. The application of the ointment alone is not sufficient. Constant cleanliness of the skin and clothing of the patient and all members of his family is necessary. Clothes must be changed frequently and steralized by boiling or in some other way while being laundered.

"The patient and his family should use an antiseptic soap as a toilet soap. The blue type of antiseptic soap contains 1 percent of mercuric iodid and is recommended by the Health Officer for frequent washing of the hands, face and body. The regulations of the State Department of Health require that children suffering with impetigo be excluded from school until it is cleared up.

THE MARYLAND BIBLE SOCIETY'S CORNER

"The Word of Our God Shall Stand Forever"

ZEPHANIAH

Zephaniah's birthright gave him certain privileges that might have been denied a prophet of less noble lineage. He was the great-grandgrandson of Hezekiah, therefore a prince of the royal blood, related to King Josiah, and in position to condemn the sins of the princes. All too often a kinship with the great blinds the eyes of the prophet. Not so in Zephaniah's case.

The reforms of Josiah's reign may have been largely inspired by the preaching of Zephaniah. The call of Jeremiah, and his subsequent work, no doubt, added impetus, while Huldah the prophetess, and possibly Nahum and Habakkuk added strength to the young King's program of reform.

He begins his prophecy with a declaraton of God's purpose to utterly destroy the land.

"I will surely consume all things from the land, saith the Lord. I will consume man and beast; I will consume the fowls of the heaven, and the fishes of the sea, and the stumbling blocks with the wicked; and I will cut off man from the land, saith the Lord. The great day of the Lord is near, it is near and hasteth greatly, even the voice of the day of the Lord. That day is a day of wrath, a day of trouble and distress, a day of wasteness and desolation."

Some there were in that day who trusted in material wealth and political power to save them, but the prophet cries: "Neither their silver nor their gold shall be able to deliver them in the day of the Lord's wrath."

The political situation was about as bad as it could be; likewise the church, which had grown corrupt and spiritually impotent. Referring to Jerusalem, Zephaniah declares: "Her princes in the midst of her are roaring lions; her judges are evening wolves; her prophets are light and treacherous persons; her priests have profaned that which is holy, they have done violence to the law. The unjust knoweth no shame."

In spite of this dark picture, the prophet is not without hope. The second chapter of his book is an exhortation to return to God by repentance, and expresses his assurance of the divine forgiveness. Zion will rejoice in her King, and Jehovah will rejoice in His ransomed people. The restored people will be a witness to God's working and a wonder to the world. Not only will this working of the Almighty be manifested among the chosen people, but throughout the nations men will worship Him. The great and universal change of heart will result in purified lips, that men may call upon the Lord, to serve Him with one consent. The world shall speak a pure language, free from profanity and evil. Men will entertain correct thoughts about God and their lives will reflect right thinking. All nations will then serve Judah's God, who is Lord of all.

Prophecy is one in the great hope of universal redemption which breathes through its inspired pages. No matter how far the sheep have wandered, the Good Shepherd is always ready to lead them back to the fold.

"The King of love my shepherd is Whose goodness faileth never,
I nothing lack if I am his
And he is mine forever."

PARTY RUINING LAID TO WELLER IN TAIT'S REPLY

Republican Chairman Blames Loss of Four Elections on Ex-Senator's Tactics

CONTROVERSY IS OPPOSED

A counter-barrage of charges of party wrecking was Galen L. Tait's answer to the suggestion of former Senator Ovington E. Weller that he resign from chairmanship of the Republican State Central Committee and thereby do a great service to Maryland Republicanism.

During the six years of Mr. Weller's leadership—when he was in the Senate—said Mr. Tait, the maintenance of the former Senator's party control "caused a series of factional primary fights between him and various other leaders and the losing of the elections of 1921, 1922, 1923 and 1926." * * * * *

No Time For Factions

Mr Tait added that, with the 1934 campaign for the Governorship in the offing, this is no time for factional squabbling and went so far as to suggest that Mr. Weller be invited to join "a no-faction group" to meet this emergency" by a general uniting of all forces for the party's good.

Mr. Weller, in a statement issued Monday, called on Mr. Tait to step down after twenty-one years' chairmanship of the party, asserting that under his leadership in the last twelve years he has made a host of enemies and that Republicanism of the States has sunk to the lowest level in its history.

Opposes Controversy

"The interests of the whole Republican party are greater than that of any party," said Mr. Tait. "I must decline to enter personal controversy with any Republican.

"I became party chairman before I met Mr. Weller and conducted the successful campaigns of 1916, 1917, 1918, and that of 1920, when President Harding and Senator Weller had Maryland's support.

"Mr. Weller was Senator and therefore the fully recognized party leader, actively directing party affairs. Unfortunately, the maintenance of that leadership caused a scries of factional primary fights between him and various other leaders and the losing of the elections of 1921, 1922, 1923, and 1926, during the six years of his Senatorial leadership. I cooperated with Senator Weller, had then and have had since, no differences with him.

Gave "Wholehearted" Aid

"It so happened in 1928 after ex-Senator Weller was defeated for national committeeman by a combination of Senator Jackson (William P. Jackson, of Salisbury), Mayor Broening, Senator France (Dr. Joseph I. France), Colonel Hill, (John Philip Hill), General Lowndes (W. Bladen Lowndes), Roland Marchant and others, that I ehose to go straight down the main line of party progress and loyalty and gave my whole-hearted allegiance to the nominated Presidential, Senatorial and Congressional ticket, which was successful.

" 'This is the sum of my offending.'

"Like some others, I did not follow the classical examples of Archilles and sulk in my tent, nor have I stayed in my tent from that day to this and emerged only when the party skies were brightening outside.

Lays Defeat To Depression

"When Mayor Broening ran for Governor in 1930, and President Hoover for re-election in 1932, the wide-flung depression defeated Republicans everywhere, leaving us but eight States out of forty-eight in 1932. Does any critic expect a sane and just Republican party to require that their chairmen in state, city, counties, and wards and party workers be supermen or gifted with divine or occult powers to reverse in Maryland a spirit of distressed opposition to constituted authority sweeping over our country and the world?

"Republican voters and leaders should not become intoxicated with the prospects of success in the State election of 1934. If so, I appeal from 'Philip drunk to Philip sober.'

Party Must Stay United

"To win elections in Maryland our own party must remain united and the opposition party divided. For this reason I refuse to be a party to disunion. Furthermore, we must present such an appearance of harmony and preserve such a sense of party dignity as to retain the cooperation of many thousands of independent Republicans and obtain the support of sill more thousands of independent Democrats.

"Evidences of disunion, whether by factional pronouncements or by intemperate attacks on groups or by imprudent ballyhoo—all alike tend to ehill and repel the independent elements requisite for success.

Suggests Cohesion

"I suggest, therefore, to Republicans you give deaf ears to all counsels except those aimed at Republican cohesion and success. The campaign of 1934 must be prepared between now and mid-September of next year. The campaign then lasts a scant six weeks. Candidates in city, counties and Congressional districts and State cannot be selected before the primary of early September. There is party work to do between now and then. Particularly in the next two months, thousands of Republicans must declare intentions to become citizens. Party energy and means should not be wasted in fighting within our own ranks.

"The party organization in city wards and the counties, and I as State chairman, cordially invite full counsel and cooperation from all elements and leaders. It is too late in the day for the institution by anyone of a rule-or-run policy or a one-man boss control.

Urges "No-Faction" Group

"It would be well in the face of the Democratic failure of government in Maryland that Republicanism unite into a no-factional group to meet this emergency and to loyally support all party candidates when duly nominated. I would suggest that Senator Weller be invited to become one of those uniting for the party's good.

"In times of need nations have formed fusion or union cabinets of all parties for the country's salvation. Something like this would be well for our party's present need.

"I think it wise for the party's welfare to adopt the slogan: 'United we stand, divided we fall.' "

JAMES MONROE WAS "CAREER STATESMAN"

December 2nd, this year, marks the 110th anniversary of the Monroe Doctrine and recalls the fact that comparatively few people know of the great versatility of this distinguished American who was a diplomat as well as a statesman and politician. In an interesting article on Monroe as a "Career Statesman," Mr. Monroe Johnson says, in part, in the current issue of the National Republic:

"In 1790, Monroe was chosen one of the earliest senators from Virginia, a position newly created by the Constitution which he had so vigorously assailed. In the Senate, he became a decided critic of the administration. Nevertheless, despite his opposition, or perhaps because of it, President Washington appointed him minister to France.

"Minister Monroe was strongly pro-French and, in accordance with Washington's policy of neutrality, was sent to France to counterbalance the appointment of the pro-English John Jay as minister to England. The new minister was enthusiastically received by the French, who were then in the throes of revolution, the demonstrative members of the National Convention even going so far as to bestow upon him 'fraternal embraces.' But Washington's well-meant attempt to have a nonpartisan administration failed in this instance, just as it did when Jefferson and Hamilton, exponents of conflicting theories of government, were both taken into the cabinet. Monroe's undisguised sympathy for the French view regarding Jay's treaty with England was displeasing to the President, and he was recalled. Before returning, however, he was able to secure the releas from prison of Madame de Lafayette, whose sister, mother, and aged grandmother had perished on the guillotine amid the jeers of the frenzied populace. Years before, Monroe, as a young captain in the Continental Army, had given aid to Lafayette, when the latter had fallen, wounded, on the battlefield at Brandywine. The American diplomat was also instrumental in freeing Thomas Paine, the pamphleteer of the American Revolution, who had run afoul of the fanatical Robespierre and been marked for execution.

"The rebuked diplomat had, apparently, lost none of his popularity in Virginia, for on his return from abroad, he was elected governor and twice re-elected.

"President Jefferson, in 1803, appointed Monroe a special envoy to assist Robert Livingston, the American minister at Paris, in negotiations for the purchase of New Orleans from France. Livingston and Monroe, however, exceeded their instructions and bought the vast area, known as the Louisiana Purchase, which Napoleon offered them. The President promptly approved their action. Jefferson's implicit confidence in Monroe is strikingly illustrated in a letter that he once wrote to Madison, relative to another, in which he said, 'For honesty he is like our friend Monroe: turn his whole soul wrong side outwards and there is not a speck on it.'

"Monroe's successful mission to France, so different from his first visit, caused Jefferson to send him to Madrid to bargain for the purchase of Florida. But Spain was not yet ready to sell, and the negotiations failed.

"The envoy was next commissioned minister to London. Together with William Pinckney, he drew up a treaty with Great Britain, in an attempt to settle our differences with that nation. The treaty, however, was not satisfactory to the President, since England failed to agree to the demand of the United States that the impressment of seamen be abandoned. So it was not submitted to the Senate. Nevertheless, the American negotiators cannot be regarded as having failed, when it is remembered that the treaty of Ghent, at the close of the War of 1812, contained no British renouncement of the right to impress.

"On his second return from abroad, Monroe again found his popularity undiminished in Virginia, and he was for a third time elected to the state assembly and a fourth time chosen governor."

NATIONAL AFFAIRS

By FRANK P. LITSCHERT

Events are moving so rapidly at Washington nowadays, and throughout the country for that matter, that it is a little difficult to predict very far ahead. It is a fact, however, that from present indications, the inflationists, who have been conducting a terrific drive at the National Capital, have temporarily "lost possession of the ball." The general belief among the political forecasters, at the time this is being written, is that there will be no currency inflation for the present at least. In fact, it is thought that the President has definitely turned his back on this kind of effort to raise prices and bring back prosperity, and most thinking people heaved a sigh of relief upon getting this information.

It is generally conceded that the business revival which started early in the summer has not been carried out at the same pace during the recent weeks, and that the looked for fall revival had not materialized, up to the first of October at least. Everybody hopes it will come later. And a great many observers are of the opinion that the clarification of the nation's monetary policies will have a very desirable effect on business. A great deal of the doubt and hesitation, they believe, is due to the fear of some radical form of inflation.

One of the disappointments of the NRA program up to this time has been its failure to raise the price of the things the farmer has to sell in proportion to the things which he has to buy. This has caused a great deal of resentment in farm circles, according to reports coming from the rural districts, and has inspired in great measure the demand for outright currency inflation. While the codes have doubtless helped many of the great industries such as the textiles, and the coal trade, the resultant rise in the price of finished goods has not been followed by a corresponding increase in purchasing power. The difference has been felt chiefly in the rural districts, but there are thousands of people in the cities and towns, too, who have been caught by rising prices without any corresponding rise in incomes.

One of the chief causes for such disappointment as there is may lie in the fact that many of the promoters of the NRA promised too much in the first place. The act doubtless contains many admirable features. But some of its proponents advertised it as an economic cureall. Disappointment naturally follows when it does not live up to all advance notices, something which it couldn't have done, under any circumstances.

It is more than possible, however, that the adoption of a clear-cut monetary policy which relieves the fear of the people of currency inflation, may start the ball rolling again. Certainly it is hard to get banks, or other institutions to furnish credit when they are uncertain what the financial policy of the government may be sixty days hence. So, too, it is difficult for corporations to put out new bond issues when the future of the dollar is uncertain. Nobody wants to buy bonds under such circumstances. Then there is the question of taxation, too. The public generally is coming to realize that the government never gets "something for nothing" any more than the individual does. And somebody will have to pay the cost sooner or later.

It will not, however, do to become pessimistic. There are indications that our monetary policy will be settled in the near future, and this may be followed by clearing skies and a spell of sunshiny weather again. The people of the United States are united in this war against depression, and once united, they are hard to defeat.

The old copybook of our childhood days told us that "knowledge is power." The trouble nowadays is that too many people get power because the voters think they have knowledge.

It is interesting for a novice to listen-in on the short-wave radio set assembled by Mayor Utterback at his home. While it is still under experimentation and adjustment, yet the reception is excellent. Especially is it interesting to pick up direct sations in Germany, Franee, England and some of the South American Republics, as well as to listen to different police calls over the country directing scout ears to proceed to the point where crimes have been committed. Important items of news arc pieked up in various foreign countries, broadeast in England as well as the native language, not available otherwise until reported the next day in the newspapers.

CONSERVATION CORPS IN NEED OF 9,313 MEMBERS

Enlistment is Begun to Fill Vacancies of Those Who Quit

Enlistment of members of the Civilian Conservation Corps, to fill 9,313 estimated vacancies, was begun over the Third Corps area Monday. The area includes Maryland, Pennsylvania, Virginia, and the District of Columbia.

Headquarters estimated that 9,313 men would be required to bring all companies up to their full strength of 200 each. When this is done, and when 29 other C. C. C. companies have been transferred from the second corps area for the winter, the third will have 31,000 conservation men in 185 camps.

914 To Be Recruited In State

Corps headquarters alloted vacancies to the area political subdivisions as follows: Maryland, 813 juniors and 101 war veterans; Virginia, 1,781 juniors and 200 veterans; Pennsylvania, 5,641 juniors and 395 veterans; District of Columbia 250 juniors and 132 veterans. The term "Junior", it was explained, was used to differentate between the men 18 to 25 years old and the veterans of the World War who also are received in the C. C. C. camps.

Three army posts will be used to concentrate the new men for an 11-day training period. They are Fort George Meade, which will accommodate 5,000 Marylanders and Pennsylvanians. The Carlisle barricks, which will take 2,000 Pennsylvanians, and Fort Humphreys, Va., will take 2,000 from Virginia and the District of Columbia. The posts will be able to take the men at a rate of from 200 to 300 a day.

Welfare Agencies in Charge

Welfare agencies, under the direction of the department of labor, again will have charge of selection and certification of the men. The army recruiting service will handle the preliminary physical examinations and the transportation of the new men to the concentration eenters.

Twenty-five of those who enlisted from Garrett county and who were stationed near Cambridge, have returned to their home here. Quite a number stationed in the four camps in Garrett county have been discharged also, the majority of them returning to their homes in Baltimore.

While plans are going forward for the moving of three of the Garrett county forest camps to warmer winter quarters, it is still planned to keep the camp at Bond through the winter months.

Third corps area headquarters explained that the actual number of vacancies could not be determined until re-enlistment reports have been received from all camps. The number 9,313 was an estimate.

HOG CHOLERA OUTBREAK IS REPORTED IN COUNTY

23 Animals Affected From Feeding Garbage of C. C. C. Camp

An outbreak of hog cholera in this county has been reported by John H. Carter, county agent, and confirmed by Dr. O. K. Hoffman, federal inspector, of Hagerstown, who was here last week and again on Tuesday of this week to inspect the affected farm.

The outbreak has occurred on the farm of W. C. Tasker, of the Bethlehem commuunity, and Dr. Hoffman stated the disease was caused by feeding hogs infected pork in garbage. Twenty-three hogs were affected.

Garbage from the C. C. C. camp in the Bethlehem community was being fed to the animals. Dr. Hoffman visited all of the C. C. C. camps in the county and has advised that no garbage be given out to farmers for the purpose of feeding their swine.

Statistics show that during the past ten years all outbreaks in the county except one were caused by infected pork through garbage feeding.

In advising that the practice of getting garbage from outside sources be stopped, Dr. Hoffman pointed out that there was a State law prohibiting the feeding of garbage to hogs, except that gathered on one's own farm or premises.

10 ARSON GANG MEMBERS INDICTED AT MORGANTOWN

Fires in West Virginia and Maryland Traced to Mob Operating in This Section

H. MENKE IS AMONG THEM

An amazing and sensational story in the history of this section of efforts to swindle insurance companies thru incendiary fires "broke" in Morgantown on Friday afternoon when the Circuit Court grand jury of that city voted fourteen indictments containing 31 counts against ten men whose criminal activities ran from Michigan to Maryland and left a trail of ashes in their wake.

Three of those indicted by the West Virginia grand jury are now in penitentiaries, one is a fugitive and the others are under bond to appear in court. The felons now serving time are Guy Crane, member of the Detroit "Purple Gang," and Pat McCormick, alias Russell Potter, alias Pat Walls, his accomplice and companion, and Henry Menke, well-known Garrett county and Scott's Run (W. Va.) figure, now serving five years in the Maryland penitentiary for arson following his conviction last spring in the local court. Crane and McCormick are serving 15 to 30 years each in a Michigan penitentiary for armed robbery.

Others indicted at Morgantown were Joseph Cantor, Morgantown, a free lance insurance adjuster, and miners in Grant Town and Scott's Run, namely: Arthur Richards, Martin Warhol, Ben Legnosky, Joe Valoska, Sam Crawford and W. Sherman Tennant, merchant-farmer, of Moorseville.

Following Manke's convicition in the Garrett county court, a sweeping investigation was made, with the assistance of Garrett county authorities, agents for national fire insurance companies and the National Board of Fire Underwriters.

Six separate fires are covered in the fourteen indictments. One case centers on the "theft" of Cantor's automobile from his garage last January and its subsequent finding near the Dodge school house, four miles north of Oakland, after it had been almost completely consumed by fire.

Another was Tennant's store and residence building at Scott's Run and another was the burning of Martin Warhol's unoccupied dwelling in Marilla early last summer when Valoska and Legnosky were horribly burned in a gasoline explosion which followed their attempts to burn the building.

The investigators claim they have full proof to support their assertion that Tennant and Menke conspired to burn Tennant's building and that Menke actually fired the structure the first time. Later Menke contracted with Crane and McCormick, with Tennant's knowledge, to burn the building. The second attempt was unsuccessful, but the structure was destroyed two nights later.

Locomotive Strikes Automobile

L. W. Farrier, of Chester, Pa., escaped injury when his automobile was struck by a westbound freight locomotive, drawing a heavy train, on the Second street railroad crossing at eight o'clock Monday morning.

Mr. Farrier, who is a government employe, saw the oncoming train just as he was approaching the crossing and applied his brakes, but the front wheel so fhis car was resting on the rail when it finally came to a stop. A second later the locomotive struck it, practically demolishing the radiator, fenders and other parts of the machine.

In order to complete his trip into a section of West Virginia without undue delay, Mr. Farrier placed an order immediately with the Sharps Motor Company for another car, the new car being delivered to him Tuesday morning.

Death of an Infant

Elizabeth Chance Browning, infant daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Cheston H. Browning, died at 3 o'clock this morning following an illness of three weeks. She was aged 19 months and 16 days.

Funeral services will be conducted tomorrow afternoon from the home by the Rev. W. S. Patterson.

Surviving are her parents, five brothers and one sister.

GIRL SCOUT ANNIVERSARY WEEK TO BE CELEBRATED

Local Troop Plans Full Program For Week of October 29th

Girl Scout Anniversary week will be celebrated by the local Girl Scout troop from October 29 to November 4, with a planned program for each day.

The celebration is in honor of the 21st birthday of girl scouting and in honor of Miss Juliet Lowe, founder of the organization, whose birthday is on October 31.

Although definite plans are yet to be worked out, the week's features include a Hallowe'en party on Friday, October 27, and a public meeting at which a program will be presented.

The girl scouts will attend the Episcopal church services on Sunday, October 29. Monday will feature "Homemaking," when each girl scout will prepare the evening meal for her parents. Other days include thrift, community service, handicraft, health and hostess.

WELFARE BOARDS TO DEAL KINDLY WITH TRANSIENTS

New Experiment Calls For Taking Care of These Men With More Humane Treatment

NECESSITIES TO BE GIVEN

Miss Ethel Miller, director of the Garrett county Welfare board, returned from Baltimore Wednesday, where she was in attendance on the monthly meeting of the County Welfare directors, held in that city on the 9th inst.

The interesting and important problems in welfare work in relation to transients, or homeless men, was discussed at length, according to Miss Miller. "While we in Garrett County have not as yet had to deal with this problem, so far as official welfare work is concerned, yet it may bob up at any time. The few transients we have had have been housed and fed at the county jail or fed by private families. The policy has been to give them a bed and one or two meals and pass them on to another community. Thus always on the move, all contact with home, family and friends is lost.

"The policy now proposed, in a three-months experiment, calls for the discouragement of train riding (in which the railroads will cooperate) and of hitchhiking; improvement in attractiveness and otherwise of shelters, such as are maintained by the Salvation Army and like agencies and municipalities, and providing some recreation."

"These men", said Miss Miller, "are not 'bums' or the professional tramps of former times, but simply, for the most part, men out of employment. And they will be so treated. Four-fifth of the transients are local homeless.

"Thus, it is hoped, that by checking the constant movement of these men from community to community, contact with their homes and their families may be reestablished and their rehabilitation begun."

Another subject of general interest outlined at this meeting was the proposed distribution of cotton, wheat, fruit, pork, coal and wood, purchased by the U. S. Government under an allotment of money for that purpose. While plans have not been fully matured, it is thought this distribution will be begun next week. Such articles of food, clothing and fuel as may be distributed will be supplemental to the food orders now being handed out and will be distributed only to those registered with the Board.

Miss Miller while in Baltimore attended the Civic Planning Dinner at the Southern Hotel, at which Mr. Howard L. Ickes, was the principal speaker.

Statement Challenged

The statement made last week by Mayor Grover C. Stemple that a swimming pool for Oakland would cost approximately $25,000 was challenged by members of the Mothers' Circle, who claim to have information that the pool at Piedmont cost in the neighborhood of $11,000, exclusive of R. F. C. labor.

Statistics are being gathered at this time so that a complete report can be given to the public in the near future as to costs and upkeep of a public swimming pool.

TO AWARD 75 PRIZES AT HALLOWE'EN CELEBRATION

Best Awards To Be Given For Costumes and Attractions Requiring Time and Thought

PARADE WILL BE FEATURE

More than seventy-five prizes, in addition to a Philco transitone radio, will be given away at the sixth annual Hallowe-en celebration to be held in Oakland on Tuesday, October 31, under the auspices of the Oakland Volunteer Fire Department, it has been announced by the executive committee in charge.

With awards to be made for almost any kind of costume or attraction, the parade, which begins at 7:00 o'clock, promises to be exceptionally large. Prizes will be awarded at the scene of the festivities immediately following the parade. The radio will be given away later in the evening.

The committee stated that proper recognition would be given this year especially to those in the parade and at the dances who had spent considerable time and thought in making up their costumes, providing, of course, they were worthy. The prize list will be worked out this week so that all those who plan to enter will have sufficient time to prepare for the parade.

Special emphasis is being laid on the two dances, a round dance in Offutt's Hall, beginning at nine o'clock, and a square dance in the vacant room in the Miller building, Second street. Prizes will be awarded there also.

Another meeting of the executive committee will be held on Monday and a special meeting of the fire department members on Tuesday evening.

This is the sixth annual celebration on Hallowe'en and attracts a large number of people to Oakland. The celebration had its start five years ago by the Knights of Pythias lodge. Four years ago it was turned over to the fire department, although one year the Boys' Band organization was included. Each year between 300 and 600 persons have participated in the parade, and many more have been present to witness it.

HUNTERS WARNED TO BE CAREFUL OF FOREST MEN

Sportsmen Must Be Sure Gun Is Not Aimed Toward C.C.C.Camp

Fear that the hunting of squirrel, deer and other animals throughout Garrett county may result in the accidental shooting of forest workers in many sections, the State Game Department has issued an appeal to sportsmen to be particularly careful this year when they go into the forests in quest of game.

The deer season is from December 1 to 5, inclusive, and it is unlawful to hunt deer except through the use of a gun propelling one all-lead or lead-alloy or soft-nosed or expanding bullet or ball at a single discharge.

The game sought by hunters in the areas containing C. C. C. camps are deer, wild turkey, ruffed grouse, squirrel, rabbit, woodcock and bob-white. Rifles are used for shooting deer and squirrels only and it is considered that the chief peril for C. C. C. men will arise from rifle fire in the hands of inexperienced and careless hunters.

The high-powered modern rifles have a long range of projectiles, making it dangerous to shoot in the direction of one of these forestry camps.

Superintendents of camps are to be supplied with posters to be displayed on roads and promnient points in the vicinity of the working parties, warning hunters of their presence in the woods.

Thus far no accidents of this nature have been reported, although Garrett county has four camps within its borders. Quite a number of hunting licenses have been issued this year by A. G. Ross, Clerk of the Circuit Court in Oakland.

Mr. Joseph E. Harned to Address Cumberland Garden Club

Mr. Joseph E. Harned will speak before a meeting of the Garden group of the Women's Civic Club at Cumberland this afternoon at the home of the chairman, Mrs. Albert A. Doub.

Mr. Harned's book, "Wild Flowers of the Alleghanies," has met with favor among critics and flower lovers, and he has had many calls for addresses from members of organizations similar to that of Cumberland.

PLANS MATURE FOR FAIR OF ALLEGANY TABLELAND

Will Be Held at Gimbels Store in Pittsburgh on October 18, 19, 20 and 21

MAY STILL SEND ENTRIES

Elaborate plans for the eight-county fair which the Allegheny Tableland Association will sponsor at Gimbel's store, Pittsburgh, on October 18, 19, 20 and 21, are rapidly being whipped into shape, and it is promised that every man, woman and child from the Tableland will have the time of his or her life when visiting the fair.

Entry blanks from prospective exhibitors are already being received at Gimbel's store.

There will be a first prize of five dollars for the best peck of wheat, and another five dollars for the best three cucumbers and another five dollars for the best peck of potatoes. Similar prizes are offered in all the fifty or more classes listed in the premium list.

A first prize of three dollars will be given for a display of a dozen eggs, or four dollars for the best exhibit of a pound of maple sugar.

If the men or women of Garrett county have not yet sent in their entry lists, they should do so at once. Copies may be had from the County Farm Agent or from Gimbels, Pittsburgh. Or, if time is short, make a list on plain paper and send it to Gimbel's store, as noted above. All entry lists must be in the mails by October 12th.

There will be absolutely no charge for making entries. All the exhibitor has to do is to pack his exhibits carefully, deliver them to a place which will be designated to him when he sends his entry list, and then he is through. Trucks from Pittsburgh will pick up the entries and take them to Pittsburgh.

Gimbel's entire staff of decorators will arrange the exhibits in the store ready for the opening of the fair on the morning of October 18th. Inasmuch as there will be counties in three states competing, the contest will be interesting.

Another feaure of the fair is this—potato raisers, egg dealers, apple growers, anyone with any farm produce to sell in large quantities, may be on the spot to take orders for all he can sell.

There will be at least twenty-five thousand people passing through the fair to see the products.

The boys and girls also have opportunities to win substantial prizes.

For various reasons, some of the exhibitors have not been able to get the applications filed before October 5th, so it has been agreed to extend the time of making entries for the fair until October 12th. However, no one in the Tableland District will be refused entry into the exhibit provided their exhibits are delivered to the place designated in the various counties.

Anyone in the Tableland area who has not received a premium list and entry blank should call the County Agent or drop a card to the Allegheny Tableland Fair, Gimbels. Pittsburgh.

Injured in Fall From Motorcycle

Fritz Dorsch, a member of the Swallow Falls C. C. C. camp, was injured Saturday evening when he fell from a motorcycle at the corner of Second and Center streets.

The driver of the machine, another reforestation man, suddenly swerved his machine to miss a collision with an automobile driven by Ray Teets, which threw Dorsch to the pavement.

He received lacerations of the right leg and abrasions and contusions of the right side, according to Lieut. C. L. Wilbar, medical officer of the camp. He was attended by Dr. N. I. Broadwater.

Friendsville Bank To Have New Cashier

Mr. A. H. Rush, former assistant cashier, will be the new cashier of the First National Bank at Friendsville when it resumes business, it has been announced. Ernest Friend will be the assistant cashier.

The bank was expected to open last Saturday and an advertisement to this effect was published last week in The Republican. Unforseen details, however, appeared, which had to be worked out, which is causing several days' delay, but it is confindently believed that the bank will be functioning by the close of the present week.

SCARLET FEVER CASES IN COUNTY NOW SEVENTEEN

Four More Reported This Week; Health Afternoons Conducted

Four cases of scarlet fever have been reported this week, making the total number of cases now under quarantine seventeen.

Since October 1, Dr. Peck and the nurse for the particular district have conducted health afternoons at Boiling Springs, Mason, Corunna, North Glade, Shook Shop and Fairview schools. The following schedule of health work in the schools has been arranged, all being at two o'clock in the afternoon except Gauer, which will be at ten o'clock in the morning on October 12: Red House, Oct. 12; New Germany, Oct. 17; Mt. Zion, Oct. 18; Finzel, Oct. 19; Bethlehem, Oct. 24; Bear Hill, Oct 25; Wilson, October 26; Lynndale, Oct. 31; Shallmar, Nov. 1.

The health officer's report for the month of September shows that 145 children have been vaccinated against smallpox and 93 immunized against diphtheria.

Clinics for inoculation against typhoid fever are being held weekly in sections where this disease has occurred recently.

PLANS FOR AUTO SAFETY CAMPAIGN ARE UNDERWAY

Preparations are Being Made for Annual Effort—To Be Held From Sunday to Nov. 15.

CARS TO BE INSPECTED

Preparations are ebing made to conduct the annual save-a-life campaign this year from Sunday to November 15, E. Austin Baughman, Commissioner of Motor Vehicles, has announced.

More than 1,000 official stations are planned to provide for the convenience of motorists, to whom Mr. Baughman has appealed for cooperation in the campaign irrespective of the fact that the inspections are required by law.

"I wish to emphasize the fact that the mechanical condition of the motor vehicle is a most important factor in the reduction of accidents," Mr. Baughman said.

Inspection Necessary

"Although motorists with poor equipment should realize this fact and drive accordingly, human nature is such that it becomes necessary by compulsory inspection to require owners to keep their vehicles in safe condition.

"The force of which the machine is capable must be controlled. This can be done by keeping such parts as brakes, tires, lights and steering mechanism in safe shape. If motorists will anticipate this inspection and carry out its requirements it will save them a great deal of tme and inconvenience."

Tags to Await Approval

Automobile owners were urged to have the inspection of their cars made early in the campaign so as to avoid a last-minute rush.

They were also reminded that 1934 registration tags will not be issued for any machine which has not been inspected and approved.

Report Proves False

A report circulated in Oakland on Saturday morning that a Garrett county automobile had wrecked near Springfield, Ohio, enroute home from the World's Fair in Chicago, killing two and injuring two, was found to be false, as far as the identification of the car and people was concerned. The original report, coming from the Associated Press to The Republican office for verification, was said to have been William Egger's car. Shortly afterward the news was broadcast over the radio. A few minutes later a telegram from the Associated Press said that the number of the license plate had been erroneously reported and that no Oakland people were involved.

There was an accident, however, in which Miss Emma Lewis, 31, of Cumberland, and Cobey Porter, 34, of Eckhart Mines, were killed, and the injured were Edmund Lewis, 75, father of the dead girl, and Mr. and Mrs. C. Lear Twigg, 37, both of Cumberland.

Lewis died late Tuesday night as a result of his injuries, in the City Hospital at Springfield, Ohio.

RED CROSS ROLL CALL TO COMMENCE ON OCTOBER 14

Is Special Need in Maryland For Thousands of Volunteer Workers To Secure Members

QUOTA THIS YEAR IS $600

With the advent of the annual Red Cross Roll Call on Saturday, an appeal for members is being made by workers in charge. Mrs. Samuel Cole has been appointed roll call chairman and the list of those who will assist is practically the same as last year.

Garrett county's quota for the year is $600.

Inasmuch as fifty per cent of the amount collected remains within the county, it is hoped that the entire amount will be collected. For the past three years Garrett county has fallen short of her quota by a small margin.

"Taking over of part of the relief burden by the Federal Government in no way lessens the responsibilities or the activities of the Red Cross," Mrs. Cole said. "Ours is and always has been a supplementary service, conducted over and above that of the regular State and Federal relief agencies."

The Red Cross must be ready to handle emergencies swiftly, wherever they occur. This aspect of the Red Cross—that of giving help in time of disaster—is traditional and has been stressed by recent happenings all over the country. During the past year the Red Cross gave assistance in ninety-six disasters in this country, including cloudburst, tornado, explosion, typhoid epidemic, fire, earthquake and shipwreck. Aid also was given in twenty-one cases in insular possessions and in three foreign disasters.

Throughout the past year in Garrett county the Red Cross furnished flour, cotton cloth and gave out food and clothing in many instances. Those who contribute their $1.00 membership fee will be given a button, a receipt and a Red Cross sign for their window.

PEOPLE ASKED TO REMOVE EXISTING FIRE HAZARDS

Observing Fire Prevention Week —Fire Equipment Inspected

As this week has been designated Fire Prevention Week, Lawrence M. Fraley, president of the Oakland Volunteer Fire Department, is asking that the attention of all citizens be turned in this direction and that everyone can help by removing from their premises all existing fire hazards.

All trash in attics and cellars, rubbish piles near buildings and similar places should be cleaned up so as to increase the safety of buildings and lessen the danger of fire.

Equipment Inspected

At the last regular meeting of the fire department members all personal equipment was inspected and with the exception of wear and tear, all the equipment was found in its place and in good condition. Robert L. Wolfe and Lee R. Mason were appointed to have necessary repairs made.

W. R. Browning, Eugene Carney, James Carney and J. J. Sweeney were appointed as clean-up committee for October.

A factory representative recently demonstrated an artificial respirator, but on account of lack of funds the department was unable to purchase one. The cost is $220. The members of the fire company, however, felt that it was badly needed and with the assistance of some of the citizens it may yet be possible to purchase one.

Emroy Bolden, chief; A. T. Shaw and F. C. Peddicord were appointed as a committee to study the problem.

W. E. Shirer made and donated two bucket tanks which are said to make the handling of buckets much easier.

Keyser Rotarians to be Hosts at an Inter-City Meet

The Keyser Rotary club has extended an invitation to all members of the Cumberland, Frostburg, Oakland and Piedmont Rotary clubs to be their guests at a luncheon and theatre party on Thursday evening.

Oakland and Piedmont are making this meeting their regular weekly club meeting. Oakland usually meets on Friday evening.

The luncheon will be held in the Boy's dormitory of Potomac State school at 7 o'clock and the show will be held in the music hall at 9 o'clock.

Lesson for October 15

SAUL IN ANTIOCH

LESSON TEXT—Acts 11:19-30.

GOLDEN TEXT—For I am not ashamed of the gospel of Christ: for it is the power of God unto salvation to every one that believeth; to the Jew first, and also to the Greek. Romans 1:16.

PRIMARY TOPIC—Jesus' Friends Sharing With Others.

JUNIOR TOPIC—Earning a Name.

INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOPIC—Sharing the Gospel With Other Races.

YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOPIC—Racial Problems and Their Solution.

When God was about to launch the missionary enterprise among the Gentiles, he arranged for a new religious center. Antioch was admirably adapted for such a center. It was a great commercial center with communication between the east and west. The population was a mixed one. The upper classes were mainly Greeks and used the Greek language. The government officials were Romans and used the Latin tongue, while the masses were Syrians. Sprinkled among them were Jews who had come for commercial purposes. Travelers from all parts of the world were in evidence.

I. A Religious Awakening at Antioch (vv. 19-21).

1. The occasion (v. 19). The persecution at Jerusalem scattered the disciples abroad. This, God permitted in order to separate them from the home people at Jerusalem.

2. The preachers (v. 19). They were not officially appointed missionaries, but ordinary men and women. They were filled with the yearning desire for lost souls, and witnessed of the Lord Jesus in the power of the Holy Ghost. Wherever the disciples of the Lord really yearn after lost souls and witness of him in utter dependence upon the Holy Spirit, there will be conversions.

3. To whom they preached (vv. 19, 20).

a. Some went among Jews only with the gospel message. These had not yet come to see that the gospel purpose was wider than to include only Jews.

b. Some preached to the Grecians also. These were from Africa and Cyprus. They were of a more liberal spirit perhaps because they were removed from a Jewish center. The success of their preaching was so great that news of it reached the mother church at Jerusalem.

II. Barnabas Sent to Inspect the Work at Antioch (vv. 22-24).

1. The work done by Barnabas (v. 23). He gladly endorsed the work and earnestly exhorted them to continue steadfastly in the faith, clinging unto the Lord.

2. The character of Barnabas (v. 24). He was a good man. It is highly important in sending a man to follow up a spiritual work, that his character be good. He must not only be of unblemished character, but of broad sympathy—capable of entering into the full appreciation of things about him. He was also full of the Holy Spirit. Only a spirit-filled man can appreciate the workings of God.

III. Barnabas Brings Saul (vv. 25, 26).

The work grew to such an extent that help was needed. Barnabas had the good judgment to seek Saul for this important work. Saul was a more important man than Barnabas. It is the duty of Christian leaders to seek out men who are qualified for the Lord's work and bring them from their obscurity to the strategic places in the Lord's vineyard. There are many men in obscurity whose bringing forth requires a Barnabas.

IV. The Disciples First Called Christians at Antioch (v. 26).

They were not called Christians in derision as is so often asserted. It was in consequence of the teaching ministry of Saul and Barnabas that they were called Christians. In all Saul's teaching he showed the unique relation which the Christian sustains to Christ.

V. The Church at Antioch Sends Relief to Jerusalem (vv. 27-30).

The Holy Spirit through Agabus revealed that a great dearth should prevail throughout the world. This came to pass in the days of Claudius Caesar. Every man, according to his ability, determined to send relief to the brethren which dwelt in Judea. They made up money for the saints in Jerusalem and sent it by the hands of Barnabas and Saul. This act not only proved the genuineness of the work at Antioch, but it manifested the fact that the Jews and Gentiles are one in Christ and that therefore there should be no division among them. It was a case of Gentile Christians ministering to the Jews.

God Is Able

Jehovah, the loving God, distinctly promises to answer the prayers of his children. He that gave parents a love for their children, will he not listen to the cries of his own sons and daughters? He has wonders in store for them.

A Sunny Face

Wear a sunny face, it is your privilege. It has the quality of mercy; it is twice blessed. It blesses its possessor and all who come under its benign influence.

SCOOP'S COLUMN

Mothers, dreaming of their sons' ambitions, invariably dream that some day they may become President of the United States, or so I am told.

But if they had listened to J. Fred. Essary, Washington correspondent of the Baltimore Sun at the West Virginia Newspaper conference last Friday, they would never again wish such a position on their offspring.

Mr. Essary, a prominent newspaper writer, who has had close contacts with seven presidents, said, "The more I see of presidents of the United States, the great burdens they carry, the disappointments they endure, the doubtful rewards that are conferred upon them by their people, the more I wonder why any man should aspire to that office."

I am glad I'm just an ordinary column writer. There's enough trouble in being that.

Among his observations Mr. Essary said there had been only one president who had left the White House happy—Theodore Roosevelt. W. H. Taft lived to be accused of splitting his party asunder; Warren G. Harding died in office and it is said of him that the best thing he could have done for his party was to die; Woodrow Wilson left the White House broken in spirit and in health to resent until his death what his party had done to him; Herbert Hoover lived to see properity give way to depression and to see the people for whom he worked untiringly turn against him. Calvin Coolidge was the only president of the last seven who left the White House with any degree of satisfaction in having done a job well.

President Roosevelt he termed a gifted man—gifted with a buoyancy of mind and spirit—a man of vision. Herbert Hoover he termed as the soul of integrity and a slave to the interests of his people and of the country.

In speaking of the health of President Roosevelt, Mr. Essary said that except for two paralyzed legs he was extremely robust. "And," he added, "the more I see of Jack Garner in the Vice-Presidency the more I think that people throughout this country should pray for the health of President Roosevelt."

Mr. Essary seemed to have had a similar feeling for Vice-President Curtis.

One cannot go to a press conference without hearing several good tales, and I don't see any sense in keeping them, especially when they will fill the rest of this column, and I won't have to do a bit of thinking this week. Pretty soft, I call it. But that's just like Hanst. Always looking for something to do that requires no effort.

A man met a good friend of his along the streets of New York. The friend seemed badly crippled.

"Automobile wreck?" asked the man.

"No," the friend replied. "But since you are an old friend, I'll tell you. I am wearing shoes just two sizes too small. You see my wife got a divorce about a year ago. My daughter has run off with the chauffeur. My son has flunked out of college; I lost all my money in the stock market and the only pleasure I have left in life is to go home in the evening and take off these darn shoes."

Senator Tydings of Maryland was making an address before a gathering. He was about midway in his speech when he suddenly remembered that he had delivered the very same address about a year ago in that very same hall.

He was practically stunned and for the next minute or so he rambled. He had just about pulled himself together when he looked into the audience and spied a woman whom he remembered as having heard him last year. He recovered only after a violent effort and completed his speech.

At its conclusion people came up to see and talk with him. He pulled the lady aside. "Madam," he said, "I was half way through this speech when I remembered I had delivered it here about a year ago, and I also remembered that you were here on that occasion. Please don't let on to the people, will you?"

"Don't worry, Mr. Tydings," she exclaimed, "I don't remember a thing you said; I only remember how funny you looked."

In the mountains of Virginia were two old mountaineers who were great cronies, but they lived across the mountain from each other. It happened that one of them died. The people of that community did not like to sit up with the corpse and finally decided to go and ask the crony on the other side of the mountain.

While they were enroute on their mission, a couple of boys of the community decided to have some fun. They tied a rope to the neck of the corpse and concealed the other end in the loft of the house where they had parked themselves with a black cat.

The old crony agreed to do the sittin' up and finally arrived. He proceeded to make himself comfortable in a rocker by the side of the bed.

About midnight when quiet things were most awful quiet, the boys dropped the black cat out of the loft and at the same time jerked on the rope, thus raising the corpse to a sitting position.

With never a trace of excitement the man exclaimed: "Lay back down there, Jim; I'll put the dad-blamed cat out."

So here's where I lay down and take a good rest until next week.

Judge Rutherford In Person

ALL NATIONS are now in "the valley of decision". The peoples must now decide whether they will follow "blind leaders of the blind" and "fall into the ditch" of world catastrophe or follow the divine Word and the way of escape it points out.

May the people now get the true knowledge of the true God and his purpose concerning man? Is there a false god who has deceived the people and turned the whole world into a trap, and who is responsible for the present world woe and waste yet to come?

JUDGE RUTHERFORD, of New York City, will discuss these vital questions over a nation-wide chain of radio stations. There is not another writer on earth today whose writings are so widely distributed and read—over 140,000,000 copies since 1921—not another public speaker whose voice is heard weekly by eager multitudes over so great a number of radio stations.

COST OF THE "NEW DEAL"

Everyone has been pulling for the national recovery act and the coordinating efforts of the administration to pull us out of the depression. When anyone has mentioned the terific expense to the government of the various projects which have been assembled by the so-called "Brain Trust" for restoring Uncle Sam to a prosperous condition, he has usually been met with the reply: "Well, no matter what it costs it will be worth it, if it does the work."

All of which, however, naturally leads to the question of just how much it is going to cost. According to Gould Lincoln, a eonservative, fair-minded and usually accurate writer in the Washington Star, the cost of the recovery program under the New Deal is apt to be considerably more than eleven billion dollars. In round figures he places the approximate total sum at $11,574,000,000, although on four billions of this amount, he adds, the governmcnt guarantees only the interest. The total, according to Mr. Lincoln, may be subdivided as follows:

"Total capital structure or lending power of the Reconstruction Finance Corporation, $4,074,741,000.

"Appropriation for the NRA and Public Works Administration. $3,300,000,000.

"Bonds to be used by the Home Owners Loan Corporation, on which the government guarantees interest at 4 per cent, $2,000,000,000.

"Farm Loan bonds, issued by the federal government on which the government guarantees interest at 4 per cent, $2,000,000,000.

"Appropriation made for subscription to the Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation, $150,000,000.

"Bonds of the Tennessee Valley Authorization, $50,000,000,

The wrlter adds that while the government only guarantees the Interest on the bonds of the Home Owners Loan Corporation and the Federal Farm Loan bonds, it is not believed that the government would permit these bonds to become valueless.

The tremendous financing of these various relife acts comes of course outside of the regular federal budget. The government theoretically expects to get most, if not all, of this money back. But the question is, will the money come back? If the recovery program works and the country gets back on the road to prosperity again, doubtless money expended in this extraordinary way will in part flow back into the treasury. But lf it doesn't, then who will pay? No doubt our old and much abused friend, Mr. American Taxpayer, will be asked to step into the breach once more.

A FREE PRESS THREATENED

The freedom of the press, virtually destroyed in several European countries in recent years, was attacked at various points by the American Congress ln its speclal session early this year, and doubtless will be attacked again when Congress reconvenes in January. One of the bills which sought the Hitlerlzing of American newspapers placed restrictions on food and drug advertising, restrictions which in practice would make such advertlsing impossible to newspapers of general circulation. It was not passed. It was in committee when Congress recessed, and presumably will be taken up as unfinished business when Congress reconvenes.

This mischievous measure and its companion bills can be discussed now dlspassionately and, we hope, constructively. To defer discussion until after the gavels fall on Capitol Hill would be to smother it in the hurly-burly of what now promlses to be a none too tranquil sesslon. The food and drug advertlsing bill is mischievous, we believe, because it lmposes an lntricate set of rules. And misjudgment would threaten prosecutlon and penalty. The lmpositlon of so complicated and unpredlctable a system of censorshlp would be an intolerable burden upon the conduct of any newspeper of general clrculation. The effort to protect the public agalnst unlawful products would defeat ltself by such immoderate and ill considered extension of bureaucratic autohrity. The protection should be given in another way, more direct and effective.

The measure is an illustration of the bureaucratic ambition for power. It reveals the need for alert defense of the public right to information and the reasonable freedom of private enterprise. This particular bill is aimed at advertising. Other pending measures would hamper the gathering and publication of news and expression of editorial opinion. All are tarred with the same stick. There is no more vital public interest than its right to information. A free government and a free society cannot exist without the maintenance of that right.

FAITH IN AMERICA

It is doubtful if any country on the face of the earth can equal Spartan courage displayed by the American people during the last three years of the depression, which deprived the majority of us of all the luxuries and millions of even the bare necessities of a normal existence. It reduced men and women from comparative affluence to stark pauperism, seared the soul of American humanity as has never been done before. Yet in the face of this appalling blight our people have never lost hope. Their faith in America and American institutions has not wavered. Their trust in the ultimate recovery of the country was sublime, and that trust is bearing frult today. It is courage equal to that of the Spartans of old, and in no section of the country has that courage been more clearly demonstrated than in the small towns and countryside. Now the sun shines brighter and our smiles are becoming broader every day.

The Safe Drivers' Code

There is one badly needed code which will not have to await an official signature. It affects every person in the country and its adoption should be unanimous. It is "The Safe Drivers' Code."

Accident statistics reported to June 20, 1933, according to the National Bureau of Casualty and Surety Underwriters, showed 12,920 persons had been killed by automobiles this year. The indications, judging from unofficial reports in July and August, are that final results may show a decided increase ln deaths and accidents for 1933. This is doubly significant because there are nearly 10 per cent fewer automobiles registered in the United States this year than in 1931.

To motorists, therefore, and to pedestrians and all users of our streets and highways, the following code is directed:

1. Regulate your speed to fit traffic conditions; keep your car under control at all times..
2. Slow down for intersections in towns and in the country and obey all traffic signals.
3. Use better judgment in passing other cars, waiting until there ls at least 500 feet of clear distance ahead.
4. Pedestrlans—Cross at crosswalks; walk on the left side facing traffic; obey traffic signals.
5. Remember that automobile accidents constitute an economic waste totaling billions through property damage, high insurance rates, lncreased taxes, etc.

Every motorist should feel that it ls his duty and privilege to pledge hinrself to this code.

HOW TO SAVE MONEY ON YOUR MONTHLY GAS BILL

A Series of These Articles to Appear in The Republican

This is the first of a series of five articles describing methods of gas economy in the home.

Proper Adjustment of Flames and Burners

Hundreds of local gas users are wasting gas daily because they have not acquainted themselves with the simple precautions recommended by their gas company service departments to obtain the maximum of potential heat which is provided.

Gas burns when it is united with oxygen from the air and consumes about ten cubic feet of air to each cubic foot of gas. If a sufficient quantity of air is not supplied through the mixing tube at the burner, the gas is not completely burned and heat is lost. Too high a flame also is wasteful.

All gas appliances are equipped with facilities to adjust the quantity and velocity of gas supply and to provide the proper amount of air which passes up the mixing tube from the gas cock to the burner.

Short flames use gas most efficiently. Burner openings should be about one and one-quarter inches below the bottom of the surface to be heated, and the flame should touch and spread out slightly.

When adjusting the flame, light the burner and keep it lighted until the adjustment is made. To lower the height of the flame, turn the six-sided nut at the gas cock until the flame is about one and one-half inches high.

A perfect flame can be identified by an inner cone of blue-green and a dark blue outer flame. A sputtering blue flame means too much air is being supplied. A yellow-tipped flame indicates that not enough air is being provided.

To adjusut the quantity of air supply, loosen the set screw holding the air shutter, which is located just behind the gas cock, and turn to right or left until a clear blue flame ls obtained. An occasional reddish tinge to the flame requires no attention as this does not indicate inefficient burning.

Possible fuel-wasting leaks in the gas supply system may be detected by shutting off all appliances for three hours and checking the small foot-measure dial on your meter to see if it has moved. Meters are so constructed that they cannot operate except when gas is being used. If the hand on the foot-measure dial has moved while all gas appliances are shut off, this is evidence of a leak and the gas company service department should be called at once. Do not look for a leakage with a match.

NATIONAL AFFAIRS

By FRANK P. LITSCHERT

We have heard a great deal of late about the failure of the nation's banks to lend money to private firms for the expansion of business and have been told that this is one of the things which is retarding our economic recovery. There has even been strong intimation from Washington that unless the banks "loosen up", so to speak, the government itself will take the credit situation in hand. There are, of course, two sides to the question. On the one hand the banks are being urged to extend credit in every direction while on the other they are compelled to comply with the new banking laws which provide for a more stringent examination and much harsher penalties for bankers who lend their customers' money in poor speculative enterprises.

In thinking about this situation it must be remembered that banks cannot make money for their stockholders unless they put to work the money which is left with them on deposit. It is hardly likely therefore that the bankers of the country are in some deep conspiracy to restrict credit, since they can only show an operating profit by extending credit. During the past few years it has been necessary for the banks to remain as liquid as possible. Granting, for the sake of argument, that this period is now coming to a close, it must be admitted that the bankers must be more careful than ever in extending credit because of the provisions of the new banking law. They are compelled to go slowly also in that the future monetary policy of the country is now decidedly "up in the air" and nobody knows just what sort of inflation or currency or credit expansion we are to have, if any.

But there is another phase of the general situation which must not be lost sight of. It is easy to overestimate the importance and extent of the tightness of credit. The average sound and conservative business firm is able to get what credit it requires. It is not credit that it needs, but customers. The Alexander Hamilton Institute recently well summed up the credit situation in one of its bulletins when it said:

"The credit situation is giving serious concern to the administration. Although the banks have loanable funds in most instances, except those banks that are still closed by the government, these funds are not moving out to finance business activities. Bankers have been charged with holding back on the granting of credit because of the supposed heavy risks. For this attitude the bankers could hardly be blamed, because of their recent harrowing experiences at the hands of the government and the public, and the watch that is being kept on banking operations. The Reconstruction Finance Corporation has offered aid through preferred stock in banks or by loaning banks money at three per sent that they can reloan at 5 per cent as a maximum, to trade and industrial oganizations. If such offers are not accepted by the banks, the Reconstruction Finance Corporation has threatened to set up so-called mortgage companies in various centers to loan directly to business without the medium of bankers. Studies of the situation, however, show that merchants and manufacturers alike, both small and large, have no immediate need for the wide extension of credit. What they do need is sales, and sales are not sufficiently brisk to warrant increasing production and building up wholesale and retail stocks on borrowed money. There are many loan applications from individuals and organizations whose credit qualifications are so meagre that they would not pass even in times of prosperity. Sound organizations are not on the market extensively for the borrowing of funds."

This undoubtedly states the siuation as it is today. One of the soundest and most conservative business men in the Middle West recently said to me, in discussing the bank credit situation:

"It is not bank credit which my firm needs, but orders for goods. We can get all the credit we need for our business operations. Given customers, we can get the credit we require to expand."

The same is doubtless true of thousands of business institutions in the United States. What good will it do to borrow money of the banks to produce or purchase more goods if the public demand is not forthcomig?

Spending Is Saving Now

True economy is that which obtains the largest possible return for a dollar spent. Truer economy is to spend that dollar at a time when it will bring the most.

We have had a number of years of extreme depression. Prices have dropped to unimaginably low levels. There was money in the country—but persons who had surpluses were afraid to spend. They went without needed articles in order to keep their savings intact. They permitted their property to fall into costly disrepair.

If they pursue that timid policy any longer they are going to be literally out of luck. That hoarded money is going down in value now. The worth of the dollar depends entirely on what it will buy. Six months from now it will buy much less than it will buy today. In other words, if you keep money in a non-productive state at present it amounts to throwing a certain percentage of it away.

You can get maximum value from your money by putting it to use. There was never a better time to install a new heating plant, repair or replace a roof, build or rebuild, paint or do a thousand similar things. Every dollar so spent will appreciate in value—what it buys will, in a very short time, have a market value much in excess of what you paid.

Think it over. True saving now is through wise spending.

THE SUMMER ENDS

The Summer ends, 'twas just the other day
We watched her coming in the wake of spring;
Bedecked in matchless colors, brilliant, gay,
With promise of the harvest she would bring.

The Summer ends and gone, too, are the hours
Of pleasure, joy, and happiness that came
To us at intervals, like magic showers,
In days that otherwise had seemed the same.

'Tis ended and the harvest yields the store
Of failures and successes we have met.
What have we garnered, could we wish for more,
Does Autumn bring us gladness or regret?

A Fair Question

THE MARYLAND BIBLE SOCIETY'S CORNER

"The Word of Our God Shall Stand Forever"

HAGGAI

The burden of Haggai's message is the building of the House of God. "In the second year of Darius the King, in the sixth month, in the first day of the month, came the word of the Lord by Haggai the prophet unto Zerubbabel the son of Shealtiel, Governor of Judah, and to Joshua the son of Joscdec, the high pricst, saying, Thus speaketh the Lord of Hosts saying this people say the time is not come, the time that the Lord's house should be built." Zerubbabel, the royal prince of the house of Judah and Joshua the high priest, obeyed the voice of the Lord their God and began at once the necessary preparations for the mighty task to which the entire nation was called.

Zerubbabel was of the family of David, the grandson of King Jehoiachim, who had been carried to Babylon. What is here said of him refers in part to himself and in part to his family. He would finish that house, the Temple which was to be rebuilt on Mount Moriah, his family would finish the real House of God. The Hebrew prophets were always encouraging their people with a mighty hope of the coming of a great King to whom all nations would pay tribute, and the treasures of all nations would be His for the building of a House of God more glorious than even the Temple of Solomon.

In the second chapter, the 7th, 8th and 9th verses, a foreshadowing of this glorious event is given. Here we have in one phrase—the desire of all nations—an unequivocal Messianic allusion. There is included in this Messianic prophecy the claim of divine ownership of the wealth of the world. God's House is to be constructed not of doles which would make of Him a mendicant, but of that which is already His, a part of which is to be consecrated to the building of this new Temple.

Here are the Prophet's own words: "For thus saith the Lord of Hosts: I will shake all nations, and the desire of all nations shall come: and I will fill this house with glory, saith the Lord of Hosts. The silver is mine, and the gold is mine, saith the Lord of Hosts. The glory of this latter house shall be greater than the former; and in this place will I give peace."

The latter part of this chapter deals with the times of depression through which the Israelites were passing. There were lean years, when the earth yielded but sparsely of her harvests. From the winepresses came twenty measures where formerly there were fifty. Blasting winds, mildew and hail combined in the work of destruction. The reasons for these calamities were all based upon the disobedience and stubbornness of the people.

The prophecy closes with the promise that Zerubbabel shall be a signet, doubtless a symbol of his power and authority to declare the divine will.

We see also in this prophecy of the Temple, more glorious than Solomon's a glimpse of the vision vouchsafed to John in Patmos, who said: "I saw a new heaven and a new earth; for the first heaven and the first earth had passed away; and there was no more sea; and I, John, saw the holy city, New Jerusalem, coming down from God out of heaven, prepared as a bride adorned for her husband. And I heard a great voice out of heaven saying: Behold, the tabernacle of God is with men, and he will dwell with them, and they shall be his people, and God himself shall be with them, and be their God."

NEWS-SUPPRESSION

A large portion of the civilized world has been trying latcly to bottle the news more drastically than ever. Several foreign correspondents have been imprisoned in Germany and efforts have been made to intimidate others. In two or three cases American newspapers have recalled able and reliable correspondents because their lives were in danger and their work impedcd by the Hitler regime.

Russia, which for a while allowed newspaper people to come and go freely, has lately barred them from certain sections where conditions seem a little less favorable. It also requires its own censor's approval for any dispatch of a foreign correspondent before it may be sent out.

In Italy there is said to be no official censorship. At least, the Fascist government says so. However, foreign correspondents find that their important dispatches become strangely "lost" in telegraph offices, sometimes permanently, sometimes only a few days, or until the approved Italian version of the news has been published abroad.

Japan threatens to expel reporters who write too freely. China is trying to censor both news and news reels.

England, France and the United State are the only great powers left which permit the news gatherer to go where he will, see what he will and report it to his readers without interference. Some smaller countries, too, have refrained from news-suppressing activities. These are the countries where democracy survives.

Efforts to bottle news are usually futile. Truth has a way of getting out, and how, sooner or later. And in the absence of authentic facts, wild rumors may be published more derogatory to the censoring government than the truth would be. Dictatorships are usually too stupid to realize this. Free countries are more intelligent about it.

SOUND CURRENCY FIRST

The administration is facing the task of putting capital and credit to work. And they don't really go to work until thc currency is stabalized.

There are many good reasons for such a stand. The insurance company protecting the investments of thousands of familics will not put its funds into enterprises it is not sure of; it must have assurance.

The same is true of the savings banks. They will not put money into mortages unless there is a demand for housing and values are established on a sound foundation. The individual will not invest in an enterprise that has no sure basis upon which it can exist.

That is why the growing tendency towards price fixing will not help. Nobody believes that price fixing will work. It is based on false premises.

It is one reason why the NRA alone will not solve the problems involved. No one is sure that the new level of prices and purchasing power secured through its operation can be maintained. Many believe it can't.

A satisfactory level of prices must be decided upon and the currency of the nation stabilized upon that level, preferably with gold backing. It is not a coincidence that all economists generally agree upon the virtues of returning to the gold standard.

A level must be found at which goods can be exchanged freely and it must be maintained by the gold standard. The nation and the world are accustomed to this arrangement and capital and credit will not work satisfactorily until it is followed.

If the administration wants capital and credit to start things moving, it will have to establish a definite and a sound monetary policy.—Syracuse Post-Standard.

MT. LAKE PARK

We have been criticized by some of our friends for sometimes noting in this column too many infractions of the town laws and ordinances. But either we have reformed or those who furnished the basis for the items have had a chage of vision. For just now, and for some time past, our community has been as quict as the proverbial church mouse of the saintcd sinner in the "amen corner." All of us seem to be on our good behavior.

For sevcral mornings past firing of arms has been heard in or near the Park. We trust no one is so thoughtless, or foolish, as to be killing the gray squirrels in the corporate limits. There is a heavy penalty for shooting squirrels or quail, in the Park, and while there are many citizens who would hesitate to report other infractions of the law, these same persons would delight in reporting any one rightfully suspected of killing their pets.

Although frost has been reported nearly every morning rcently, still a number of places in the Park do not show any results following frost, a rather unusual condition in the middle of October. Of eourse, this may be due to the influences of our old friend —the caterpillar—upon the markings of which many d pend to determine just how much l to put in the cellar.

It is predict by the caterpillar prognosticators at thi will be a mild winter. They base their predictions on the fact that this fall there is a thin black mark around the tail and another around the neck (if the caterpillar has a neck), the intervening space of the chassis being a dark brown. We don't catch the idea exactly, but will live in hopes.

an alleged ally of Menke's, and Richards, another of the Menke ring, all took part, it is alleged, at one time or another, in the Tennant fire negotiations.

Menke is said to have admitted the plot when he was questioned recently in the Maryland penitentiary by officials of the two states including W. W. Dawson, prosecuting attorney of this county who represented Maryland at Menke's trial here last sphing.

Warhol, Legonsky and Valoska have made statements to the West Virginia officers which incriminated not only themselves but also Cantor in the Marilla fire. Legnosky and Valoska were the "torches," setting the fire after gasoline had been poured on walls and floors. Both were expected to die from burns suffered in the explosion, but recovered.

Courtney Tasker, who was not indicted, told jurors at Morgantown that he was a party to the attempt to burn Cantor's automobile last January and drove the machine to Garrett county to apply the torch. The ear was delivered to him at Sabraton. He said Cantor had $700 insurance on it.

The fourteen indictments place six charges of conspiracy to commit arson and defraud insurance companies against Cantor, four each against Tennant and Menke, two against Richards, three against Crawford and one each against Legnosky aud Valoska. Arson charges are made separately against Crane, McCormick and Menke.

It has been indicated that Warhol, Legnosky and Valoska will enter pleas of guilty when arraigned and that the others will demand trials. No attempt will be made to try Menke, Crane or McCormick until their prison terms have expired.

RAIL MERGER PLAN WOULD SCRAP B. AND O. SYSTEM

J. J. Cornwell Declares It Would Ruin Towns Along Line

John J. Cornwell, general counsel of the Baltimore and Ohio Railroad, last night declared that the adoption of the "Prince Plan" for the two-party consolidation of eastern railroads would "scrap" not only his own line but also towns and industries in Western Maryland, Western Pennsylvania, West Virginia, Ohio, Indiana and Illinois.

The "Prince Plan" has been submitted to Federal Railroad Coordinator Joseph Eastman as a means of ereating a more efficient transportation system in the nation's most highly industrialized states. It calls for the eonsolidation of every railroad between the Atlantic ocean and the Ohio river, New England and southern territory, into two super-systems, operated by the Pennsylvania and the New York Central.

The plan would also authorize the two roads with government consent to abandon such lines and discontinue such service as seemed advisable in the interest of economy and efficieney.

Cornwell read from what he called a "sweeping statement of the purposes of the Prince planners the following:

"The net result of withdrawing all through passenger and freight traffic from the main line of the Baltimore and Ohio together with the proposed rerouting of bituminous coal, both north bound and in direction of Lake Eric points, will be that the functions of this entire system between Philadelphia and St. Louis and Chicago will be those incident to handling strictly local freight and passenger traffic, or, in other words, the entire system will revert to the status of a two-branch line."

Adoption of this plan, said Cornwell, would mean ruin to property values and taxable bases in all cities and towns where shops and other railraod facilities would be scrapped; ruin to industries on the main line railroads which would become only branches; ruin for towns that expect prosperity out of the "new deal."

Cranberries for Fall

A well known food editor says: "Cranberry sause! Simple to serve and simply delicious. This fruit deserves a side dish of its own. Not to be hidden under a chicken wing or chop bone." A few choice recipes are as follows:

Whole Cranberry Sauce

Cranberry sauce can be made in ten minutes. It should be served cold. It is desirable to cook up a quantity at a time and fill mason jars, the same as other fruits, and have a supply on the pantry shelf ready for use. It is delicious and appropriate to serve with any meat course, hot or cold; make pies or tarts; serve on vanilla ice cream. (This makes a most delicious and attractive sundae).

Here is the recipe: One pound (4 cups) cranberries, 2 eups boiling water, 1½ to 2 eups sugar. Boil sugar and water together for five minutes; add the chanberries, boil without stirring (five minutes is usually sufficient) until the skins are broken. Remove from the fire when the popping stops, and let stand in cooking vessel until cool. Cooking cranberries too long spoils the flavor, and toughens the skins. To merely break the skins by cooking is enough. When they break they pop—after about 5 minutes of boiling. When they stop popping, stop eooking—remove from the fire and do not disturb until cool.

Cranberry Meringue Pie

This is an especially delicious and attraetive pie. One and one-half cups sugar, 2 cups cranberries, 1 tablespoon flour, 1-2 teaspoon vanilla, 2 tablespoons powdered sugar, 1-2 cup cold water, 1 tablespoon butter, 2 eggs. Cook sugar and water to a syrup; add the cranberries. Cook until they pop. Cool a little. Mix smoothly in a bowl the flour and yolks of eggs; add three tablespoons of the juice of the cooked cranberries, then add to the berries and simmer for 3 minutes. Stir in butter and vanilla and set aside to cool. Turn filling into deep pie crust previously baked; cover with merigue made from stiffly beaten whites of eggs and powdered sugar. Place in slow oven to set and slightly brown the meringue.

Cranberry Criss-Cross Pie

Here is a pie the men like, and it is quickly and easily made:

Have ready a partly baked pie shell; pour in the regular whole eranberry sauee when cold; put strips of pastry over the top and finish baking in a moderate oven.

Cranberry Frult Salad

On a chilled salad plate arrange crisp leaves of lettuce. In the center place a banana and two heaping teaspoons of eranberry sauce. Garnish with mayonnalse. Oranges, pineapples, pears or peaches may be substituted for bananas.

Yankee Pot Roast

Cranberries cooked with pot roast and the cheaper cuts of boiled meats make the meat exceedingly tender and delicious. To prepare a 3-lb. pot roast brown the meat first in 3 tablespoons of hot fat; when surface is brown, remove meat from pan and add 3 eups of water; stir until boiling, then add 2 cups of cranberry sauce, made less sweet than usual; replace meat in pan with this gravy-sauce and proceed with eooking in ordinary way, adding salt and pepper to taste when cooking is about half finished.

NEW "DEBT DRIVE" COMING

Of late there has been rumors to the effect that the American government is preparing to agree to a slash in the European debt which would amount almost to cancellation. These reports have originated in European diplomatie circles and some of them hinted that Norman H. Davis, credited with favoring the reduction of the debts, had made such a promise to foreign diplomats with the knowledge of the national administration.

There is nothing yet, so far as the public knows, to indicate that there is any truth in these reports. The probability is that they foreshadow a revival on the part of European nations of an intensive effort to secure debt cancellation from the United States. It is an old trick of European diplomacy, when it is getting ready to try to put something over on Uncle Sam to send out stories to the effeet that the American government "favors" the thing which the European diplomats are getting ready to put over. That is a good deal like sending out a smoke sereen at the beginning of an attaek.

The national administration is on record as opposed to debt cancellation or any scaling down of debts which would amount to virtual eancellation. There is no reason yet to believe that there has been any change in policy. The only thing hinting of such a change has been the rumors emanating from European politieal circles.

Certainly the American people have not changed their minds on the subject of debt eancellation. They realize that for every dollar the European statesmen succeed in chiselling from the amount which Europe owes us, another dollar must be raised by the American taxpayers to help liquidate the war which was waged "to save the world for democracy" but which succeeded only in raising dictatorships over a great section of the population of the world.

Just now the American people have about all they ean do to raise money to carry on the American government and to pay for the administration's recovery program. They do not feel that they are at this time able to pay the rest of the world's bill for waging the great war. Nor do they think they are justly called on to do this.

European observers are just now rather proudly stating that many of the nations of Europe are now further on the road to recovery from the depression than we are in spite of our NRA. They seem to think that this shows the superiority of their own economic ideas. If it is true that they are now better off economically than we are and have proportionately less unemployment, then they ought to be able to pay something on the debt which they owe us.

But it is a good bet that when the time comes for debt negotiation they will suddenly become poor again and will want Unele Sam to resume the entire burden of liquidating the expenses of the World War. European diplomats are built that way. They will settle if they have to, but will find it a lot more fun to force Uncle Sam to pay for something which they started.

200 IDLE MINERS' FAMILIES TO TRY HOMESTEAD PLAN

West Virginia Tract Picked By Government for Demonstration Area of Farms and Factory

SCHOOL WILL BE PROVIDED

Two hundred West Virginia families, vietims of long unemployment, are to be established by the Government in the first of the subsistence homestead communities, a demonstration project in decentralizing industry under the Roosevelt rural-urban program.

Arrangements have been completed by the Department of the Interior, it was announced yesterday by Secretary Harold L. Ickes, for the purchase of an 1,100-acre farm in Preston county, West Virginia, not far from Morgantown, for the demonstration.

For Unemployed Miners

The farm will be platted for subsistence homesteads and will be settled by unemployed coal miners in the area for whom prospects of reemployment there have vanished. Some, Secretary Ickes said, have been without steady employment for five years and more, and they have been stranded with shifts in the industry.

The demonstration project calls for construction of modest homes with from two to four acres of land for each family suitable for gardening, fruit trees, poultry raising and the production of other foodstuffs for home consumption. The homes will cost about $2,000 each and will become the property of the settlers under twenty-year purchase contracts providing for small monthly payments, low interest charges and small down payment.

To Be Self-Governing

The settlement will be self-governing with administration to be patterned after the New England town meeting plan. A school will be established which will also serve as a community center.

Settlers will combine subsistence farming with industrial employment following the principles of the rural-urban plan advocated as a step toward increased security for both the worker and industry by the President.

Is Primarily for Unfortunate Children of Community

Dr. George Bennett, the orthopedic specialist, will be in Oakland on October 28, at the Court House, to have a clinic for the Maryland League for Crippled Children. This gives an opportunity for any crippled or deformed child in the county to be examined by a specialist. Cases which have been seen before in orthopedic clinics will be sent notices by mail that Dr. Bennett is coming, but other children with diseases of their bones or any form of paralysis may be brought to see Dr. Bennett at that time.

This clinic is held primarily for poor children who need the services of a specialist, Dr. Eugene Peck, health officer, stated and it is not expected that it can replace the important work done by the local doctors in caring for their patients from month to month.

DR. SYMONS TO ADDRESS TABLELAND CONFERENCE

Annual Meeting of Association To Be Held on October 27th

The annual meeting of the Allegheny Tableland Association will be held Friday evening, October 27, in the dining room of the Mt. Lake Hotel, Mountain Lake Park, I. S. Middaugh, secretary, has announced.

The women of the Methodist Episcopal church of the Park will serve a chicken dinner for 50 cents. The meeting will begin with dinner at 6:15, followed by the business session featuring an address by Dr. T. B. Symons, director of the Maryland Extension Service.

Music, election of a new board of directors and the set-up of the annual program will be other features.

Every Tableland unit is entitled to two votes and is asked to have a delegation present. Every community not yet organized but interested in the Tableland program is asked to have delegates at the meeting.

Fred J. Reed, Klngwood, W. Va., president, has called a meeting of the board of directors to meet at the hotel at 3:00 o'clock preceding the annual meeting to transact business and prepare a program for adoption at the evening session.

Granges, Rotary and Kiwanis clubs and other civic groups and service organizations are being asked to cooperate in this annual meeting. Reservations can be made by sending a postal card to I. S. Middaugh, Mountain Lake Park, Md., stating how many will attend.

Forestry Camps To Move

Orders to move this week have been received by officers of the reforestation camps at Potomac Manor and Swallow Falls, and preparations are going forward to evacuate the two sites by Saturday.

The Swallow Falls contingent will be moved to Beltsville, Md., which is a town near College Park, and the Potomac Manor Company will go to Camp Ritchie, near Hagerstown, for the winter.

The camps at New Germany and Bond will remain in Garrett county for the winter. Between twenty and thirty men from the New Germany camp will be moved to Swallow Falls and a similar number from the Bond camp will occupy the Potomac Manor site, where work will be carried on as the weather permits.

The orders to move came as a surprise to the officers in the two camps as some winter camp equipment had just been received on Saturday of last week and was being erected for a stay of the men in camp for a month or more longer.

TABLELAND FAIR OPENED IN PITTSBURGH YESTERDAY

Rivalry Exists Between Various Counties As To Size and Quality of the Exhibits

GARRETT HAS GOOD SHOW

The second annual Allegheny Tableland Fair opened at Gimbel's in Pittsburgh yesterday and will continue through to October 21st. Hundreds of entries have been rceeived and classified.

Great rivalry exists between the various counties as to the quality and sizs of the exhibits and from present indications it looks as though the Fair will be much bigger and better than the first attempt last year.

It has been agreed with the Fair promoters that anyone desiring to exhibit in the Fair, even though they have not sent in their entry blank, may still do so.

Many requests have been received for the assignment of spaee to sell various products from the Tableland district, such as potatoes, apples, maple syrup, honey, candies, baskets, etc. These spaces will be provided at Gimbel's and the exhibitor will be permitted to handle their own transactions without any cost or commissions to anyone. This is expected to be quite a feature of the Fair this year and anyone who has a quantity of any particular product of the Tableland district, whether home grown or home made, can offer the same for sale to the public of Pittsburgh. Last year it was estimated that there were about 45,000 visitors to the Allegheny Tableland Fair at Gimbel's in the three days. This year, it has been extended an extra day, which will insure those who are exhibiting articles for sale that they will have this additional time in which to increase their sales over last year.

There have been many new classifications added to the premium list this year, especially in the Women's Departments, which affords a greater opportunity for the women and children to compete for these prizes.

Capable judges have been secured through the cooperation of Mr. J. M. Frey, of the Agricultural Extension Division, Pennsylvania State College; Dr. T. B. Symons, Director Agricultural Extension Service, College Park, and Dr. Frame, of the Agricultural Service, University of West Virginia. This will give assurance of impartial judgment and all three states will be represented.

Prize Winners Announced

Several Garrett county people were awarded prizes at the fair which included more than 1,000 individual displays.

Among them were W. E. Spoerlein, Oakland, and William Custer, Iloyes, eggs; Mrs. J. H. Custer, Oakland. Mrs. J. H. Carter, Oakland, handwork; Mrs. II. A. Loraditch, Oakland, embroidered linens; Mrs. C. C. Beachy, Accident, home cured ham.

Officers were installed by Rev. C. A. Shilke at a candle light service, and Rev. Shilke preached the evening sermon.

Officers chosen were Coleman Shaffer, Aurora, president; Ruth Emory, Bittinger, vice-president; Geraldine Nordeck, Oakland, secretary; Sally Jones, Red House, treasurer; Mary Coffman, Keyser, and Wade Turney, Accident, on the executive committee; Rev. C. A. Shilke, counsellor. The president appointed to his staff Miss Lorena Spiggle, Aurora, life service secretary; George Altstetter, Oakland, educational secretary; Miss Jessie Moon, Red House, missionary secretary, and Miss Edith Smith, Oakland, press correspondent.

TO GIVE OUT FOODSTUFF TO NEEDY DURING WINTER

Fifteen to 20 Different Commodities To Be Distributed

From 15 to 20 different food commodities will be distributed, according to Miss Ethel Miller, relief administrator.

The food will be given out under the direction of W. T. Medford, director of commodity distribution under the Federal Emergency Relief Administration, and will be sent to Cumberland, from which point it will be brought to Oakland and other points in the county.

The first item for distribution is pork, and there will be 11,172 pounds of it given out to relief families, thru local stores. These commodities will be given only to those who are registered at the relief office. This food is over and above any other relief in the county and comes from another Federal Fund, Miss Miller stated.

The list of foodstuffs to be distributed through the winter include butter, evaporated or condensed milk, fresh milk, eheese, eggs, canned beef, eottonseed oil, eanned fruits, dried fruits, oranges or grapefruit, peanut butter, flour, cracked wheat, eorn meal, rice, and cod-liver oil.

No families would be given food except on the basis of their actual needs, it was stated, as it is not the intention to load pantry shelves to the ceiling because there are food surpluses. It is intended to handle the distribution so that it will not offer a threat to the integrity of family life, but will avoid the danger of pauperization.

Burned In Gasoline Explosion

Kenneth Tasker, nine-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. Victor Tasker, was painfully burned about the face last Saturday when the boy with a lighted match attempted to see how much gasoline remained in the tank of an old car stored in the yard of a garage on Third street. At first it was feared that one eye of the lad had been destroyed by the explosion.

There will also be two classes for the B. and O. potato elub exhibits, the first year club and the advanced group. Dee Crane, West Virginia Extension, will judge the exhibits.

Under each class rural russets, smooth russets or any other variety may be shown. Exhibits this year would be 16 tubers instead of the usual 32, Mr. Carter stated. PAUL IN ASIA MINOR

LESSON TEXT—Acts 13:1-5, 13-15; 14:19-23.

GOLDEN TEXT—And he said unto them, Go ye into all the world, and preach the gospel to every creature. Mark 16:15.

PRIMARY TOPIC—Far Away Friends Hear About Jesus.

JUNIOR TOPIC—A Ship Sets Sail.

INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOPIC—Why Send Missionaries Abroad?

YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOPIC—The Missionary Obligation.

I. The Beginning of Foreign Missions (vv. 1-12).

This marks the beginning of foreign missions as the deliberately planned enterprise of the church.

1. The gifts of the church at Antioch (v. 1). Young as was Antioch, the new religious center, she had prophets and teachers. When Christ ascended on high, he gave gifts to men for the purpose of perfecting the saints unto the work of the ministry (Eph. 4:8-12). The church does not exist for itself, but for service to others.

2. First missionaries sent forth (vv. 2, 3). Barnabas and Saul were the first foreign missionaries. They went forth by the hands of the church at the command of the Spirit. The work of evangelizing the world was laid so heavily upon these men that they refrained from eating in order to seek the will of God in prayer. They were directed to send forth those whom the Spirit called, teaching us that the real call for service comes from the Spirit. The Spirit called and the very best men were sent from the church at Antioch. Before sending forth the missionaries, there was a second season of prayer before laying hands upon them, indicating that ordination has its proper place in sending forth missionaries.

3. Preaching the Word of God in Cyprus (vv. 4, 5). Because the gospel is "good news," it is natural for the missionary to go among his acquaintances. Christ commanded the one out of whom a demon had been cast to go to his own house and tell what great things the Lord had done for him (Luke 8:39).

4. Withstood by Elymas, the sorcerer (vv. 6-12). Elymas, under the influence of Satan, sought to turn the mind of Sergius Paulus from the Word of God, and to hinder the gospel as it entered upon its career of conversion of the heathen. Paul denounced him as full of guile and villainy.

II. Paul and Barnabas at Antioch in Pisidia (vv. 13-16).

From Cyprus Paul and Barnabas, with John Mark, went northward to Perga. Here, for some reason, Mark parted company with the missionaries, and returned home. We are not told as to why he went back, but it is a pleasure to know that he later redeemed himself. Before Paul's death, he spoke favorably of Mark, declaring that he had found him profitable unto the ministry (II Tim. 4:11). Reaching Antioch in Pisidia they entered a synagogue on the Sabbath day. Though Paul was now a missionary to the Gentiles, he did not depart from his custom—to go to the Jew first.

III. Paul and Barnabas Preaching the Gospel in Lystra (Acts 14:1-28).

1. At Iconium (vv. 1-7). Their experience here was much the same as at Antioch. They preached in the synagogue, causing a multitude of Jews and Gentiles to believe. The unbelieving Jews stirred up the Gentiles to the most bitter persecution.

2. The attempt to worship Paul and Barnabas as gods (vv. 8-18). To escape the united assault of the Jews and Gentiles, they fled to Lystra and Derbe, where they preached the gospel. The healing of the lame man occasioned new difficulty. This man was a confirmed cripple, having never walked. On hearing Paul preach, faith was born in his heart (Rom. 10:17). When Paul perceived that he trusted Christ, he called with a loud voice so that all could hear for the man to stand upright. The cure was instantaneous for he leaped and walked. This miracle was so notable that the very thing which should have been a help now became a hindrance. The people sought to worship the missionaries.

3. The stoning of Paul (vv. 19, 20). Wicked Jews from Antioch and Iconium pursued Paul with such relentless hate that they stirred up the people at this place, who had been willing to worship the missionaries, to stone them. This shows that satanic worship can soon be transformed into satanic hate. They not only stoned Paul, but dragged him out of the city for dead. God raised him up, and with undaunted courage Paul pressed on with his duties as a missionary bearing the good news to the lost.

The Name Jesus

If the name Jesus were left out of our prayers, our hymns, and our worship, we would mourn as if the rose were effaced from the cheek of morning, the sun were banished from the heavens, and the sweetest note stricken from the psalm of life.

Proof of Discipline

In his sufferings the Christian is often tempted to think himself forgotten. But his afflictions are the clearest proofs that he is an object of God's fatherly discipline.

SCOOP'S COLUMN

Always the Same Old Holler

In an item in The Republican of 40 years ago somebody was hollering just like they do today. The article follows:

"An average waltz takes a dancer over about three quarters of a mile, a square dance makes him cover half a mile. A girl with a well-filled program travels thus in one evening: Twelve waltzes, nine miles; four other dances at half a mile apiece, which is hardly a big estimate, two miles more; the intermission stroll and the trips to the dressing room to renovate her gown and complexion, half a mile more; grand total, eleven and one-half miles.

"But 'it tires her to death' to push a broom over 50 yards of carpet and would break her back to mop up an 8 by 10 floor, although mother can do both because 'she is used to doing it.'"

Seen on a Tombstone
"In life I was all wrong.
But I'm dead right now."

I Was Only Fooling

"Are those new socks you have on?" exclaimed Mrs. Scoop the other day. "I've never seen them before." And wanting to get one over on her about her sock darning, I replied, "I'm sure it's been a long time since you've seen these."

Mild OR Severe?

If you only take one county paper your mind ought to be at rest on the weather for this winter. But if you take both, how you must be suffering mentally! Last week in the Democrat all signs pointed to a severe winter. At the same time in The Republican our Mt. Lake correspondent told us the caterpillars had decreed a mild winter, on account of black rings around the tail and neck.

We must decide one way or the other, lest our subscribers go crazy worrying about such a thing.

In the first place, about black rings. There's been a black ring around Archibaldson's neck both winter and summer, which doesn't mean mild weather at all—just indifference.

And a ring in the tub might mean a severe winter—less baths make less loss of heat. Or anyway that's what you might think, and what do you care what I think?

There will be heavy coats on pigeons, denoting severe winter. But the coats won't be any heavier on the unemployed, in fact they'll be a little thinner. So that may or may not mean a hard winter, depending entirely on the north wind and the amount of snowfall.

Skunks will have a peculiar odor this year, which means there would be a hot time in the old countryside if you got too close.

The numerous roots on the Johnson grass this summer will make it a long and hard winter for me as far as production goes.

Mice are trying to build nests in my house, showing that it's going to be a mild winter. If it was going to be severe, they'd park in somebody else's house.

They say it's been a wet summer, which makes it a hard winter. From the way the prohibition vote is going it looks also like a wet winter, and it's probable that there'll be no drouth in this county either.

Looks like some people are trying to delay winter the way they keep wearing their straw hats.

Mustaches and beards seem to be more plentiful, which might mean anything from a hard and severe winter to a lack of razor, or just plain laziness.

So you see all indications point to either a mild or a severe winter. Just take your pick and then let the weather decide.

But as for me, I'll tell you what I think, as if you cared.

The amount of red flannels hanging on the lines of my neighbors, Cecil Smith, Cot McComas, Lawrence Junkins, J. M. Falkensteln, Harry Helbig, and Ed Lawrence, indicates just a good old-fashioned winter.

But who cares about winter yet with Hallowe'en coming, and a big celebration in store for all of us? The Firemen are again breaking through with a good time and it'll be your own fault if you don't take part.

J. Arthur DeWitt was in this week and raised my spirits about one hundred percent by saying that he looked for this column almost the first thing each week. They would have raised two hundred percent if he had left out the ALMOST. But I couldn't say anything because he paid his subscription, and anyway, he's bigger than me. Or if you think I don't know my grammar, "bigger than I."

A Prancing Steed?

What is that across the street? A horse or an automobile? It looks like an automobile. It has a top, steering wheel, four wheels and is painted. But wait a minute, look at that thing hop. He just jumped five feet and stopped all of a sudden with a sort of quiver. There!—he jumps again, seven feet this time. Steady, boy, don't let all these people scare you.

Boy, it jumped ten feet this time! Choke it lady, choke it. That's the only way you'll get him started right. That might sound cruel for a horse, but it's really an automobile with just a woman driver.

Fair and cooler, cold and rainy, frosty, pumpkins, corn shocks, mince pie, oysters, absence of screen doors, awnings, coal bins being filled, no robins, ducks in their place, no more white shoes or linens, coats displayed in all stores. Yes, fall is here and winter is just around the corner. But then good times have been just around the corner for years.

So it's going to be either a mild or severe winter. And now little children, set your minds at rest until Mother Goose lets loose all her feathers from the sky and you find yourself in the midst of a snow drift. Then it's too late to worry.

MEDICAL EXAMINATION IN SCHOOL IS WORTH WHILE

Good Health in Body and Mind For Every Child Is Sought

Medical examination of children in the public schools of the counties by the deputy State health officer of each county, was begun soon after the schools opened this fall. The plan of concentrating on the younger children—those in the lower grades, with check up examinations in some of the higher grades—has been found to be so worthwhile that it is to be continued, Dr. R. H. Riley, Director of the State Department of Health said, in announcing the arrangements for this year.

Though a special effort will be made to reach all of the younger children, the older ones will not be overlooked. Any who are in need of care of this sort and who are brought to the attention of the health officer by the teacher, and all of the older children who are scheduled for re-examination this season, will be examined this year.

Dental clinics for school children have been established in nearly all of the counties and in addition to the medical examinations the usual dental clinics will be held throughout the year.

"The aim of all of the health service for children," Dr. Riley said, "is to protect them from avoidable illnesses and to help them toward normal growth and development. Effort is made to discover conditions that may need care or treatment, and that would effect a child's health, if not attended to. Special attention is paid in the examinations to the throat, the nose, teeth, heart, lungs, vision, hearing, and to the general health, as indicated by the weight and the appearance of the child. It is easier to correct unfavorable conditions while they are in the early stages. That is why a particular effort is made to reach all of the younger children.

"Last year nearly 50,000 children in the counties had the benefit of examinations of this sort—over 44,000 in the schools and nearly 5,000 at the child health conferences in the counties, in preparation for their admission to school. In all cases, parents were notified of conditions that needed attention and were urged to have the corrections made.

"The school records show," Dr. Riley said, "that here has been a marked improvement in attendance and a corresponding decrease in absences from preventable illnesses. This has been brought about through the joint activities of the schools, the parents and the departments of health. All of us in this group are partners in the important business of preparing the children of today to meet the responsibilities of life. Good health in body and in mind for every one of them, is the ideal we are striving for."

When Mother was the Power in the House there was No Electric Ironer

"Sad" iron was right. For using it was anything but pleasant. Ironing day was walking day. Back and forth, from hot stove to ironing board, the path lay. No two irons heated the same. Wearying care was necessary to save the fabrics from scorching.

Today, with an electric ironer, you can choose the coolest, most comfortable room in the house in which to do your ironing. Seated before your ironer you guide the pieces through with scarcely any more effort than that of lifting the garments. A touch of the hand stops or starts the roll.

The latest models of electric ironers are on display at our showroom. Let us demonstrate for you how much more quickly than by hand they can iron shirts, dresses, and other pieces.

Winter Vegetables and the Food Bill

Winter vegetables are what we have to plan with now or very soon. Gardens are gone or fast going, their crops are in storage or on the way. Cutting every possible corner to keep the family food bill down and yet not leave out any of the neccssaries, how shall we make up the weekly market list of winter vegetables? We may put down the winter vegetables in three classes, says the Bureau of Home Economics of the U. S. Department of Agriculture. There are those that develop underground—the roots, including carrots, turnips and beets; also onions, which are bulbs.

There are the green leaves, including cabbage, kale, spinach and turnip tops. One or more of these will be found all through the winter in some markets, cabbage doubtless everywhere. There are pumpkin and squash, which are now making the fields and roadsides gay with color. Then there are, indoors, the canned and dried summer vegetables which you have put up yourself, or which you can buy at relatively low cost in the store. At the top of this list come canned tomatoes, dried beans, dried peas, and dried corn. All those vegetables are low-priced as a rule everywhere. And they have the same or better food values than the higher-priced vegetables —a fact which helps considerably. The question is how to find ways to make these old standbys seem new and different.

One trick is to use some vegetables raw as often as you can—in salad, or in slices or sticks, as if they were celery. Then you get all their best food values, and also a crispness and a flavor which peps up the rest of your meal. Serve carrots, turnips, cabbage or onions raw sometimes. Then there are more or less unusual ways of preparing some of the common vegetables to make old-timers seem like something new. Carrots scalloped or fried with apples, for example. Or cabbage scalloped with apples. Remember, too, that carrots taste good and also retain nearly all of their food value when steamed or when baked with a pot roast. Try, also, serving them diced and added to stews or creamed dishes just in time to heat through but not lose their crispness. You will like their flavor and texture this way.

Onions are too often thought of just as seasoning for other foods. Baked onions, stuffed with breadcrumbs or with rice seasoned with chopped salt pork or with peanuts, make a most attractive dish, and a "different" one, in place of some more expensive vegetable. So do onions scalloped with tomatoes, or with cheese. Cabbage panned (cook it just a few minutes, leaving it still green or white and crisp); kale panned in milk—any of the greens cooked in milk—make a change from the usual thing.

Here are a few vegetable plates—suggestions from which to make a choice if you want a vegetable dinner:

Baked potatoes, onions scalloped with tomatoes. An oven dinner, to which you could add hot biscuits.

Mashed sweet potatoes, baked onions stuffed with peanuts and breadcrumbs.

Spoonbread, made with or without eggs, and with bits of salt pork in the batter, would go well with this.

Creamed potatoes, carrots fried or scalloped with apples. Whole wheat biscuits would be good with this.

Spanish rice, raw carrot sticks. Almost a one-dish meal, with which you might like rye bread.

Blackeyed peas seasoned with salt pork, turnip sticks. Corn pone for bread.

Five-minute cabbage, Harvard beets, fried cornmeal mush.

Fried potatoes, baked squash, cold slaw, rolls.

Baked beans or dried corn, stewed tomatoes, steamed brown bread.

Mashed turnips, hashed brown potatoes or fried hominy, sliced raw onion. Toast.

FREEDOM OF THE PRESS

President Roosvelt has made it extremely plain that he does not object to criticism, but one gathers that he has not been able to impress that point of view on all his subordinates. Dick Thompson, editor of the Tallahassee Tribune, for example, has just gone through an unhappy experience with a representative of the Department of Labor. The Tribune had spoken out against the unionization of a cotton mill in its community. Its editor was thereupon threatened by the federal agent, named Dunnegan, who held that the Tribune had violated the provisions of the NRA, forbade any further publications of such opinions and indicated that the United States attorney at Montgomery might be called on for action. Mr. Thompson's resentment was expressed in an editorial, part of which runs as follows:

"No bureaucratic appointee can, with authority, tell any newspaper editor, from the biggest daily paper down to the smallest weekly paper, that which he ean say and that which he cannot say. Mr. Dunnegan came to Tallahassee as a representative of the United States Department of Labor and his actions here are understood by this paper to be official actions, backed up by the department which he represents. We say that the United States Constitution has not been changed and that it is more important than the empty threats of Mr. Dunnegan. * * * The editor of this paper will express his views and opinions through this paper as long as the Constitution of the United States grants a free press and a free speech. * * * Now, Mr. Dunnegan, it is your move."

The position taken by the Tribune is so impregnable that one understands why the Montgomery Advertiser should say: "There is not a respectable newspaper in this country which will not applaud its declaration of principle and purpose, however sharply many newspapers will disagree as to whether the Tallahassee mills should be unionized. But something even dearer than unionism is being involved. The last refuge of human dignity in this country is in the principle that conscience must be free."

IN DAYS OF OLD

FORTY YEARS AGO

Fifty bushels of chestnuts, brought to Oakland from the near-by woods and sold to local merchants, were shipped to western points.

The marriage of Miss Sarah N. Strawser to Ensebus W. Ashby was solemnized at Crellin. Charles Shaffer, of Deer Park, and Miss Rosa Wolf, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John A. Wolf, of Oakland, were married.

Miss Annie Alberta Browning, of Oakland, and Mr. Patrick J. Garrett, of Deer Park, were also married. Richard and Michael Maroney were two of the attendants.

Samuel Butler, who was injured when a stone fell on his head while engaged in digging a well, was slowly recovering.

Isaac Leighton leased his coal mine to J. W. Bowls, who sold the output at $1 per ton at the mine.

Among those who were going to the Fair at Chicago were Charles J. Newman, William Glotfelty, Charles Wilson, Julius Scherr, Lloyd C. Shaffer, George Giessman, Mr. and Mrs. Gilmor S. Hamill, Peter P. Lohr, Mrs. Mattie Townshend, Mrs. Kate Crane, Mr. and Mrs. C. S. Davis, Samuel Lawton, Abram Lawton, Jacob S. Myers, R. C. Townshend, John Davis, W. R. Offutt and Daniel Sweitzer.

TWENTY YEARS AGO

The entire front page of The Republican was devoted to prize winners in the first annual Garrett County fair which was termed a success through the efforts of the officers and directors of the organization.

Fire burned the municipal pumping station in the Oakland Hotel grounds being the second pumping station in Oakland destroyed by fire within a month.

Blaine Giessman was able to be out after being injured when kicked by a horse.

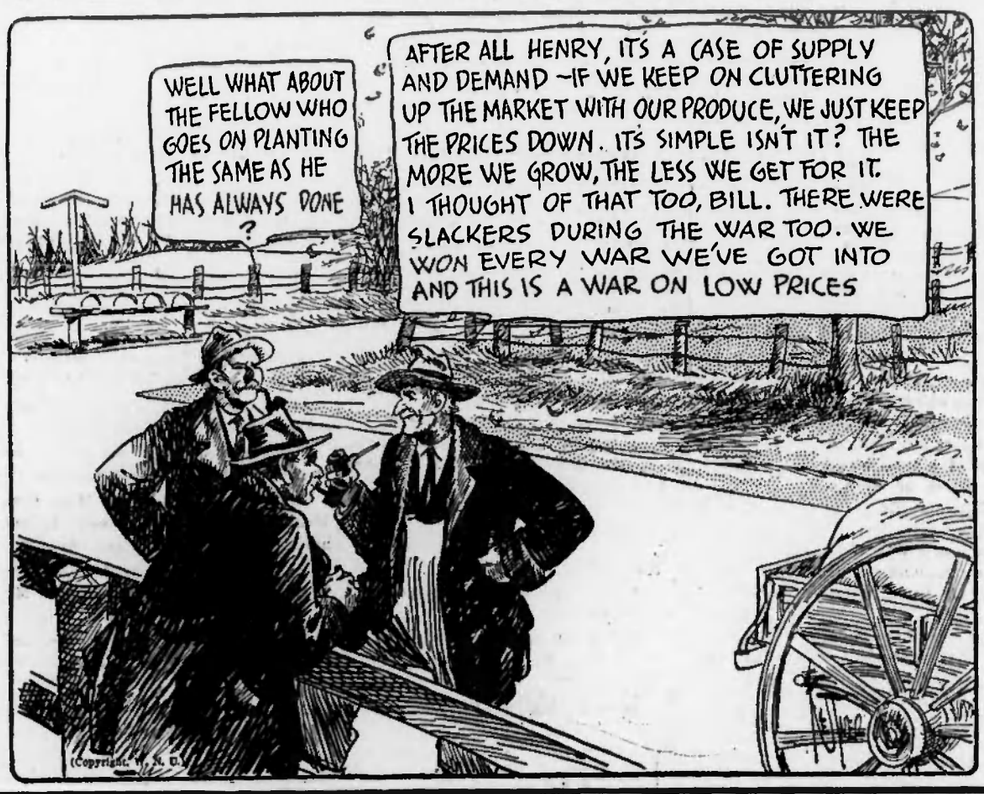
A War on Low Prices



HOW TO SAVE MONEY ON YOUR MONTHLY GAS BILL

A Series of These Articles to Appear in The Republican

This is the second of a series of five articles describing methods of gas economy in the home.

Gas Economy in Cooking

Gas users can frequently effect material savings in the cost of gas for cooking if they follow these suggestions for economy by gas company service departments.

Unclean burners are a source of gas waste. They should be cleaned frequently with a stiff wire brush. About twice a year they should be removed and boiled in a solution composed of one tablespoonful of sal soda to each quart of water.

While there should be a free circulation of air in the kitchen to provide ample oxygen for the flame, strong drafts blow the fire aside and much heat value is lost.

A cooking flame should just touch and spread out slightly on the bottom of the utensil. A flame which licks up around the sides is wasting gas. If it is properly adjusted it will not smoke surfaces with which it comes in contact.

As in other gas appliances, the fire should burn with a steady blue flame. Too much air causes the flame to sputter. Too little creates a yellow tip to the flame. Either condition wastes gas. If difficulty is experienced in obtaining a proper flame the gas company service department should be consulted.

Do not light the gas until food is ready to place over the burner. Turn gas off before removing the utensile from the fire.

Use covered utensile whenever possible.

Reduce the size of the flame when food starts to cook.

Place food over the simmer burner as soon as it comes to a boil. Less heat is required to keep it at the boiling point.

Do not use a larger burner than is necessary. If your stove has a simmer burner you will find it large enough for many cooking operations and to warm small quantities of food.

In spite of all precautions, more gas will be used in winter than in summer because the starting temperature of the food to be heated is much lower and more warm meals are prepared. Lower temperature of surrounding air also increases winter gas consumption.

At Detroit, an invention is announced of a "magnetic door," containing a concealed coil of wires which starts an alarm when a person carrying a gun or an equivalent amount of metal, passes through into a bank.

At Berlin, Germany, Chancellor Hitler announced Germany's withdrawal from the League of Nations and World Disarmament Conference, endangering, some believe, the peace of Europe.

At Charlotte, N. C., a motorist, claiming damages from a collision with a circus wagon, attached five elephants.

CASES OF SCARLET FEVER SHOULD CAUSE NO ALARM

Health Officer States Disease Is In a Mild Form

Twenty-one cases of scarlet fever have been reported to the health office since last Wednesday, according to Dr. Eugene C. Peck, health officer. Although this outbreak is causing considerable inconvenience to the parents and is cutting down the attendance in the schools of the county because of the number of children absent and under quarantine, there is no cause for alarm on the part of the public, Dr. Peck stated.

"This year the disease has had a mild form and there have been no deaths as a result," he continued. "The disease is difficult to control because the germ which causes it is found not only in the cases of typical scarlet fever, but also in the throats of other people who have more or less sign of inflammation in the throat. The germs are spread almost entirely by fresh secretions from the throat and nose of such infected people. The germ can infect a milk supply, and if a person with infection in the nose and throat handles milk, the milk is dangerous unless pasteurized or sterilized before use.

"The disease usually shows itself first as a sore throat; there is some fever and patients often vomit. In the typical case the rash appears about the second or third day of the disease, and at the same time one can see that there is a rash on the roof of the mouth and the tongue shows marked redness of certain spots on it. After a few days the peeling begins. These cases are dangerous to other people from the start until every inflammation caused by it has disappeared.

"The regulations of the State Department of Health require that the child be excluded from school for 21 days from the beginning, and until all abnormal discharges stops and sores are healed. Patients who are exposed to the disease and then separated from the infection may develop the disease any time within one week following exposure, so children who live in the same family with a case without catching the disease are required to stay out of school for 28 days. A pamphlet on the 'Control of Communicable Diseases' is issued by the State Department of Health and copies may be obtained at the local health office or will be mailed from it on request.

"The most important measure in the control of scarlet fever," Dr. Peck said, "is the same as that which aids in the control of all children's diseases. This is, that every sick child should be put to bed, especially if the symptoms are a cold or sore throat, and a doctor should be called to see the child. If the child is only mildly ill, it still may have a case of contagious disease and spread it to others.

"Of the 21 cases reported in this last week, six were seen by physicians and reported to the health department and the others are cases where the health department has learned that suspicious illness existed and a visit by the health officer has confirmed the diagnosis.

"There is only one proved and two suspicious cases of diphtheria known in the county, but there has been considerable diphtheria in surrounding territory, and it is important that parents get their children, especially the younger ones," Dr. Peck warned, "immunized against this disease."

To Celebrate 450th Anniversary of Birth of Martin Luther

Dr. H. D. Hoover, professor of practical theology in the Lutheran Theological Seminary, Gettysburg, Pa., will be the speaker at a meeting to be held in Oakland Sunday, November 5, celebrating the 450 anniversary of the birth of Martin Luther.

Rev. A. B. Harper, Accident, and Dr. John G. Robinson will have charge of the training of a chorus of 60 voices for the singing of typical Reformation hymns.

Dr. Hoover, former president of Carthage college is widely known. Members of Aurora, Red House, Keyser, Westernport, Grantsville, Bittinger, Accident, Friendsville, Davis, Elkins, and Oakland congregations will take part in this celebration.

Beyond The County

In Baltimore, it is announced that plans have been completed for 10 new factories and the expansion of 8 now existing there.

From Washington it is reported that applications from Maryland to participate in the wheat reduction plan totaled 7,717, representing 234,535 acres, which means a reduction of 35,180 acres in 1934 in this state.

In Washington, it is announced that two states—New York and California—have received more than one-fourth of the Federal money authorized for distribution through the Nation during the last year as loan grants for direct unemployment relief.

At Canton, S. Dakota, investigations show that sane Indians have been confined in an asylum there shackled and padlocked to beds and water pipes, one sane man having been so confined for 11 years.

In San Francisco, a woman is being sought on a fugitive warrant charging that she is a border of more than $85,000 in gold.

At Oklahoma City, George "Machine Gun" Kelly and his wife Kathryn, were sentenced to the penitentiary for life for participating in the Urshel kidnapping.

From San Francisco it is announced that Alcatraz Island, whose rocky shores rise precipitately from San Francisco Bay, more than a mile from mainland and surrounded by swift currents, has been selected by the Government for confining desperate gangsters, kidnapers, and other "No. 1" Federal convicts.

Over the radio, it is announced, that up to the present the Government owes more than 23 billion dollars.

At Harrisburg, Pa., those favoring the "dry" cause, have applied for an injunction to prevent the election of delegates on November 7, to a state convention which will cast Pennsylvania's vote on December 5 on repeal of the 18th amendment.

At Washington, an executive order signed by the President, calls for a fine of $500 and 6 months imprisonment for any person falsely representing himself to be operating under or displaying the blue eagle insigna while not complying with its provisions.

From New York, investigations disclose that Albert H. Wiggin, chairman Chase National Bank, received from bonuses, salary and extra pay from other corporations, while his bank was losing millions, over $250,000 a year and was voted $100,000 a year for life by the executive committee of the bank.

BLISTER RUST A MENACE TO WHITE PINE IN STATE

Work Being Done In County To Prevent Spread of Disease

The white pines in Western Maryland and surrounding country are seriously threatened by blister rust and unless protected will in all probability meet the same fate that the chestnut trees have in the past. Outbreaks of white pine blister rust have been discovered in Tucker and Randolph counties, West Virginia; Fayette and Somerset counties, Pennsylvania, and in Allegany and Washington counties, Maryland.

The rust is a fungus disease which lives alternately on gooseberries or currants and white pine. The disease will travel from one gooseberry or currant to another but not from one white pine to another. It travels up to 100 miles from white pine to gooseberry or currant, but under average forest conditions less than 900 feet from gooseberry or currant to white pine. The control of the disease, therefore, consists of digging out and killing all gooseberries or currants within 900 feet of the white pine.

The U. S. Department of Agriculture and the State Forestry Department are cooperating in its control. This work was started in Garrett county recently and will be continued until the leaf fall makes it necessary to suspend control operations until next spring when the leaves are again present. The work will then be resumed in Garrett and Allegany counties. The control work has been completed at Herrington Manor on the State Forest and on the farms of Messrs. Kelly and Hughes near Crellin. This work is being done by two crews of eight men each under the foremanship of Ray Porter, of Oakland, and Lawton O. Friend, of Swanton. Where the area of white pine is large enough to justify it the work will be done by local labor employed by the U. S. Department of Agriculture under the provision of the NRA at no charge to the land owner.

All owners of white pine in Maryland, regardless of the number of trees owned are urged to get in touch with H. E. Yost, blister rust control agent at Grantsville, their county agricultural agent, any member of the State Forestry Department, or write direct to the U. S. Department of Agriculture, Bureau of Plant Industry, Washington, D. C., for information concerning the control of this disease.

200 IDLE MINERS' FAMILIES TO TRY HOMESTEAD PLAN

West Virginia Tract Picked by Government for Demonstration Area of Farms and Factory

SCHOOL WILL BE PROVIDED

It is aimed to provide a demonstration of the feasibility of decentralization by private concerns and will include a factory where the exact operation of the project will be available for study.

To Make Postal Equipment

In the absence of a private industry immediately available for transfer to the area, it has been aranged that the faetory shall produce special equipment required by the Postoffice Department. In addition, handieraft industries will be developed in the community.

It will be financed out of a fund of $25,000,000 set aside by Congress in the public works section of the National Recovery Act. Development of the homestead section of the project will be under the immediate supervision of M. L. Wilson, director of the subsistence homestead division of the Department of the Interior. Other projects are being worked out in cooperation with private industry wherever possible to provide demonstrations of the same principle in other regions.

The settlers are to be selected from miners within a radius of twenty miles of the farm. The factory will be situated at a point not more than two miles from any of the homesteads. Some of the settlers will be employed in constructing the project. Most of them are expected to perform unskilled labor in connection with the building of their homes including the excavation of basements with storage space for canned fruits and vegetables. Electric current will be available for the homes.

"This project is in many ways one of the most significant in this period," Mr. Ickes said. "It will serve as a means of measuring the possibilities of decentralizing industry in this country where the evils of over-urbanization have become all too evident in this depression.

No Longer Needed in Mines

"It will undertake to return to usefulness, security and to a high degree of self-sufficiency a group of men and their families who are victims of the period of planlessness and helter-skelter development and misuse of natural resources which I hope we are leaving behind. There are reliable estimates that 200,000 or more men who list their occupation as coal mining, now unemployed, are no longer needed in the industry.

"This group of 200 families is but a small portion, but application of the subsistence plan to this segment may provide the encouragement opening the way to a new life for many others. And coal mining is but one of the groups where the unemployment problem is more than temporary, where rational resettlement and better land use combine to form one answer.

Many Left Farming

"Many of the men who will be selected as settlers left farming to enter mining. Others are descendants of generations of miners. Now the mines where they once worked are closed or operations have been cut drastically. These men have latent skill, the potentialities of useful members of society and certainly the capacity of providing their own food instead of depending on relief of they are given a chance.

"To have them become farmers would be crowding a field already overcrowded. There is no room for them in cities. They are now problems of relief. This plan will make it possible for them to stay in the section in which they have lived and to attain the security of a home and subsistence and all that goes with that without putting them into commercial farming.

"Now many of them live in shacks. Their families have little enough of nourishment not to speak of a lack of adequate shelter, clothing and bare necessities. They are living on land incapable of producing gardens in many cases, along mountain sides near the mouths of mines.

To Be Homes in Real Sense

"The land for this project has been carefully selected to assure its productivity. The homes will be comfortable not without ostentation. They will be homes in the real sense for the settlers will own them. They will have a chance for self-rehabilitation. There suceess will be in the nation's interest."

The settlement site is known as the Arthur Dale farm and is situated near the postoffice of Reedsville, W. Va. It lies ln a mountain valley and was once the property of Col. John Fairfax and, according to legend, was surveyed by George Washington when he was a young man and Fairfax's close friend.

BANK RE-OPENS

The First National Bank of this place re-opened for business last Saturday following its closing on the bank holiday in response to the proclamation of the President; its subsequent resumption under a conservator later and now it is functioning with A. It was the intention to have the institution open on Saturday, October 7th, but some details remained to be worked out to the satisfaction of the Department in Washington and hence the re-opening was delayed until Saturday, the 14th.

"The Word of Our God Shall Stand Forever"

ZECHARIAH

The keynote of the divine symphony of this prophecy is struck in the 9th chapter and the 9th verse: "Rejoice exceedingly, O daughter of Zion; shout triumphantly, O daughter of Jerusalem: Behold thy King shall come to thee; righteous and saved is He; lowly, and riding upon an ass, even upon a colt, the foal of an ass."

Much profitless speculation has been indulged in by critics in an effort to determine whether Zechariah is a pre-exilie or post-exilic prophet. Whatever the facts may be as to the time of the prophecy the author's purpose is perfectly clar. He states unequivocally that the Lord hath been sore displeased with their fathers, but woes the people to Jehovah with this greaeious promise: "Turn ye unto me, saith the Lord of Hosts, and I will turn unto you." Jehovah's providence is guiding the world's history with special regard to the destiny of His own people. The Nations which dwell within the promised boundaries of Israel's land, must be destroyed.

Thus the way will be prepared for the advent of the Messianic King. Zion is bidden to welcome him as He comes, victorious after suffering, in the garb of peace. He destroys the implements of war, which are no longer needed, from the midst of the reunited nation, proclaims universal peace, and rules over the full extent of the Promised Land. Yet conflict must precede the final peace. Judah will be Jehovah's bow and Ephraim His arrow. Zion His sword and her sons His spear. He will Himself appear to lead them to victory. Triumphantly they vanquish their foes. Plenty and prosperity make their youths strong and their maidens beautiful.

We cannot be certain that even the prophet himself foresaw that the parallel lines of prophecy of the triumphant King and the suffering servant were destined ultimately to meet and be fulfilled in one Person, but it is clear that he was guided by the Spirit to give a new turn to the hope of Israel which might guide thoughtful minds in Israle to welcome their King, Him who came in lowliest guise as a servant.

Zion's King came to her. Deliberately Jesus presented Himself to the people as their King by riding into Jerusalem upon the Ass' colt. He would have the people know, by a sign that the most ignorant could not mistake, what He claimed to be. They knew Him and they welcomed Him, and yet within one short week they fulfilled the other prophecy of the rejected Shepherd.

Zechariah describes the fountain of purgation for Jerusalem, in the opening verse of the 13th Chapter of his book: "In that day there shall be a fountain opened to the house of David and to the inhabitants of Jerusalem, for sin and for uncleanness." In that day, also, righteousness will become universal. Every class of society will feel its power. For in that day saith the prophet, shall there be upon the bells of the horses, 'Holiness unto the Lord': and the pots in the Lord's house shall be like the bowls before the altar. Yea, every pot in Jerusalem and in Judah shall be holiness unto the Lord of hosts: and all they that sacrifice shall come and take of them, and seethe therein. From kitchen maid to maid of honor in the King's court righteousness shall spread, until the goodness of the Lord covers the earth as waters cover the sea.

MT. LAKE PARK

Out of the changes and general shaking up in the personnel of the public institutions of the State of West Virginia, we wonder if there is anything to the rumor that some of those dissatisfied with the re-arrangements are contemplating the starting of a sanitorium for the treatment of tuberculosis in Garrett county? It is only a rumor, but it has come to us from several outside sources.

Mr. and Mrs. E. O. Fouch have arrived home from Williamsburg, Ontario where they were under treatment for about two weeks by Dr. W. M. Loche, who is frequently referred to as "The Miracle Man of Canada." Thousands flock to the small village in the hope that the treatment of this now famous man may restore their health. They come from every state in the Union and many claim they have been largely benefitted. Mr. Fouch reports that approximately 800 were treated in a single day by the doctor while he was there. The fee is one dollar for each patient (if able to pay) for two treatments a day—morning and afternoon. The depression has evidently passed the good doctor by.

How to Select an Exhibit of Potatoes

One of the first things to do when planning to select and show a particular commodity is to secure all information available relative to the particular commodity. For instance, if you are going to select a peck of Rural Russett potatoes for show, first find out from some reliable source a good type. Second, find out a good weight and keep these in mind every time you select a potato for an exhibit.

The ideal time to select an exhibit is when you are digging. This makes it possible for you to see and pick from all potatoes in the field. Go thru the field and select only the potatoes that you think will measure up to requirements in type and weight. By doing this you will find you will have selected four or five bushel depending upon the plot of potatoes from which you are digging.

After you have made your first selection begin to handle them with care to prevent bruising or peeling. Store them in a cool dry place until you are ready to make your final selection of your exhibit.

When selecting your final exhibit you will begin to realize the difficulty in setting up show packages.

Select from your first selection a potato which you think is perfect in size and type, and select the rest of your exhibit like the first one. You will find this will be a very hard task and it probably can be done best by elimination process.

After your have made your final selection you want to use every precaution that your exhibit will be handled properly until it is shown. When packing your exhibit all dirt should be brushed from each tuber with a soft brush (do not use a rag), and the tuber wrapped separately with a pice of paper and packed in a box.

It is not advisable to use a bag of any kind as the potatoes will move against each other and will injure the skin.

This information is given out to help those who are planning to exhibit at the potato show next week-end.

Warned Not to Assign Wheat Payments

Officials of the Agricultural Adjustment Administration have warned farmers against signing agreements assigning their wheat adjustment payment checks to creditors or other parties in violation of their contracts.

The administration's warning was issued as a result of word that creditors of farmers in some states are seeking to get farmers to agree to such assignments.

To protect farmers against such practices, the wheat allotment contract in Article 16 specifically forbids the contracting farmer to assign his payments.

Acre Total Mounts in Wheat Reduction

Wheat acreage reduction for 1934 is approaching the 7 million acre mark as counties where the sign-up campaign was extended report their applications for contracts, the Agricultural Adjustment Administration has announced.

Maryland applications for participation in the wheat plan, according to latest reports, total 7,713, representing 234,535 acres. This would mean a reduction of 35,180 acres for Maryland wheat seedings, on the basis of the 15 per cent cut required under the contracts.

Early last week, with many reports yet to be received, the Adjustment Administration announced that 476,378 applications for contracts had been reported to Washington. This represented 43,999,024 acres signed up and mean a reduction in acreage for 1934 of 6,599,000 acres.

THE AMERICAN LEGION REAL AMERICANS

The American Legion, whose national convention was recently held in Chicago, placed itself as a 100 per cent American organization through its resolutions asking for stricter punishment of agitators seeking the overthrow of the American government, condemning the proposal to recognize Communist Russia, denouncing Hitlerism and any attempt to inaugurate a similar movement in this country, and opposing any relaxation of the immigration laws, war debt cancellation or reduction, and entrance into the World Court and League of Nations.

The Legion took its stand upon a rock-bottom foundation of pure Americanism and democratic government under the Constitution. This is what the nation expected of it and is has not been disappointed.

The action of the Legion is, somehow, one of the most comforting things that has happened in this disordered country in a long time. It calls for our return to the political faith of our fathers in democracy and democratic institutions, and utters a challenge to unpatriotic elements within the country. So long as such a spirit prevails the United States government is not likely to be seriously attacked or undermined by those futile individuals and organizations which, filled with false theories would bring destruction upon us by trying to induce us to adopt the Old World's new ways.

The patriotic people of America, whatever their class, whatever their political, social or religious beliefs, owe the American Legion a vote of thanks for its rugged stand in behalf of real Americanism.

Card of Thanks

We desire to thank those who were of such great comfort and assistance to us during the illness and following the death of our beloved infant daughter, Elizabeth Chance Browning. We also want to express our appreciation to those who gave floral tributes and offered the use of their automobiles for the funeral service.

Several Questions to be Presented—No Date Has Been Set For Meeting of Legislature

TO PROBE LEGAL SYSTEM

While his program to be submitted at the coming special session of the General Assembly has not been formulated, Governor Albert C. Ritchie is considering several questions he wants to give to the legislature. Among these are:

Legislation for liquor control in the state.

Complete study and possible revision of the legal system, especially for curbing lynching and for speeding up trials in the counties.

Opening of the Potomac River to oyster dredgers and hand scrapers.

Provisions for some counties to participate in the federal relief and recovery programs.

Liquor Control Primary Object

The extraordinary gathering of the legislators will be called primarily for the consideration of liquor control, in anticipation of the repeal of the Eighteenth Amendment.

The lynching of a negro at Princess Anne last Wednesday night has prompted the Governor to give thought to the present legal system in the counties.

"Certainly the legal system ought to be examined and re-examined in order to meet a situation of this kind," he asserted. "Such an examination would include the consideration of anti-lynching laws and the speeding up of trials."

There was indicated that the judiciary of the counties may be enlarged when it was pointed out there are three judges to a circuit of three counties with these members of the beneh having to act on a large number and various kinds of cases coming before them.

The opening of the Potomac River for oyster dredging has been agitated by watermen, especially on the Eastern Shore, but previous efforts in this direction have been opposed by the Southern Maryland Senators, J. Alan Coad, of St. Mary's county, and Walter J. Mitchell, of Charles county.

Date of Session Indefinite

The Governor pointed out the counties do not have the power to incur obligations for relief and to provide 70 percent of the fund advanced for the federal government on public works projects.

No date has been set by Governor Ritchie for the opening of the special session but it is expected to start early next month.

Former Oakland Man Injured in Air Line Explosion

Uriel L. Cheuvront, son of the late Jos. B. Cheuvront, formerly of Oakland, received minor burns in an explosion in Winchester, Ky., Sunday in which two men were killed and five injured, two of them seriously.

The elder Cheuvront, when he resided here, was superintendent of the local gas company.

Two One-Teacher Schools Have 100 Percent Attendance

Strawberry Hill and North Glade, with 100 percent attendance, led all one-teacher schools of the county for September, it has been announced by the county attendance officer.

Mountain Lake Park, with 99.3 percent, led the two-teacher schools; Kempton, with 98.3 percent, headed the graded schools, while Oakland led the high schools of the county with a percentage of 96.5.

Only six one-teacher schools were below the average of 93, while only one graded school and one high school were below the averages for the respective class.

The percentage of attendance for 1933 was three-tenths higher than for the same period last year. The average daily attendance of pupils was 4,706, with 155 teachers, or an average of 30 pupils for each teacher.

UNIONTOWN MAN KILLED IN WRECK NEAR BEAR CREEK

Car Skids on Wet Road and Turns Over, Pinning Driver Beneath Steering Wheel

WIFE SLIGHTLY INJURED

Skidding on a wet pavement and at a point on Route 37 where the road is slightly curved a few hundred feet from the foot of Bear Creek Hill, north of Accident, a Packard roadster turned over Sunday evening about 8:45 o'clock and in the mishap Dr. S. H. Romesburg, aged 35, well-known Uniontown dentist, was instantly killed, and his wife, a bride of six months, was slightly injured.

Dr. Romesburg was pinned beneath the steering wheel of the machine.

Mrs. Romesburg was taken on to Grantsville by passing motorists in which place surgical treatment was rendered the injured woman by Dr. N. R. Davis, of Grantsville. Dr. Davis also examined the body of Dr. Romesburg when it was found that he had suffered a crushed skull, evidently from a heavy blow from the supports of the car top. Sheriff Walter H. Haenftling and State's Attorney W. W. Dawson also investigated the accident.

According to a statement made by Mrs. Romesburg, the machine left the road on account of the wet condition of the pavement, but continued on the edge of the highway for about 75 feet, turned over and then righted itself, coming to a stop on the highway. Mrs. Romesburg was thrown free of the car before it had entirely turned over.

Dr. Romesburg was graduated from the University of Pittsburgh Dental School in 1924.

They reached Pittsburgh at ten o'clock and were taken into the city-county building where they were introduced by Mayor Herron, of Pittsburgh. An Effort Will be Made to Secure Employment For All of Those Who Are Listed at Office

CANNOT GUARANTEE WORK

The National Reemployment office was opened on Saturday, October 21, in the Browning building on Liberty street. Mr. H. Normon Milburn, field supervisor, was present at the opening and he remained in Oakland Saturday and Monday instructing the office staff in their duties.

Registration is for the benefit of both men and women of all ages and occupations.

No guarantee can be made of immediate employment, but as positions are available notification will be given registrants.

In making the above announcement, Colonel Baughman explained that inspection is compulsory by state law.

The inspection includes testing of brakes, lights, horn, steering mechanism, rear view mirror, muffler, windshield wiper, faulty, cracked or discolored glass, position of license tags, and operator's license. Autos which pass a satisfactory inspection are issued a yellow sticker which is pasted in the lower right corner of the windshield.

IMPROVED UNIFORM INTERNATIONAL

SUNDAY SCHOOL Lesson

Lesson for October 29

WORLD'S TEMPERANCE SUNDAY

LESSON TEXT—Romans 13:11-14; 14:7-9, 15-21.

GOLDEN TEXT—Love worketh no ill to his neighbor: therefore love is the fulfilling of the law. Romans 13:10.

PRIMARY TOPIC—Why Laws Are Made.

JUNIOR TOPIC—How to Be a Good Citizen.

INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOPIC—Why Obey the Law?

YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOPIC—The Christian Use of Personal Liberty.

I. Supreme Motive Governing the Life of a Christian.

The attitude of a Christian is that of enger expectancy. The time of salvation is drawing near. The salvation here mentioned is not that which we obtain in justification and sanctification, but is that which we get when our redemption is completed in glorification at the second coming of Christ. The reasons for this attitude of expectancy are that the night of Christ's absence is far spent and the day of his glorions appearing is at hand. The proper conduct in view of this is—

1. To put off the works of darkness (v. 12). These are reveling, drunkenness, chambering, wantonness, strife, and jealousy.

2. Put on the armor of light (v. 12). The figure here is of the Roman soldier who arose from sleep and cast aside his slumber robes and put on his gleaming armor.

3. Wnlk honestly as in the day (v. 13). The Christian, therefore, will so order his life thnt his conduct will conform to his high cnlling.

4. Put on the Lord Jesus Christ (v. 14). This means to enthrone Jesus Christ as the Lord of the life, to bring the life under his control. No provision is to be made for the flesh; no forethought is to be given to that which the carnal nature desires.

II. No Man Liveth unto Himself (Rom. 14:7-9).

The supreme purpose of Christ's death and resurrection was that he might be the Christian's Lord in life and in death. By virtue of Christ becoming one with the race, there cnn be no indifference of attitude toward him.

1. All must stnnd before the judgment seat of Christ. It is not to be a class judgment, but individual.

2. Account must be rendered unto God. Nothing can be concealed from him. Nothing can escape his judgment, for he is omniscient.

III. A Stumbling Block Should Not Be Placed in the Way of Another (Rom. 14:15-21).

A properly enlightened Christian may have perfect liberty concerning a matter so far as he himself is concerned, but this very liberty may become an occasion of stumbling to others. Two urgent reasons are set forth for the abridgment of our liberties in such cases—

1. We may destroy the weak brother for whom Christ died (v. 15). If it was worth while for Christ to die for a man, surely it is worth while that we should deny ourselves some privileges for his sake. Nor should this be deemed a hardship. Self-denial and cross-bearing attest the sincerity of the believer (Luke 9:23), who thus follows his Master.

2. We should not allow our good to be evil spoken of (v. 16). Liberty in Christ is a precious thing, which only love knows how to use. The proof that one is in the Kingdom of God and therefore ruled by the Holy Spirit is not by eating and drinking, but by living daily the love-life which is characterized as follows—

a. Righteousness (v. 17). This means honesty and integrity in all things.

b. Peace (v. 17). This means living at peace with each other. Peace among Christians is a powerful testimony for Christ that his Holy Spirit is in them.

c. Joy in the Holy Ghost (v. 17). Snved men will mnnifest this joy, for "He that in these things serveth Christ is ncceptable to God and approved of men" (v. 18).

3. We should follow after things that make for peace, and edify one another (v. 19). He that canseth a weak brother to stumble, through exercise of his liberty, thus destroys the work of God.

4. We should abstain from meats and wines which offend the weak brother (vv. 21, 22). This is made possible by the exercise of fnith in God.

IV. The Christian Should Please His Neighbor and Not Himself (Rom. 15:1-13).

This is not merely a privilege, but a solemn obligation, because,

Of Christ's example (vv. 1-3).

2. Of Scripture testimony (vv. 4-13).

A Pilgrimage

All faith recognizes that life is a pilgrimage whose course and duration cannot be foreseen, and therefore it takes these lives of ours out of onr own weak, trembling and uncertain control, and puts them in the hand of God.

What Are You Doing?

What are you doing to make life a little brighter and better for somebody? Mostly we are complaining because of the gloom we ourselves have done nothing to dissipate.

SCOOP'S COLUMN

Booth Mooney, whoever he is, has written in The American Press, a monthly magazine for newspaper publishers, under the caption "I was a Small-Town Columnist." He has my sympathy to some degree, and because of that I'm giving my space this week to his thoughts. Here 'tis:

"It was really all my own fault, the trouble I bungled into by attempting to conduct a column of gossip in a small-town weekly newspaper. The boss started it, true enough, but his idea was for me to write half a dozen or so items weekly on serious subjects such as he had seen in a column called 'Random Shots at Life' in a California daily.

"At first the "In the Open" column was a harmless comment on safe subjects—a weekly thousand words that probably no one read save the members of my own family. There was the rub. I craved to be, if not an Influence, at least Someone Often Discussed.

"Before I was finished, it was all of that. And more.

"The transition was gradual and took place without my knowing what was going on. Even now it is only when I compare clippings of the last few 'In the Open' columns ever to see the light of day with the first dozen or so published in the Messenger that I perceive what a lengthy stride I took.

"For that matter, the first column to lead me into unpleasant circumstances was one I meant seriously—even artistically. It was a description of a square dance held in the community where I had spent my childhood.

I Was Popular—at First

"There was some excuse for me. It was the first square dance I had ever seen, and it enthralled me mightily. The dancers accepted me as one of themselves when I told them my name for they had known my parents and some went so far as to say they remembered me. At any rate, they all joined in plying me with drinks and offers to get me the prettiest girl in the house for a dancing partner. The drinks I accepted, but the dancing I declined, preferring to be an onlooker.

"Already, thoughts for my next week's column were taking shape within my mind. I would describe the complete abandon of the dancers to the whim of the fiddles' wild whine. I would tell how they used every muscle of their bodies in the performance, how the dust arose from the floor and filled the room, how the caller of the dance stood with his curly hair falling into his face, the light of the occasion shining in his eyes, his voice rising and falling with the cadence of the music as he issued weird-sounding instructions to the dancers.

"Oh, this would be a peach of a column, one that would cause everybody in town to gasp over the writing ability of 'that next to the oldest Mooney boy.' Uh-huh!

"I wrote the column, it was published, and in a glow of pride I attended another square dance in the same community the following week.

"No one came running to meet me, uttering words of enthusiastic welcome, though light was shining from every window in the house. Useless to stand on formality with these folks, I meditated, as I stepped inside the door. Directly beside it stood a boy with whom I had gone to school. He just looked at me. 'Better take my advice,' he said, 'and get going while the going's good.'

"Queer fellow, I thought, and went into the next room. Everybody was standing in a little group, in the center of which was the man who had 'called' the previous dance. He was talking loudly and waving his arms. As I entered, he quieted suddenly. The group moved apar tand he came toward me.

"'Hello!' I yelped. 'H'y'ra?' jocosely, you know.

"'Hi,' growled the man. 'What's the idea you comin' out here again? Gonna write some more smart-alec pieces for the paper, huh? Not much you hain't.'

"'Why,' I stammered, 'why—?'

"'Don't say you didn't write it! We seen your name at the top of it an' we know dang well you did. Hell, we thought you was our friend on account yore folks ust to live here and you was raised here.'

"'I am your friend,' I replied as rapidly as I could. I didn't like this at all, and I felt that I was the friendliest fellow anyone could ever hope to know. 'What in the world was wrong with that article?'

Something Was Wrong

"'Wrong? You know what you said about me, don't you? I'll have you know, i-gosh, I'm just as good as anybody. Talkin' 'bout my hair bein' down in my face and my eyes bein' shiny; i'gosh, anybody'd think I was drunk as a blind, staggerin' steer.'

"I sought for words to put what I had felt into speech that he would clearly understand. 'I never meant it that way at all,' I protested. 'I never thought about meaning it that way. I enjoyed your calling and the dance—you bet I did—a lot. I certainly never meant to write anything you wouldn't like.'

"'Well,' he measured my not-at-all spacious form with sullen eyes, 'you're jest a kid-like an' I ain't gonna do nothin', but I ort to knock the hell plumb outa you.'

"Finally, I went away from there—all in one piece, as I had come. A lucky thing, too, for the friend who had first warned me later said that a dozen of the 'boys', after doing away with several pints of corn liquor, had come to the conclusion that they were going to teach 'that writin' fellow' a lesson.

"This, as I have said, was before I began conscientiously to try to irritate people. I was a good irritant—too good for my own good.

"For instance, I composed a column about the wearing of knickers. I swear I had no particular person in mind at the time, but one college youth decided the shoe fitted him and he called me out of the office to request an apology. I explained instead of apologizing, and it ended happily enough by his buying me a malted milk and accepting one of my cigarettes.

"This incident had an aftermath, though, that lacked a great deal of being pleasant. Present at the time this college boy was talking to me was a red-headed heavyweight who disliked me anyway, and he took advantage of the occasion to remark that I better hadn't ever say anything about him in my column.

"So, being young and smart, the next week I made a list of 'local superlatives,' included in which was the following: 'Most dangerous: The young carrot-top who ordered me never to say anything about him in this paper—and I won't, either.'

"The heavyweight had warned me in the presence of others and therefore had to make good, so he and I one day repaired to an adjacent hillside and had a merry set-to with our fists which ended when he picked up a five-pound rock and bounced it off my head.

National Guard Gets Sore

"The real death-blow to 'In the Open,' and the only column for which I ever publicly apologized, was one wherein I became mixed up with the army, as represented by the local unit of the National Guard.

"It began when the meeting-place of the soldiers burned one midnight and the boss and I attended the fire together. As we walked back home, the boss said musingly. 'Now there'll be hell to play if the Indians should take a notion to swoop down upon us. No soldiers to save the women and children. Tck, tck!'

"Hardly had that week's issue of the Messenger been placed in the postoffice before the fireworks began. First, came the captain of the local unit of the Guard, accompanied by his sergeant. They demanded an apology in the next week's issue, and I told them I had no intention of apologizing, for I could see nothing that called for such an action.

"I held steadfast until press night. After a day of hard work and the prospect of working fully half the night, I was in no mood to resist anything overly much. When the captain and the lieutenant walked into the office and asked me what I was going to do about it, I gave up.

"I claim the apology I wrote saved at least part of my face. This was it:

"'I extend my apologies to the United States Army of America, the local unit of the National Guard, the fire department, the Chamber of Commerce, the local postoffice, the Retail Merchants' Association and all individuals who feel that they have been insulted by the article appearing in this column last week. The whole thing was meant jokingly, and it is to be regretted that there were those who took it otherwise. Selah.'

"And that, I told myself fervently, was the last of 'In the Open.'

My Efforts Were Too Costly

"About eight months later, however, I felt the old familiar urge. I dug out the cut which had adorned the head of my column and I wrote a thousand words letting the readers in on the fact that I was getting old. In proof of this I cited my complete failure to enjoy myself at a tent show that was playing in town at the time. I told how I had formerly guffawed and wept at the parts the actors played and bemoaned the fact that I could no more do either.

"When, after the paper had come out, the manager of the show raged into the shop and cancelled eighteen dollars' worth of printing on the strength of the column, I decided this was all there was going to be. The 'In the Open' cut went into the hell-box.'"

There's a little bit of difference though, between Mooney and Mc. Although the National Guard incident might compare favorably with my "Amalgamated Society for the Prevention of Work," the real difference is that he's quitting and I'm not.

But then, I've never written up a square dance yet.

THURSDAY, OCTOBER 26, 1933

SOMETHING THE MATTER—

Last week the second annual Allegheny Tableland Fair was held in Gimbel's store in Pittsburgh. The privilege was granted for anyone in the Tableland area to make an exhibit of his products there and to stand there by his exhibits and take orders for future delivery, thereby creating an outlet for county produce.

Somerset county, Pa., and Preston county, West Virginia, had many exhibits and in addition had many people there who were taking orders by the hundreds for their products. Garrett county had only a few exhibits and practically no one there to solicit orders for maple sugar, buckwheat, potatoes and other produce for which the county is famous.

There seems to be something the matter. An opportunity like that for the farmers of the community does not occur every day. And yet, before the year is over, there will be some to bemoan the fact that there is no way of getting rid of their surplus produce.

By that time, probably there won't be.

THE RED CROSS—

This is the time when suffering must be relieved, hope made to take the place of despair and joy supplant sorrow. To this end governmental agencies have been doing much and there is promise of much further relief in the future. But still there is widespread unemployment. Sickness and distress have plunged thousands into the abyss of despondency, out of which only the personal touch of sympathy, in addition to material aid, can lift them.

There is another agency, National in its scope, that supplements Government activities, more intimate and personal in its contacts—The National Red Cross. To this society millions owe an everlasting debt of gratitude. Daily its workers are ministering unto the sick, supplying nurses, providing fuel for warmth, food for the children.

Soon its National Membership Campaign will be started in every hamlet in the land—every home will have an opportunity to join in its great work for humanity.

Mrs. Samuel J. Cole is county chairman in Garrett county and will have charge of the drive for membership. Her past and present experiences make her peculiarly qualified for this important position. In every part of the county, where hunger, suffering and want have stalked, she is welcomed. While she realizes that this year there is a peculiar financial handicap, yet she appeals to those in a position to contribute, to do so in the spirit of Him who said: "For I was an hungered, and ye gave me meat: I was thirsty, and ye gave me drink: I was a stranger and ye took me in: naked and ye clothed me: sick and ye visited me."—E. C. F.

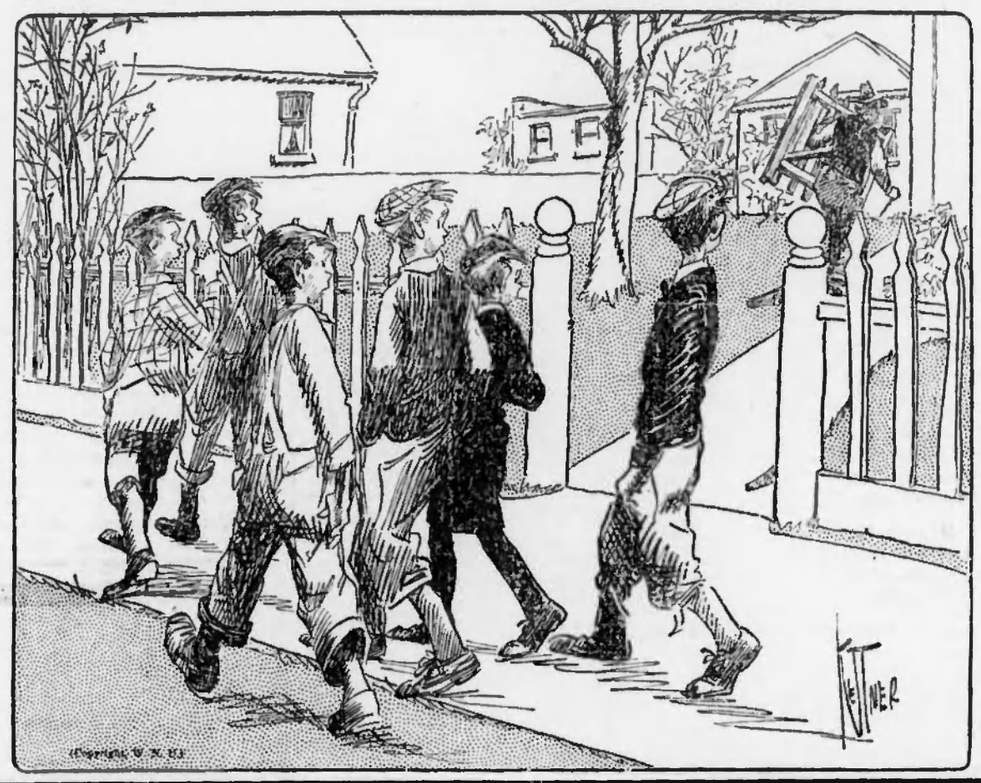
ONLY ONE SURE WAY

It is possible that we may yet discover that the surest way for us as a nation to be restored to something like our old time economic condition must be by the strictest adherence to the fundamental principle of spending less than we receive. In other words, there is no sure promise of national security as long as we are paying out millions more than are coming in.

Pay day comes some day, sure as fate. No one can fail to be concerned about this matter when he thinks it through. Bold strokes in favor of artificial rejuvenation of trade, agriculture, industries, business in all forms must have a cordinate reaction that will be harmoniously stimulating and tend quickly to make us a going concern in the matter of finances.

We cannot go on forever and ever running behind our budget. That we know. We must quit spending soon and go to paying off. As for general conditions, they may be improved by remedial measures—it is certainly to be hoped they will be—but the most solid improvement will come through the natural processes that work thru our economic organism just as such processes work thru all other organisms.

A Gate Indoors Is Worth Two Outdoors



AN OPENING FOR POLITICS

Perhaps no action which President Roosevelt has taken in many weeks will turn out to be of more political importance than the removal of William E. Humphrey as a Republican member of the Federal Trade Commission. Mr. Humphrey, it is understood, will contest his removal in the courts on the ground that the Commission is a semi-independent body and that the law creating it provides only for the removel of a member from office because of malfeasance or incompetency. That neither of these charges applies to Mr. Humphrey can be gathered by the fact that when the President first called on the Commissioner to resign, he added to his request that it was being made "without any reflection upon you at all personally or upon the service you have rendered," and added: "I congratulate you upon your long and active service."

But aside from the legal phase of the question, this change in the personnel of the Federal Trade Commission will have political importance in that it will give the Republican leaders a chance to state that the political "honeymoon" is over and that it was ended not by themselves but by the President himself. The Federal Trade Commission has always been regarded as a non-partisan institution and during three Republican administrations as many Democrats were carried on the payroll as Republicans. Commissioner Humphrey was reappointed by President Hoover late in his term and the appointment was confirmed by a Democratic Senate. The Republicans will now have the opportunity to charge that the Federal Trade Commission is to be converted to partisan uses. Already it is being alleged that polities has crept into the new securities division and that of fifty appointments made in that department all have been Democrats in spite of the traditional non-partisanship of the commission. This is why, the Republicans will say, it was necessary to get rid of Mr. Humphrey, an old-time Republican, so that the entire commission could be reorganized to function on a partisan basis.

Ever since the National Recovery drive was put into effect it has been emphaslzed in high places that it is a non-partisan attack on the depression. The same methods of putting it over have been used as were employed during the World War. Rumor in Washington now is to the effect that the administration of the NRA is to be finally lodged in the Federal Trade Commission. Republican leaders are doubtless getting ready to say that the Federal Trade Commission is to be reorganized on a Democratic basis to get it ready for Democratic control of the NRA and the important codes under it.

No matter how much or how little there is in these charges it is undoubtedly a fact that the administration in removing Mr. Humphrey has given the Republicans a good opening. They can now go into battle with a perfectly good excuse—that the administration donned the political armor first.

But aside from these political angles to the situation, there is a deeper and more serious side. Is is well summed up by the Independent Washington Star in the following words:

"The attack upon the independence of the Trade Commission by the Chief Executive in the removal of Mr. Humphrey is a serious matter. If the decisions of the Commission in important matters relating to the conduct of business, placed in the hands of the commission by law, are to be dictated from the White House, there may be trouble ahead. Such an attack will be regarded in much the same light as an attack on the judiciary by the Executive. Federal judges hold their appointments 'during good behavior' under the terms of the Constitution. It has been held they are only removable after impeachment and trial by the Senate. The President and all civil officers of the government also may be removed after impeachment proceedings, as a matter of fact. But the Congress, in passing its laws setting up various government agencies, has recognized the right of the President to remove civil officers—outside of the judiciary—for cause."

A REVERSION TO SAVAGERY

A most brutal lynching has placed a black shame on the records of the great Free State of Maryland. A colored man accused of a revolting crime was dragged from the jail of an Eastern Shore county, hanged and his body burned.

The nature of the crime of which the victim was accused does not condone the fact that an innocent man may have been tortured and burned. A mob does not weigh facts as to guilt or innocence. It is governed by a sort of temporary insanity. The wolf cry for blood goes up and men who regard themselves as civilized join the pack on the hunt for a fellow human being.

There is no excuse for the authorities of the State of Maryland. They had warning. They had removed the prisoner to Baltimore and then returned him to the jail at Princess Anne. That return sent a man to his death.

We read that 25 troopers of the Maryland State police were "overpowered", and wonder what 25 Pennsylvania State policemen would have done when the mob rushed the jail. The records of the Pennsylvania State constabulary are replete with concise reports of mobs halted in full cry by half a dozen troopers or even one trooper.

This lynching was not in the backwoods of Kentucky nor Louisiana. It occurred a few hours' ride from the nation's capital, and close to Baltimore, a highly cultured city. The officialdom of Maryland and its newspapers have on occasion gone far afield to express a righteous indignation over suppression of liberty in other states. The country will be waiting now to learn if investigation and punishment for this reversion to savagery match the sentiments Maryland has expressed over wrongs not committed within her borders.—Pittsburgh Post-Gazette.

WHAT, MORE BOOTLEGGING?

We are told by the opponents of the Eighteenth Amendment that the repeal of that much discussed constitutional provision would end the bootlegging of alcoholic liquors. Be that as it may, now that the Eighteenth Amendment seems to be on its last legs, so to speak, it is rumored that another bootlegging "menace" confronts the nation. Word comes from Washington through press dispatches that the Farm Administration is being provided with complaints about the illicit sale of flour. So life seems to be just one thing after another.

The wheat farmer, be is remembered, is to be paid by the government for cutting down his acreage. Payment is being made in advance. The government is to get back the money thus paid to the wheat farmers by collecting a processing tax from the miller who grinds the wheat into flour and he in turn passes it on to the consumer. Under the provisions of the law the farmer who grows the wheat is permitted to have enough ground for his own use, tax free.

According to the complaints which are said to be pouring into Washington, some farmers—no doubt the Brain Trust would call them misguided farmers—are getting more wheat ground into flour for their own use than they could possibly get away with personally. The suspicion in some quarters is that the surplus flour is being bootlegged to others. The farmer who thus sells it can of course beat the market price for flour and still make money.

But that isn't quite all the story. Reports from machinery centers are that the sale of small milling outfits has inreased by leaps and bounds since the wheat processing tax went into effect. These small milling outfits, it is said, can be operated by the farmer to grind his own wheat on his own farm either by motor or hand power. Of course, if he grinds his own wheat into flour it is barely possible that some of it will escape from the hands of the producer into the hands of the consumer without benefit to the middleman and his processing tax. Thus is another avenue of possible bootlegging opened up, and one which cannot be halted by repeal of the Eighteenth Amendment.

It was hoped that the processing tax would produce something like $135,000,000 a year, and that with this sum the government could reimburse the farmers for hiring them not to raise so much wheat. But the tax collections are starting slowly and unless they are speeded up it is possible that Uncle Sam may have to dig down in his jeans to make up the difference between the tax collection and the amount paid the farmer.

Of course it is a simple matter for a heal clever college professor, especially one clever enough to belong to the Brain Trust, to take his crayon in hand, and on the blackboard outline a perfectly sweet theoretical plan for reducing the wheat surplus. He can demonstrate to you how the government will pay the farmer to reduce his wheat acreage, then collect from the man who uses the flour a processing tax with which to make good the sum which the government has paid the farmer for reducing his wheat acreage; less wheat will be raised and the price will go up. It can be demonstrated mathematically. Unfortunately, however, mathmeatics fails to take into account the human element. The professor cannot figure mathematically how many farmers will take the money they collect from the government and fertilize their reduced acreage in oredr to raise a bigger and better crop next year. Neither can he compute the number of wheat growers and wheat handlers who may go into the flour bootlegging business in order to get around the processing tax. The only thing we can really be sure about is that in the end the consumer and the taxpayer (which includes the farmer) will foot the bill. Whether the farmer will be permanently benefitted remains to be seen. Certainly he is not feeling any too good about the situation on these beautiful autumn evenings. But neither is the fellow who buys the bread.

HOLD HEAD UP FOR GOOD POSTURE AND BREATHING

Entire Body Is Braced Up and Disease Resistance Increased

"There are a good many sound reasons for holding our heads up," Dr. R. H. Riley, Director of the State Department of Health, said recently, stressing the importance of good posture, an abundance of fresh air and the habit of deep breathing as aids in keeping fit, and in strengthening one's resistance to disease.

"Chief of them," he continued, "so far as health is concerned, is the effect that good posture has on deep breathing. That, in turn, sets a whole train of favorable activities in motion. We all know that we need an abundant supply of clean, fresh air to keep our breathing apparatus in order, and that the human machine can't function without it. But as the frosty days come, we are more or less inclined to turn up our coat collars, duck our heads downward and slump into the warmth of our heavy wraps.

"You can't breathe deeply when you sit or stand in a slouchy position. To get the complete benefit of your breath of fresh air, indoors or out-of-doors, you have to hold your head up. When you hold your head up and breathe deeply you will find that almost unconsciously the whole framework of the body is brought into a better position—with shoulders back, chest out and abdomen in. This gives greater room for expansion of the lungs, helps to make the action of the heart easier and the circulation better. The digestion is improved through the toning up of the muscles supporting the digestive system, the mechanism of the entire body is braced up and the power of resistance to disease is increased.

"There is another phase of it, that makes it worthwhile to practice deep breathing, and to remember to keep our heads up. You only have to try it for yourselves to see how good posture, heads up and the habit of deep breathing add to the self-respect, and help to tone up the courage of those who habitually practice them."

Hallowe'en Pies and Others

Pies are so good that we often forget how cheap they can be. Here is the itemized bill for one pie that will yield six generous slices: Less than 2 cents for flour, a fraction of 1 cent for lard, a little water, which costs nothing, and there, for 2½ cents, you have the makings of the pie crust. Five cents worth of pumpkin, 2 cents worth of butter a little over 3 cents for milk, 2 cents for an egg, something less than 2 cents for sugar and spice—add these figures to the cost of the crust and you have for 15 cents the makings of a pumpkin pie for supper on Hallowe'en.

Still cheaper and scarcely less appropriate or festive for Hallowe'en would be an apple pie—and if you put some very thin slices of cheese (or grated cheese) over the top just before you take this pie out of the oven, and leave it long enough to melt the cheese, you have an extraordinarily tempting pie to serve hot—and hot fruit pies are super-good.

At this time of year there is another niee pie—a green tomato pie—which should be very cheap in any part of the country where tomatoes are plentiful.

Apple Pie with Melted Cheese

Four to six tart apples (more if small; double if small green apples). Pastry. ¾ cup sugar, ¼ teaspoon cinnamon, ¼ teaspoon salt, 2 tablespoons butter.

Pare, core and slice the apples. Line a deep pie pan with pastry, spread a layer of apples over the bottom, sprinkle with a mixture of the sugar, einnamon and salt, dot with butter, and repeat until all are used. Add the top sheet of pastry. Put the pie in a moderately hot over (400 degrees F.) for 10 minutes, lower the temperature to more moderate heat (375 degrees F.) and bake the pie for 30 to 35 minutes, or until the apples are tender and the crust is golden brown.

After the pie is baked, lay thin slices of cheese or grated cheese over the top, and put in a very moderte oven (325 degrees F.) until the cheese is melted. Serve at once while the eheese is warm. Either a freshly baked or a cold pie may be prepared in this way.

Pumpkin or Squash Pie

1½ cups cooked pumpkin or squash, 1 cup milk, ½ cup sugar, 1 teaspoon cinnamon, ½ teaspoon allspice, ¼ teaspoon mace, ½ teaspoon salt, 1 egg, 2 teblespoons butter. Pastry.

Heat the pumpkin or squash, milk, sugar, spices, and salt in a double boiler, add the beaten eggs and butter, and mix well. Pour the hot filling into a deep baked pastry shell, and bake in a moderate oven (350 degrees F.) for about 30 minutes or until the filling sets.

Green Tomato Pie

6 medium-sized green tomatoes, 2 tablespoons water, ½ lemon sliced, 2 T. cornstarch, ⅛ teaspoon salt, ¼ teaspoon cinnamon, 2 tablespoons butter, 1 cup sugar. Pastry.

Wash the tomatoes, remove stem and blossom ends, and cut into thin slices. Cook the tomato, water, and lemon until the tomatoes are almost tender and drain. When the tomati liquid has cooled add the cornstarch, which has been mixed with the sugar and salt, and eook until thickened. Add the tomatoes, cinnamon, and butter, and mix thoroughly. Pour the hot mixture into a baked pastry shell, add the top sheet of dough and bake in a moderately hot oven (375 degrees to 400 degrees F.) for about 30 minutes, or until golden brown.

THE MARYLAND BIBLE SOCIETY'S CORNER

"The Word of Our God Shall Stand Forever"

MALACHI

Malachi spoke to a nation discouraged and weak, content after centuries of struggle against a fearful array of enemies, to settle down in a sort of lethargy to wait the coming of the Great One promised by the prophets. For centuries the Jews had been disobedient and idolatrous; now, largely cured of their idolatry, they were yet prone to neglect the service of Jehovah.

After the dedication of the Temple in D. C. 516, the curtain falls upon the fortunes of the little community in Judea. However, momentous events were happening in the Gentile world which shaped the course of the world's history for all time. The revolt of the Ionians from the supremacy of Persia, led eventually to the Persian invasion of Greece. The names of Marathon (B. C. 490), Thermopylae, Salamis (B. C. 480), Platea (B. C. 479), recall the memories of the heroie struggle which drove back the flood of Asiatic barbarism from the shores of Europe. Had Persia triumphed, a very different civilization would have encompassed not only Greece, but probably all of Europe.

To what extent the Jews were involved in these movements, particularly in the revolt of Egypt from Darius in B. C. 487, and what were their mingled feelings of hope or fear as they watched the shaking of the nations around them, can only be conjectured.

After the death of Xerxes (B. C. 465), the Jews, by order of Darius, began to rebuild the walls of Jerusalem and to plan for the restoration of temple worship. Ezra was dispatched with full authority from the king and his seven counsellors, to enquire concerning Judah and Jerusalem. All Israelites who wished to return were permitted to join them.

It is generally agreed that Malachi prophesied at some time during the period of which the history has thus been briefly sketched. It is in the main a reproof of the sins of his contemporaries. The priests have been negligent in the performance of their duties. They have permitted the offering of blemished animals for sacrifice. They have failed in their duties as teachers and guides of the people, as well as in conducting the sacrifices and services of the Temple. The Lord had made them, therefore, contemptible and base before the people.

Malachi foretold a day of judgment when the Lord, the Judge, will suddenly appear in His Temple, in the person of the Angel of the Covenant. He will separate between the righteous and the wicked, and purify the ungodly nation in the furnace of judgment.

In noble words Malachi deseribes the lofty ideals of Levi's calling: "My covenant was with him of life and peace; and I gave them to him for the fear wherewith he feared me, and was afraid before my name. The law of truth was in his mouth, and iniquity was not found in his lips; he walked with me in peace and equity, and did turn many away from iniquity. For the priest's lips should keep knowledge and they should seek the law at his mouth: for he is the messenger of the Lord of hosts." The priests are sharply reproved also for strange marriages, treachery and impiety.

Malachi promises rich blessings upon those who will bring the tithes into the storehouse. Said he: "Bring ye all the tithes into the storehouse, that there may be meat in my house, and prove me herewith, saith the Lord of hosts, if I will not open the windows of heaven and pour out upon you a blessing, that there shall not be room enough to receive it. And I will rebuke the devourer for your sakes, and he shall not destroy the fruits of your ground; neither shall your vines east her fruit before the time in the field, saith the Lord of Hosts."

Like the prophets in general, Malachi moves in his message from darkness and despair to light and hope. The promised Messenger, he declares, will turn the heart of the fathers to the children, and the heart of the children to the fathers in a glorious revelation of mutual sympathy and understanding as they together undertake the solution of the problem of living well and happily in our Father's world.

HOW TO SAVE MONEY ON YOUR MONTHLY GAS BILL

This is the third of a series of five articles describing methods of gas eeonomy in the home. Other articles explained the proper adjustment of flames and burners and gas economy in cooking.

Gas Boiler, Furnace, Water and Room Heater Efficiency

Owners of gas heating boilers or furnaces, water heaters and individual room heaters can add still more to the economy of their operation if they employ the following ideas for their care recommended by gas company service departments.

Correct house temperature (normally 72 degrees) should be maintained with the use of thermometers or thermastats. Too much heat wastes gas and is harmful to health.

There should not be too much draft. Gas requires less than coal, in the burning of which much heat goes up the chimney in obtaining sufficient draft to draw through the fuel bed.

All burners should be kept clean and heating surfaces free of soot. Burners should be adjusted to provide sufficient air for a steady blue flame. The pilot light of water heaters should be properly insulated to prevent the escape of heat. The service departments of gas companies offer assistanee in the selection of the most efficient insulation.

Much gas can be needlessly consumed through the wasteful use of hot water. Leaky hot water faucets also cause unnecessary consumption of gas and should be repaired immediately.

Water heaters should be drained two or three times during a year to help prevent the deposit of scale and sediment which tends to hinder efficient operation.

A thermostat control valve on the gas supply of water heaters will prove a decided gas saver and convenience.

Radiant types of room heaters should be adjusted to burn with a full blue flame. The less modern luminous type of heaters burn with a yellowish flame, but this should not blow at the tip or touch any part of the heater. Reflectors should be kept bright to radiate the heat into the room.

NATIONAL AFFAIRS

By FRANK P. LITSCHERT

Just now the political attention of the entire country is eentered on the three-cornered mayoralty race in New York City where Mayor O'Brien, the Tammany Democratic candidate, is facing an attack on two sides from Joseph V. McKee, independent Democrat, and F. H. LaGuardia, the fusion candidate. The outcome of this election promises to have a political effect far beyond the time limits of the year 1933. At first the race was between LaGuardia and O'Brien. LaGuardia, although not a regular Republican, had the support of the Republican organization, which is anxious to defeat Tammany and of a great many so-called liberal Democrats, who were equally anxious to unseat Tammany.

But a great many administration Democrats in New York were not satisfied with the set-up. They realized that Tammany had never been whole heartedly for the national administration, yet they could not see where any great political advantage could be gained for President Roosevelt's forces by the victory of an independent Republican. So, under the leadership of Postmaster General Farley, the political "big shot" of the administration, a new independent Democratic organization was formed and former Mayor McKee was induced to become a Democratic candidate for mayor in opposition to Tammany. Of course, the national administration is apparently keeping out of the fight, but nobody who is "in the know" in New York politics doubts for a minute that the Roosevelt administration ls anxiously interested in the success of Mr. McKee. And this knowledge is having some effect. Before McKee entered the race it looked as though Mr. LaGuardia might be the winner. Now, however, regular Democratic leaders in New York, with national and local patronage in view, are deserting the Tammany bandwagon and going over to McKee. At this writing, when the election is still four weeks away, it appears that McKee has the advantage. In addition to the adminlstration support he ls getting encouragement from a number of conservative Republicans who do not like LaGuardia anyhow, and prefer to support a conservative Democrat like McKee in their efforts to get rid of Tammany.

The political effects of this race will be far-reaching. The administration, under the political leadership of Mr. Farley, is undoubtedly looking ahead to 1936. It is realized that Tammany was never very enthusiastic about the nomination of President Roosevelt in 1932 and the lntention ls to give hlm complete control of the state in 1936. The first step is of course to elect a Roosevelt man mayor of New York. But many political observers believe that Mr. Farley's action is not entirely unselfish so far as his personal fortunes are concerned. According to Oliver McKee, Jr., writing in the Boston Transcript: "There is no limit to the political ambitions of Mr. Farley. He wants to be the big boss of Democracy, the country over, and to permit no independent chieftains to control Democratic organizations of their own." Many observers think that Mr. Farley wants to be the Democratic nominee for governor of New York in 1936 and that he even has visions of becoming the successor of Mr. Roosevelt in the White House in 1940. All this, of course, is predicated on continuing Democratic suceess, which is something that no man at this time can foretell.

In the meantime suppose the unexpected happens and O'Brien wins. The administration forces in New York will certainly be in a tough spot if Tammany controls the city again. In any event, Tammany will not feel any too good about the results if its candidate is defeated, although it will then of course have its claws clipped and its power curtailed. It is also believed now, that President Roosevelt's progressive friends are feeling none too good over late developments. They had visions of LaGuardia becoming the first "progressive" mayor of America's largest city. But the entrance of McKee into the race under the sponsorship of the President's political manager, Mr. Farley, has dimmed their hopes. They supported Mr. Roosevelt loyally in 1932 and will not take with any too good grace the harpooning of Mr. LaGuardia in 1933.

Justice

We fully realize that this is no part of a local column, but where an injustice has been done to a group of good citizens by irresponsible and perhaps malicious, gossips, the wrong should be righted.

For many weeks a rumor has been in general circulation that the members of the committee in charge of the R. F. C. activities are being paid salaries out of the R. F. C. funds. Such is not the case. Not believing the story, the writer made inquiry of the treasurer of the committee, as well as of the payroll clerk, and found, as he expected, that it was false and without any foundation in truth. In fact, the rumor was based on a short and ugly word of three letters.

This kind of gossip tends to great harm and impedes the successful consummation of any plan of economic recovery. But it has ever been so—that when an individual, or group of individuals, unselfishly devotes his or their time to the directing of a great public movement for the public good, they are maligned and criticised by those who ought, but do not, follow their leadership.

Gypping The Unfortunates

We believe it was Mary Roberts Rinehart, who, in describing one of the characters in one of her books, said: "He is so far down in the seale of humanity that it would require a special dispensation of Providence to raise him to the level of total depravity." A severe castigation—but none too severe for the person—merchant or professional man—who takes advantage of the unfortunate who ekes out a precarious living during these times by working on public projects or private enterprises, by overcharging, underweights, or otherwise gypping him in his extermity. We are not hinting that these practices obtain here, but the press has noted a number of instances throughout the country, and wherever found the party offended has suffered public condemnation and loss of patronage.

Entertaines

Mrs. E. May Winchell gave one of her delightful parties last Saturday evening, celebrating Hallowe'en, at her home, "Journey's End," on Cozy Row. "Journey's End", as recently remodeled, strongly reminds one of a quaint English Wayside cottage and is pecularily fitted for parties calling for distinctive decorations, which on this occasion were autumn leaves. The guests were Mr. and Mrs. E. E. Friend, Mr. and Mrs. J. E. Chance and Mrs. Ella M. Echard, of the Park; Mr. and Mrs. James Little and daughter Virginia, and Mrs. Ella Little, Homewood, Pa.; Mr. and Mrs. H. C. Donaldson, Pittsburgh; Mr. and Mrs. A. B. Fox, Mr. and Mrs. James Biggs, Mr. and Mrs. B. W. Bishop, Mr. Lester Carver, Misses Nellie and Marie Bishop, Wilmerding, Pa.; Mr. and Mrs. C. H. Guth, McKeesport; Pa.; Mr. Louis Markferding and son Louis, East McKeesport; Mr. and Mrs. R. D. Brodie, Wilkinsburg, Pa.; Mrs. Louise Harcourt, East McKeesport; and Mrs. J. B. Hull, Berkley, Calif.

The out-of-town Pennsylvania guests were week-end guests of Mrs. Ella M. Echard. The guests from our neighbor state were loud in their appreciation of the mountain scenery and the beautiful effect of the autumn coloring of our hills and glades.

INOCULATION IMPORTANT IN PREVENTING DISEASES

Immunity From Smallpox and Diphtheria is Gained This Way

Of the various inoculations which have been devised for prevention of diseases, two stand out as being of real importance for every child, according to Dr. Eugene C. Peck, county health officer.

Vaccination against smallpox has been known since 1797, and its power to eliminate the disease from the general population which formerly was visited by repeated epidemics of this scourge, has been amply proved. The State law in Maryland requires that a parent shall have every child vaccinated before it is a year old, and that guardians and others having children in their care must see that those children are vaccinated before November of each year. School teachers are required by law to exelude all unvaccinated children from the schools. This law keeps our State free of epidemics of this disease, so that few people realize its benefits.

Vaccination which is repeated in five years or less gives only a very slight reaction as compared with the primary vaccination. This modified reaction shows that some immunity still remains in the body from the first vaccivaccination and this immunity is restored again to its full power by the repeated vaccination.

The other inoculation which is advisable for all children is the preventive inoculation against diphtheria. The most modern way of doing this is the use of a preparation of diphtheria toxoid which has been on the market for less than three years. The use of a single dose of this toxold makes most of the children so treated immune to diphtheria. The immunity probably lasts for several years.

We are able to test the immunity in children without waiting for exposure of the child to diphtheria in an epidemic, because for 20 years doctors have had the use of the Schiek test, by which a very small injection into the superficial layers of the skin shows whether or not the child is liable to take the disease if exposed.

Most of th deaths from diphtheira in this country are in children below the school age. It is in infants the disease is hardest for a doctor to detect, and here that it takes its most severe form. Every baby should be given the benefit of preventive inoculation against diphtheria at about six months of age, so the immunity, which takes two months to develop, will be present during the age from one to five, in which most deaths from diphtheria occur.

At present the Health Department is giving inoculations to school children when requested by the parents, because facilities for such inoculations have been so scanty. The little children have not had this privilege offered them. In future years such inoculation of school children will be unnecessary, because any child reaching school age without proper inoculation will be considered evidence of neglect on the part of the parents.

The State Health Department furnishes free for physicians use the vaccine and toxoid necessary to protect children against these two diseases, and it is hoped that parents will have their private physicians take care of this work in caring for the health of their children. Clinics for poor children will be necessary for years to come.

UPPER POTOMAC REGIONS PLAN FOR FLOOD CONTROL

Board Asks For Engineer To Survey For Project

Plans for the flood control of the Upper Potomac River are now being formulated by municipalities and industries of the region with the ultimate goal of making application for financial aid to the State Advisory Board, Federal Emergency Public Works Administration in Baltimore.

The Upper Potomac River Board, representing the industries and communities involved, is negotiating for a consulting engineer to make surveys and draft the specifications for the project it was announced last Saturday.

Flow Drops Sharply

Abel Wolman, State Engineer, Federal Emergency Public Works Administration, Baltimore, said Saturday the flow of the river dropped sharply between the months of June and October. A number of large industries in that section are using millions of gallons of the water daily, while the communities depend on the river for sewage treatment and other uses, Mr. Wolman said.

The Upper Potomac River Board plans to survey the river's tributaries with a view to establishing reservoirs to impound the surplus water during the months of high flow. It is estimated the project will cost between $1,000,000 and $1,500,000.

Stony River Project

This includes an impounding dam in the Stony River region, a tributary of the upper Potomac river in Grant county, W. Va. Surveys and estimates have been made by the United States Army Engineers of proposed dams that would impound surplus water.

No Pay No Play, Says Coach Getty to Soccer Team

There is a rule in Oakland High school that those who participate in athletics must have their athletic dues of 25 cents paid up.

There were those that were playing who were not square on the books, so on Tuesday before the soccer game with Grantsville, Coach Frank Getty asked who had not paid their dues. Seven hadn't.

Coach Getty then asked how many of the seven were ready to pay up. Seven weren't.

So the first half was played with four regulars and seven substitutes, the latter ones younger in experience and somewhat smaller in stature. But they held the Grantsville team to a score of 0-0.

At the beginning of the second half Coach Getty didn't even have to ask more questions. When he figured up how many of the regular team had paid he found that eleven had done just that. Quarters do make their appearance at times from empty pockets.

And so the regulars played the second half, defeating Grantsville 4 to 0. And now everybody is satisfied, including Grantsville, Coach Getty and the regulars, for their books are not now in the red.

Oyster Roast to be Held at Log Church

Friday evening, October 27, at 5 p. m., the ladies of the new Episcopal church, known as "The Log Church", located between Altamont and Wilson on the Kitzmiller road, will hold an oyster roast for the benefit of the church. The public is invited to attend. The roast will be held at the church which is now completed.

Last August the cornerstone was laid for the church and since that time the people of the neighborhood have generously labored on the enterprise. The property has been deeded to the Diocese of Maryland. It is expected that consecration of the new church will take place next summer when it will be possible for all interested to gather for the ceremony. This will not prevent services being held in the edifice this fall and winter, however.

Accidentally Strikes Pedestrian

Grover C. O'Brien, Kitzmiller, was accidentally struck by an automobile being driven by Floyd C. Stahl on Monday evening in front of the M. E. church on Oak Street.

The car was not traveling at a high rate of speed but Mr. Stahl was unable to see the man on account of the lights on an approaching car making visibility almost impossible. The man was not injured and returned to his home later the same evening.

"ONLY A BABY!"

To the Editor of The Republican.

I present you with these thoughts, which were awakened upon reading in last week's Republican of the death of Baby Elizabeth Chance, infant daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Cheston H. Browning:

"Who's dead?" cried someone, "who's dead—who's dead?"
"Only a baby!" some other one said;
"Only a baby!" the careless cried;
"Only a baby" today has died.
"Only a baby"—a wee, snow sprite;
"Only a baby"—is dead tonight—
But a mother weeps—her heart is bled
In a river of tears o'er her innocent dead.
Her hot tears rain on the waxen brow
That is dusted o'er with frost flakes now;
Her soul wails from its awful pain
For one touch of those dear little hands again.
"Lord, take me too to that promised bliss!"
She cries through her burning farwell kiss—
The merciless grief on her soul is fed;
The very heart of heart lies dead.
The life of her home was that baby's face hid
With tiny hands clasped 'neath it's easket lid.
Oh! bear off the jewel and hide it below
Warm summer's pink clovers and winter's cold snow.
Is there anyone near with a full, tender heart?
Pour soft words out, with soothing art
Oh! bury her sorrow, beneath sweet showers
Of healing acents—like balm from rare flowers.
Oh! sacred the shades where her baby is placed,
And sacred the grass 'round that tiny grave laced,
Yet—"only a baby!" the thoughtless cried—
"Only a baby— today has died!"

—K. R. R.

615.8 BUSHELS POTATOES PRODUCED UPON ONE ACRE

Charles Kelly and Son Allen Kelly Have Mammoth Yield

A measured acre of ground of Charles Kelly and son, Allen Kelly, near Red House, has yielded 615.8 bushels of potatoes, the largest amount ever produced in Garrett county, according to John H. Carter, county agent. Mr. Carter laid out the acre and weighed the potatoes. Allen Kelly is a 4-H club member.

The largest acreage prior to this was 440 bushels, raised by Boyd Hardesty, of near Hutton.

In explaining how he prepared the soil, the club member told Mr. Carter the following: Sweet clover was cut after the seed ripened in early August and left on the ground until early October, then plowed under to a depth of 8 or 9 inches. An application of barnyard manure was applied during the winter and the ground plowed again the 15th of May. Land was then prepared for planting, being careful to prepare a good seed bed. Twenty-two bushels of certified home grown seed were planted on June 4, 4 inches deep, 6 to 7 inches between seed pieces and 32 inches between rows. Eight hundred pounds of 2-14-10 home mixed fertilizer was applied in the rows. The plants were sprayed 7 times with a pressure of 350 to 400 pounds.

REPRESENTATIVE OF LAND BANK NOW LOCATED HERE

Paul A. Ulman Is Correspondent for Federal Land Bank and Land Bank Commissioner

COMES TO HELP FARMERS

For the purpose of helping the farmers of the country and to see that their needs and interests are protected, Paul A. Ulman, correspondent for the Land Bank Commissioner and the Federal Land Bank of Baltimore, has located in Oakland for an indefinite time.

Farmers who have mortgages and are being threatened with foreclosure, will have a chance, through Mr. Ulman, to protect their property.

The Federal Land Bank and the Land Bank commissioner are making loans up to $50,000 on farms already owned and also on farms to be purchased by farmers. The Federal Government has placed at their disposal three hundred millions of dollars to distribute throughout the entire United States to farmers who need assistance to save their homes and property.

The plan provides, according to Mr. Ulman, for interest to be paid semi-annually at the rate of 5 percent yearly, and no payments are to be made on the principal for the first three years. The maturity of the mortgages is 13 years, with the option to extend it for as much as 43 years. The plan is devised to make it as easy as is humanly possible so that farmers will have every opportunity to pay the mortgage debt without great effort on their part.

A farmer who has a mortgage and who is being threatened with foreclosure, may apply for a loan and under these circumstances the Federal Land Bank will pay off the debt and have the mortgage released. It will also help the farmer who has obligations and debts that are pressing him, or the farmer who needs money for paying taxes or as working capital for making improvements, or any other legitimate purpose.

"It is important to remember, "Mr. Ulman stated, "that the government through the Federal Land Bank and the Land Bank Commissioner pays off the mortgages or other debts in cash and not in bonds."

Any farmer in the county in distress and wanting any information or assistance is asked not to hesitate to call on Mr. Ulman. He will be in the office of the clerk of the circuit court from 9 until 5 each day, and from 5 until 9 o'clock in the evenings at the William-James hotel.

SCOOP'S COLUMN

By Scoop Himself

"You had too darned much space last week," the boss editor hollered at me at 11 o'clock this morning, "so cut this week's blow down to the minimum."

"What's the minimum?" I chirps back.

"About as much as you've got right now," he replied, which was next to nothing, because I hadn't even started the column yet.

I had the nicest letter from Homer Turney, Columbus, Indiana, which will have to go over until next week. I also was going to say something about the beautiful signs on the Court House lawn, about Neil Fraley looking longingly out of his office window and I wondered if he were sick until I saw him looking at his new automobile.

The Hallowe'en parade and the dances were coming in for their share, but maybe it's just as well.

And, oh yes, there was something about Shorty Gortner going snipe hunting. Floyd Stahl said Shorty was the best snipe hunter in the country, having gone out the other night and held the bag, and what I mean, he must have held it. Anybody wanting snipes can call Shorty's. At least, that's what everybody is saying.

Really, the boss didn't mean what he said. We're just full up with county orders this week. And that's a real excuse, which lets me out of a lot of brain worry.

The evening was opened with the usual Hallowe'en maneuvers, guessing who's who. The masqueraders were then ushered into a room dimly lighted with jack lanterns. A stunt game was the opening number and was followed by ghost stories told by various members of the party. Songs and recitations followed and in a contest Cecil Edwards was awarded a prize after pinning the tail on a cat. Clyde Swauger was given second place. Eating apples from swaying strings proved to be harder than it appeared. A prize was awarded Rheba Wilburn after a prolonged contest with Verl Edwards to decide the most successful in this feat. MUNICIPAL BUILDING MAY BE BUILT BY FEDERAL AID

Idea Is Only A Dream Thus Far, But Committee Is Appointed To Investigate Possibility

COUNCIL HOLDS MEETING

What might ultimately result in the erection of a community or municipal building for Oakland, was inaugurated at the regular monthly meeting of the Mayor and City Council on Monday evening when a committee was appointed to investigate and advise the possibility of securing a government loan for that purpose.

The loan, should it be made, would come through the Public Works Fund of the Federal Government. When a loan from this fund is approved, the goverment will give 30 percent of the amount, and then lend the other 70 percent at long term with 4 percent interest.

Before anything definite can be known, it will be necessary to have an architect draw plans, and an approximate estimate made as to the cost. When this information is obtained, an application for the loan may be sent in.

"The idea is still in a very remote stage," Grover C. Stemple, mayor, said. "We would also like to construct an auxiliary reservoir at the same time and plans of this will also have to be submitted."

Should the investigation of the council committee show that conditions would be favorable for the erection of these two projects, application would be made as soon as possible.

The community building as proposed would contain two stories, with a swimming pool and gymnasium on the ground floor, and a number of rooms on the second floor for elvic organizations. The gymnasium would be so arranged that community gatherings could be held there or plays presented.

A proposed site for this building is a vacant lot on Third street, at the north edge of town.

Other Business

The remainder of the Council meeting was taken up with passing monthly bills and hearing a committee of water users who live outside the corporation. The committee wished to have the same water rate cover the people out of the corporation, and those within it. The reduction was not granted as Mayor Stemple stated those outside of the corporation paid no city tax.

Injured in Automobile Accident Near Cambridge C. C. C. Camp

Edgar Moreland and Hugh Paugh, this county, were injured last week in an automobile accident near Cambridge as a result of a collision of an automobile with a parked truck.

Moreland and Paugh are members of the C. C. C. Camp at Church Creek, and were riding with Mr. and Mrs. Perry Travis and two children, of Fishing Creek. Blinded by the lights of an approaching automobile the machine crashed into the truck.

Paugh sustained several fractured ribs and possible internal injuries. Moreland's leg was broken. Mrs. Travis sustained a broken wrist and shoulder and one of the children was cut severely enough to be kept at a hospital.

Moreland is the son of Mrs. Nora Barnhouse, Vindex, and Paugh is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Paugh, Deer Park.

Seed Improvement Shown

A chart prepared by County Agent John H. Carter, exhibited in the recent potato show, showed the advancement in production of certified seed potatoes in Garrett county within the past few years.

In 1928 there were two growers eligible for certification, a total of 14.45 acres, which produced 1,885 bushels. In 1933 there were 61 potato growers eligible for certification, 152.5 acres, which yielded 44,231 bushels of certified seed.

MONTHLY HEALTH REPORT MADE BY DR. E. C. PECK

Scarlet Fever Continues In Light Form—44 Cases Develop

A continuation of scarlet fever in the county in a mild form was shown during the month of October, according to a report of Dr. E. C. Peck, public health officer. Forty-four cases of the disease had developed during this period.

The monthly report of the officer covered all kinds of diseases found in the county, the health afternoons being conducted in the schools, the clinics being held for the inoculation, vaccination and toxoid treatments, and the inspeciton of school children in various instances.

Diseases recorded were as follows: Typhoid, 6; scarlet fever, 44; diphtheria, 9; infantile paralysis, 1; chicken pox, 5; impetigo, 31; syphilis, 17; gonorrhea, 12. At present there are 127 cases on record of the two latter diseases.

Fifty-one persons were vaccinated against small pox; 144 were given the toxoid treatment and 145 were inoculated against typhoid fever.

September had 33 births and 8 deaths recorded, making the total for the year thus far 358 births and 147 deaths.

The cases of diphtheria reported were mostly confined to the community of Kitzmiller.

First Real Snow of Season Falls Wednesday—Highways Slippery

The first real winter of the present season reached Garrett county early Wednesday morning when about an inch of snow fell with the thermometer standing around the freezing point.

It grew steadily colder yesterday and last evening the thermometer was at 22. With the temperature rising this morning, more snow began to fall, and has continued almost uninterruptedly since then.

Highways have been icy, making fast travel dangerous. Several automobiles have turned completely around and a few cars have collided as a result of the ice.

The Meyer Transit bus skidded on the ice and turned over yesterday, but no one was injured. The cars of Leighton Brothers and Miller's Meat Market ran together at the corner of Second and Oak streets yesterday, and other minor skids have been reported. Another car was reported wrecked near Red House.

The drive for membership will conclude on November 22, when a class of candidates will be given the first rank at Cumberland.

Luther's Birth Celebrated

In spite of the dense fog and rain last Sunday afternoon, St. Mark's Lutheran church was well filled by people representing congregations in and around Oakland to celebrate the 450th anniversary of the birth of Martin Luther. Rev. C. A. Shilke, pastor, was assisted in the service by Rev. A. K. Jones, of Red House; Rev. W. L. Dise, of Aurora, and Rev. A. B. Harper, of Accident.

Mrs. Ivalee Newell Hobden rendered a violin solo, accompanied by Mrs. Neil C. Fraley at the pipe organ. Dr. H. D. Hoover, of Gettysburg Theologicval Seminary, spoke on "The Spirit of Today."

It is now planned to hold a union Reformation service of this nature annually in Oakland.

BEAR HILL MAN IS HELD IN DEFAULT OF BOND

Wilt Pleads Not Guilty to Charges of Shooting at Officer

Alvie Wilt, of Bear Hill, near Bittinger, who was arrested last week by county officers and U. S. Deputy Marshall Howard P. Loughrie after being halted by being peppered with shot, was arraigned before United States Commissioner Thomas J. Anderson at Cumberland on Saturday on charges of shooting at federal officers, resisting arrest and violating liquor laws. He was lodged in the Cumberland jail in default of $2,500 bond, and was being detained for the Federal court term. Wilt pleaded not guilty.

Wilt, it was testified, shot at Federal Investigator William R. Harvey and several of the county officers on November 16 of last year while a raid was being conducted near Wilt's home. On that occasion Delbert Wilt, brother of Alvie, was arrested and was later sentenced to serve nine months in the House of Correction for violating liquor laws.

Avoided Arrest for a Year

In the raid, a 60-gallon still was seized with mash and whiskey. Since that time, authorities stated, numerous attempts have been made to apprehend Wilt, who avoided capture and ignored requests of officers to give himself up.

Last Wednesday the deputy marshall, Deputy Sheriff Clarence Spear of this county and other officers went after Wilt. When they attempted to arrest him he ran and was wounded by Deputy Marshall Loughrie. His injuries are not serious and he is recovering.

Will Be No Special Observance of Armistice Day Here

That there will be no active celebration in observance of Armistice Day in Oakland this year was announced by J. M. Gonder, post commander of the local American Legion organization.

November 11 falling on Saturday, it was deemed advisable to hold no parade or exercises. Many schools of the county will observe the day with a special assembly program on Friday afternoon.

The American Legion Auxiliary is planning to present a large flag to each of the three schools in Oakland, at special programs on Friday afternoon.

Deer Killed On Crellin Road

Dennis Colaw, of Crellin, is probably the first man in the county to kill a deer this year. The young man, returning to his home at Crellin in his automobile Saturday evening accidently struck the animal—a young doe—when it jumped directly in the path of the car while descending the hill west of Breedlove's Inn. The collision with the deer partially wrecked the car and it was set on fire, but the flames were extinguished before much damage had been done. The accidental killing of the deer was reported to the game warden.

WORKERS APPOINTED FOR ANNUAL RED CROSS DRIVE

Dr. E. C. Peck Is First One of Seventeen Who Have Already Enrolled For This Year

COUNTY'S QUOTA IS 600

District and community workers for the annual Red Cross drive for membership, which begins on Saturday, November 11, have been named by Mrs. Samuel Cole, county chairman.

They include Mrs. F. E. Rathbun, Mrs. Grover C. Stemple, Mrs. Paul B. Naylor, Mrs. C. A. Shilke, Mrs. Charles A. Tower, all of Oakland; Mrs. Lee McIntire, Shallmar; Mrs. Tyler Arnold, Vindex; Miss Dessie Rodeheaver, Mountain Lake Park; Miss Helen Gibson, Loch Lynn; Mr. Sowers, Kempton; Mrs. B. O. Aiken, Accident; Mrs. E. J. Brydon, Bloomington; Miss Margaret Manley, Swanton; Mrs. Lester Yutzy, Crellin, and Mrs. Daniel Hinebaugh, Deer Park.

Workers for Friendsville, Grantsville, Kitzmiller and other communities will be named before Saturday, Mrs. Cole stated.

The quota for the county this year is 600, the same as last year. Half of the amount raised will remain in the county for emergency needs, it was stated. Heretofore Red Cross funds have been expended for purchase of shoes and clothing for school children, eye glasses for children and food for needy cases.

"Red Cross funds are necesstry in addition to R. F. C. funds and all other Federal aid money, as the money the received for membership in this national organization is used for emergencies and those in dire need," Mrs. Cole emphasized.

Already seventeen have enrolled, Dr. Eugene C. Peck being the first one to join and contribute his dollar. The other sixteen are John H. Carter, J. J. Ashby, Jr., Mrs. Evelyn Glotfelty, E. E. Friend, Miss Mary Speicher, Warren Rathbun, Gorman Thayer, C. R. Welling, Mrs. Hazele Garlete Hardesty, Asa J. Fresh, Miss Katherine Foley, Samuel Wright, John Capel, J. Timothy Moon, Miss M. Elizabeth Workman, Mrs. Lena Wise-Walker.

Large Barn Is Completed

On the farm of A. R. Martin, a mile or two south of Oakland on Route 37, a new barn has been recently completed by the owner to take the place of one consumed by fire during the past summer when it was struck by lightning and in the destruction of which Mr. Martin suffered a heavy loss.

The new structure is modern in every respect and commodious for a large number of cattle, feed and for other storage purposes.

The local fire department recently received a check for $25 from Mr. Martin with a letter expressing his appreciation for the service its members rendered at the time the original barn burned.

BAYARD-FRIENDSVILLE CONTROVERSY OVER BASEBALL REACHES PEAK WHEN TROPHY IS CARRIED AWAY

Five Alleged Members of Team Come to Oakland Saturday and Loving Cup Disappears

WAS IN BROWN'S STORE

Although never officially announced who was the winner of the Mt. State Baseball league, Bayard or Friendsville, it is said Bayard now has possession of the 24-inch silver loving cup, in token of the championship. It was not, however, presented to them.

It is alleged that five members of the Bayard, W. Va., team walked into Brown's store, Oakland, on Saturday night, and while the owner's attention was diverted to customers in the store, they walked off with the cup, which was on display there—and Friendsville is demanding its return—but to no avail.

In a college town, the "stealing" of the loving cup might be termed a college "prank" but here it is assuming more serious proportions with Friendsville threatening action from Garrett county authorities if the cup is not brought back. Bayard, on the other hand, is in West Virginia, and laughs up its sleeve at the threats.

The story goes back to the last and deciding game of the championship series between Friendsville and Bayard. The score was tied 3 to 3 with a Bayard runner, "Beanie". Frost, on third base. Under a decision of the umpire, a balk was called and the Bayard runner was allowed to go home with the winning run and the championship of the scries.

Friendsville protested the decision and requested a ruling from A. G. Spalding Company, which concern donated the loving cup, valued at $25.00. Spalding ruled a no-balk, so Friendsville claimed a tie in the championship and demanded another game.

But in place of the game alleged Bayard players arrived in Oakland Saturday night, evidently of the opinion that baseball sason was over, and they were still the real champions, in spite of news to the contrary.

And just at present it looks as if in this case "possession is ten points of the law." At least up to this morning no warrants had been issued for the arrest of any of the Bayard players.

It was stated however by a member of the Mt. State Baseball league that the cup will be awarded to Friendsville, both teams having agreed to abide by the Spalding decision. Since Bayard refused to play another game, the executive body of the organization feels that Friendsville is entitled to the trophy.

MORE REGISTRATIONS OF UNEMPLOYED BEING MADE

Dates Announced For Registrations In Other Towns of County

Registration of the unemployed will continue in Garrett county, this week at Friendsville, and next week at Bloomington and Swanton. More than 275 have registered at Oakland, Kitzmiller and Grantsville, according to Milburn W. Mann, reemployment officer.

The registration hours at Friendsville for Friday, as announced last week, are from 9:00 a. m., until 4:00 p. m., in the town hall.

A representative of the office will visit Bloomington on Tuesday, November 14, to register the unemployed in that community. Registrations will be made in the Civic Club building from 9:00 a. m., until 4:00 p. m.

Swanton will be visited on Thursday, November 16, and registrations will be made in the election building between the same hours as those at Bloomington.

An appeal is being made to everyone in the county to cooperate with the local office and make use of the service offered. A telephone has been installed in the reemployment office. The manager's phone number at his residence is 130-M.

Mr. Mann estimated that there would be more than 500 registered when he has completed his visits to the various towns and communities of the county.

MORE LOANS ARE GRANTED TO FARMERS OF GARRETT

Ten Mortgage Loans, Involving $30,000, Have Been Made

More loans to help farmers of the county to overcome their present financial difficulties, have been put through this week by Paul Ulman, correspondent for the Federal Land Bank of Baltimore and the Land Bank Commissioner.

Thus far there have been ten farm mortgage loans made, involving over $30,000, which money has been paid in cash. The county treasury has benefited by these loans to the extent of over $1,800 paid in back taxes.

Since the appearance of the article in last week's Republican detailing Mr. Ulman's activities, there have been fifty interviews and over thirty applications made for more loans, Mr. Ulman said this morning. He has also received numerous letters from farmers who found it impossible to get to Oakland and who requested additional information.

the loans are being made for a period of thirteen years, with option to extend them to 43 years, to any farmer who is being threatened with a mortgage foreclosure, obligations and debts that are pressing him, such as back taxes, or as working capital for making improvements or any other iegitimate purpose.

The Federal Land Bank of Baltimore and the Land Bank Commissioner have no connection with the Home Owners' Loan Corporation, Mr. Ulman has stated. They are a separate and distinct division of the Federal Government.

Fred. L. Otto Is Held For Attempted Extortion

Fred. L. Otto, of New Germany, Garrett county, was indicted by the Federal Grand Jury at Baltimore last Thursday on a charge of sending an extortion letter through the mail in an attempt to make Dr. Norman R. Davis, of Grantsville, pay him $1,000 under threat of death to himself and members of his family.

Otto was arrested last July by State and county officers and agents of the United States Department of Justice after a watch had been placed where Dr. Davis was directed to place the money demanded of him.

Otto was a farmer in his community and had met with severe financial reverses. Dr. Davis is president of the First State Bank at Grantsville.

Rev. Douty's Schedule of Conferences Announced

RELIEF WORK NOW OPEN TO UNEMPLOYED TEACHERS

Numerous Classes Will Be Formed and Instruction Given During Winter Months

MEETING HELD YESTERDAY

An effort is being made in Garrett county to give work to some unemployed teachers. In several communities classes will be formed where instruction will be given.

This relief work will not only furnish jobs to unemployed teachers, but will also present opportunities to those adults in Garrett county who desire to get the additional training.

Members of the committee on Emergency Relief Work in Education for Garrett county held their first meeting in the office of the County Superintendent of Schools yesterday afternoon for the purpose of discussing ways and means for the development of their problems.

Members of the committee are F. E. Rathbun, County Superintendent, who is also chairman; Miss Ethel Miller, executive secretary of the County Welfare Board; County Agent John H. Carter, Miss Margaret Burtis, home demonstration agent, and W. D. Mullinix, acting chairman, with Mrs. Eva F. Bishoff and O. T. Graser, representing the vocational teachers of the county. Other members may be added by the chairman later. Mr. J. D. Blackwell, representing the State Department of Education, also attended the meeting.

A letter of authorization for the Maryland program setting forth the purposes of the work and the discussion of the Maryland plans formed the basis of the conference.

The provisions for relief work in education are that Federal Emergency Relief funds may be used to pay work relief wages to unemployed teachers qualified to teach persons 16 years of age or over, the proposed classes being in agriculture, commercial, industrial and homemaking subjects, and the reading and writing of English to persons unable to read and write, and physical education. A limited amount of funds is available for vocational rehabilitation.

While the total amount of funds available to Maryland is somewhat limited and the funds available to Garrett county small, it is expected that such work as is demanded by Garrett county residents will be offered, provided unemployed, qualified teachers are available.

It will be decided later where meetings will be held for the purpose of explaining the work full yto persons who may be interested in meeting once or twice a week, either in the morning, afternoon or evening, for two hours during November and December, and in securing enrollments. No tuition fee will be charged.

Classes to be organized may include business English and letter writing, mathematics, care of infants, reconditioning old clothing, home nursing, home management, meeting the needs of the home on reduced budgets, preparation of foods, sewing, unit courses in agricultural subjects, such as caring for the dairy herd, care and management of poultry, the growing of small vegetables and fruits, etc. It is expected that a large number of persons will take advantage of this unusual opportunity.

The teachers will receive a salary of seventy-five cents per clock hour of instruction. All unemployed teachers who desire teaching positions will immediately apply to Miss Ethel Miller, local executive director of the Welfare Board, or a letter, giving details as to the type of work and most convenient time and place for the class meeting, may be sent to the acting chairman of the county committee, W. Day Mullinix, Grantsville.

Full credentials as to the applicant's training will be necessary.

PAUL IN MACEDONIA

LESSON TEXT—Acts 16:9-15, 25-31.
GOLDEN TEXT—And they said, Believe on the Lord Jesus Christ, and thou shalt be saved, and thy house. Acts 16:31.
PRIMARY TOPIC—A Happy Preacher.
JUNIOR TOPIC—Ambassadors for the King.
INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOPIC—Finding and Following God's Way.
YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOPIC—The Gospel and World Peace.

I. Forbidden to Preach in Asia (vv. 6-8).

The inclination of the missionaries was to tarry in Asia Minor, prenching the Word, but they were hurried along, contrary to this inclination—a fine example of divine guidance. The Holy Spirit is just as active nnd faithful in closing doors as in opening them. "The stops as well as the steps of a good man are ordered of the Lord."

II. The Call to Macedonia (vv. 9-12).

The time had now come for the gospel to begin its conquest of another continent. The crossing of the gospel from Asia to Europe determined the entire history of the church. Instead of being an oriental movement, it became mainly occidental.

2. The vision (v. 9). Paul being hemmed in on all sides, experienced a vision of a man of Macedonia pleading for help. This made clear the meaning of the closed doors about him.

2. The ndvnnce (vv. 10-12). As soon as the divine way was known they moved forward.

III. The First European Convert (vv. 13-15).

The Jewish element in Philippi was so small that they were unable to afford a synagogue. Therefore, the devout people were accustomed to worship by the river side. To this humble gathering Paul came and preached. Lydia, a business woman of Thyatira, believed his message and was baptized. The steps in her conversion were strikingly typical—

1. Attendance at the place of worship (v. 13). Usually those whom God is calling are found in the place of prayer.

2. Listening to the preaching of the Word of God (vv. 13, 14). The instrument used in the conversion of sinners is God's Word. "Faith cometh by hearing and hearing by the word of God" (Rom. 10:17).

3. Her heart was opened by the Lord (v. 14). When the gospel is preached the Spirit of God opens the sinner's heart for the reception of Christ.

4. She was baptized (v. 15). Confession of Christ in baptism is the nntural desire of those whose hearts the Lord has opened.

5. Hospitality practiced (v.15). Those who experience God's saving grace are disposed to have part in his work by aiding his ministers.

IV. Paul and Silas in a Roman Prison (vv. 16-40).

1. The occasion (vv. 16-24). As the missionaries went to the place of prayer they were accosted hy a young woman who possessed a spirit of divination. In the name of Jesus Christ, Paul commanded the evil spirit to come out of her. With the casting out of this evil spirit went the supernatural power which was a source of revenue to the syndicate of men who owned her. This so enraged her owners that they brought Paul and Silas before the magistrates on a false charge. Without opportunity to defend themselves Paul and Silas were stripped, beaten by the angry mob, remanded to jail, and were made fast by stocks in the inner prison.

2. Their behavior in jail (v. 25). They prayed and sang hymns to God. In spite of circumstances their hearts went up to God in joyful gratitude.

3. Their deliverance (v. 26). The Lord wrought deliverance by sending a great earthquake which opened the prison doors and removed the chains from off their hands.

4. The conversion of the jailer (vv. 27-34). What he heard of Paul's preaching and through his present experience, made the jailer n humble inquirer after salvation. Paul clearly pointed out the way of salvation.

5. The magistrates humbled (vv. 35-40).

a. The prisoners ordered released (vv. 35, 36). The earthquake produced fear in them, moving them to order the prisoners' release.

b. Paul's refusal to go (v. 3). The ground of his refusal was that their rights as Roman citizens had been violated.

c. Officially brought out of prison (vv. 38, 39). Because these were Roman citizens, the officers removed them with fear for what they had done.

Power

When a man receives the Lord Jesus Christ he is to realize that he also receives the power of God to pass through all his being, and to be exhibited in the world for the glory of God and for the salvation of others.

Never Mind How Many!

It is fatal to all courage and energy to begin with counting our foes, instead of realizing the strength of our ally. Greater is he that is for us than they that are against us.—Dr. Alexander Maclaren.

SCOOP'S COLUMN

By Scoop Himself

Is It Always Like This?

The other day I chanced to be in the Clerk's office at the Court House when a couple appeared wanting a marriage license.

And was the boy flustered!

Miss Nethkin, who always attends to these matters, told the young man to take off his hat and hold up his right hand and be sworn. And what did the boy do? He held up his hat and tried to take off his right hand

We received a letter the other day. We won't attempt to spell it the way it was, but it was addressed to the parents of school-age children of Garrett county and read, as nearly as we could make out:

"If a child of nine years old don't know what 5x9 is, and then the teacher don't know what 9x5 is, it's time to think things over."

I think so, too.

The following was sent me by a gentleman of the cloth and was a clipping he had found in a very old book he had. But no matter, it still might apply today. It read:

Lives of poor men oft remind us
Honest toil won't stand a chance;
The more we work there grow behind us
Bigger patches on our pants.

On our pants once new and glossy,
Now of stripes of different hue,
All because subscribers linger
And won't pay up what is due.

Then let us all be up and doing,
Send your mite, however small,
Or when snow of winter strikes us
We shall have no pants at all.

Don't you feel silly to be talking about someone, not necessarily in a discourteous or disrespectful manner, but rather jokingly, and then have him come out of a room nearby—and you wonder if he heard you.

And I wonder if Shorty Gortner has had any orders for snipes.

Rev. Homer Turney, of Columbus, Indiana, now has one on me. In a letter the other day he writes: "I note in the forty years ago column in The Republican that G. W. Merrill was thrown by some ancient 'hold,' in wrestling, I presume. Those who are up on the modern 'hold' in wrestling, as I am, would like to know just what kind of a 'hold' was used on him. Who was the fellow who threw him? Must have been SOME MAN to 'bruise and otherwise hurt.' Just why did they pick the railroad crossing, especially just as a train was going by?"

The original article, written correctly, was manhandled by an "intelligent compositor" in the office who left out a line—horse he was attempting to"—which might make the paragraph sound better and convey its meaning.

G. W. Merrill was bruised and otherwise hurt when he was thrown by a "horse he was attempting to" hold at the Mt. Lake Park railroad crossing as a train was going by.

Mr. Turney also enclosed with his letter a clipping from the Indianapolis News which concerned a wedding and the performing of the ceremony: "Dr. William B. Freeland, Muncie, read the COWS at a candlelight service," the clipping reads.

"I should like to have seen Dr. Freeland reading the 'cows' at the service," writes Mr. Turney. "Were they Jersey, shorthorn or just common cows?"

No, Mr. Turney; they must have been above the common herd.

The other day three professors of Chicago University were discussing "inflation" at a round table conference. They covered the field all right, but when they got through we didn't know any more about inflation than my hound Hank, and we doubt if they did, either.

Yough Boosters Meet

The regular meeting of the Yough Boosters was held Wednesday, November 1, in the Selbysport school house.

An open discussion was held on the problems of production in the community. Fred Richter represented the Mt. Airy Canning company and explained the problem of vining and transplanting the peas.

J. A. Conover dairy specialist, spoke on "Livestock Improvement."

The next meeting will be held on December 6.

DR. METZGER SPEAKS ON STATE'S FARM PROBLEMS

Address Given Before Father and Son Banquet of F. F. A.

At the annual meeting of the future farmers and their Dads last Friday evening, October 27, Dr. J. E. Metzger, assistant director of research and head of the Agronomy department, University of Maryland, spoke on the problems and possibilities of Maryland Farms.

Parts of his speech are being reprinted as they will be of interest to the farmers of this community. Lack of space prohibited its publication last week.

Maryland Farms—Problems and Possibilities

So much has transpired in agriculture in recent months and so many of the plans for the development of our economic interests are still in the balance that it is with trepidation that any one should speak of them. On the other hand, it is of no avail to sit by idly and let come what will without taking note as to how the proposed changes in affairs may effect us individually. Neither can we afford to be inactive in adjusting our own situation to the requirements of new procedures and tendencies in rural affairs.

Of the many problems that face rural people at the present time, it seems to me that the most important of them may be classified under five groups or titles. These groups are Cooperation; taxation; production; tenancy; and the human problem.

Cooperation

Until recently the cooperative movement in this country was entirely a local enterprise, detached from any important socialized accessorics. The new cooperative movement is nationalistic. It calls upon the people to join in a great mass movement to correct certain economic maladjustments that our leaders believe to be responsible for the unfavorable economic situation of practically all of our people during the last few years.

The recovery measures have been referred to continually as experiments. Experiments which must be replaced by other experiments in the event that they should fail. The facts are that about the only experimental features which they contain are their application in this country. Practically every proposal under the several recovery measures has been tried out in one form or another in some other country. To be sure those countries definitely have either dictatorships or socialistic forms of governments. The only real experimental features about their use in this country is whether or not the American people want this type of control over their economic activities, and whether or not they are willing to substitute certain socialized forms of control over agriculture and industry for individual initiative.

The success of cooperative movements is largely dependant upon the mental attitude of the people who adopt them. Such movements have not succeeded well in this country in the past. Whether or not they will succeed in this our first attempt on a natoinal scale remains to be seen. At the present moment there does not seem to be sufficient unity in the thought of our people or sufficient economic inducement offered by a beneficient government to make the movement more than a passing expedient.

Taxation

I have tried to make it clear that the problem of cooperation has for the time being at least passed beyond the stage of isolated community efforts and that it has become a major concern of the national government. The remaining items on our list are perhaps of greater local interest and importance than they are state or national.

The tax problem in the state of Maryland should be of vital interest to every taxpayer whether he lives on a farm or lives in a town or city. Probably no problem has caused more difficulties than the problem of taxation. The American colonies were established primarily for the purpose of increasing the revenue of their mother country. The impetus to establish an independent nation on this continent came from differences of opinion regarding taxation. The greatest struggles that the infant nation had, were with the problem of taxation for the maintenance of the government and for the development of its necessary functions. Taxation was a problem to which the very earliest of economists gave a great amount of attention. The early French economists known as the "Physiocrats" believed that agriculture was the only productive industry and that only productive industries should he taxed, which meant that for a time, about two and one-half centuries ago, the farmers of France carried the entire tax burden of the nation. About the time of the formation of the United States a new theory of taxation was evolved, namely, that those people most able to pay should bear their proportionate share of the cost of the government. Between 1775 and 1841 Maryland tried various types of licenses, fees and indirect forms of taxation. They even tried for a few years an income tax system. About 1840 there was established in this state the basis for our present form of taxation, namely, the general property tax.

Without doubt, the general property tax was for many years the most equitable form of taxation. That it has ceased to be the only justifiable type of taxation is due to the development within the state in the last half century. General property taxation throws a heavy burden upon the groups of people whose sole income is from this type of property and may not require the person whose incomes are in the form of wages and fees for professional services to contribute their full share.

Fortunately in Maryland we are not burdened with heavy state debts. The state of Maryland can pay every debt it now owes by 1947 without any increase whatsoever in the rate of taxation. I wish the same might be said for some of the counties. In certain counties the obligations made in the past will require heavy tax levies to be made annually until 1971 in order to pay the interest and bonded indebtedness. In other words, some counties are obligated two generations ahead. Fortunately for you Garrett County stands at the top of the list of counties that do not have heavy bonded debts.

The state has made great progress in the past in handling its tax situation in the interests of the people. Our state taxes are among the lowest in the nation. Such taxes as are collected are returned for most part to the direct use of all the people of the state. About 69 per cent of the farmers' taxes in 1932 were for support of the county government and 31 per cent for state government. Of the increases in taxes 75 per cent are used for such items as schools, roads, and the care of dependent people. A large percentage of this state tax eomes from fees and indirect taxes, such as the sales tax on gasoline. A forward step was taken by the last legislature when all roads were placed under the state. In doing so there was gained for the property tax a very real item of savings. By placing more of the cost of schools on the state and less on the counties, another great savings could be made to the over burdened real estate tax requirements in Maryland.

I believe that every taxpayer in the state should make it his business to acquaint himself with the facts in the case. They should make inquiries into such items as the efficiency of the assessments; the relative amounts of taxes paid by persons living on the farm and in towns; the separation of farm land and buildings in the assessment method; the license fees for motor trucks and buses on the highways; and the advantages of various forms of taxable resources as especially sales taxes on luxuries. The information is available to you for the asking. I hope that many of you will take advantage of this opportunity and become real factors in the solution of the tax problems of Maryland.

Production

In turning to the production problem, we find a wide range of interests that might be included. The Maryland Experiment Station has issued, since its beginning, more than 350 bulletins or phamplets. At least 90 per cent of these bulletins deal either directly or indirectly with the production problem. In looking over the general field it seems to me that there are two outstanding needs at the present time. The first of these is the necessity for farmers to produce a greater percentage of the feed and food requirements on their own farms. It is not generally known that in addition to all the corn and oats and wheat and hay that is grown on Maryland farms each year, our farmers still find it necessary to spend more than eight million dollars each year for additional feed supplies. A large percentage of this expenditure falls on two important items in this state; namely, dairying and poultry production. Very few farmers buy feed for the production of hogs, beef cattle, and sheep. They dispose of this type of livestock rather than buy feed for them. Some of them, of course, buy feed for work animals, but with the dairying and the poultry the problem is entirely different. Every dairyman has a milk check come to him regularly each month, but unfortunately with many of these dairymen a large percentage of this check immediately passes from his hands in order to meet his payments.

There is probably no state in the union that has such a wide range of crop production possibilities as has the state of Maryland. There is not a single section of this state where some suitable type of feed crop could not be grown in order to meet the needs of almost any type of farming that the individual might wish to do, or any type of farming that might be profitable in the community.

When I speak of the East, I mean only those states lying on the Atlantic seaboard and I do not include the New England states. In the last five years these eastern states have produced approximately 30 per cent of the nation's corn, 7.5 per cent of the entire wheat crop and 11 per cent of all the winter wheat. There has been produced during this period about 16 per cent of the hay, 26 per cent of the potatoes, 25 per cent of the apples, 28 per cent of the vegetables put in cans and perhaps more than 50 per cent of all the marketable vegetables. These farmers have produced 10 per cent of the cattle, 6 per cent of the hogs, 20 per cent of the dairy cows and 12 per cent of all the eggs produced in the United States. To remove any of these items from the competition for agricultural products would be a boon to the agricultural west and ta remove all of them would more than solve the agricultural ills of the nation.

There are some items in the Agricultural Adjustment program that are doubtless a disadvantage to our farmers as producers. Two of these items are extremely important to us. The plan adopted requires that a flat reduction be made on production throughout the country. This doubtless will work somewhat of a hardship to our people, in that we are compelled to reduce to even smaller quantities, commodity items that are already a deficit in our area. And this, in spite of the fact that we are located in the very midst of the best markets in the country. The other item is the replacement of the utilization of land taken out of production. We are asked to not plant any of this land that is taken out of the production of corn, wheat and tobacco in crops that might compete with other crops of which there might he a surplus in the country at large. We are asked to do this notwithstanding the fact that our farmers have paid out no less than thirty-five million dollars for additional feed supplies during the last five years. I am confident that every farmer can well afford to analyze his own situation with respect to the crops that he is growing or could grow in relation to the food requirements of the animals and individuals living on these farms. Your Experiment Station and your Extension Service can give you much help in making an analysis of your farm business. That many farmers are taking advantage of this kind of service is indicated by the thousands of letters that are being written each year in analyzing farm production programs.

Coordinate with the questions involved in our Agricultural program is that of land utilization. Here again Maryland is extremely fortunate in that it has had surveyed, classified, and mapped every soil type in every county of the state. In addition to this, a large percentage of the soil groups have had fertility tests run on them. As a result of this work it has been possible within the last year to prepare for you a new report, or bulletin, on the soils of Maryland, giving them a valuation as to their productivity. In this report the soils of the state were grouped according to their productive capacity on a state-wide basis and in addition they were classified and evaluated on the basis of their adaptability to the production of certain types of crops. In other words, it is now possible to take any soil type in the state of Maryland and determine the kind of crop that this soil might be used for and also find its value for this purpose in relation to other soils of the state. Incidentally, Garrett county holds a rather unique position in this respect. Slightly more than 84 per cent of your farm land falls within the upper four groups of agricultural soils rated on a state basis. To be sure, your climate does not permit the production of certain crops that might be grown in other parts of the state, but nevertheless there is a sufficient list available to you to make the county second to none as a place in which to carry on a farming business.

Tenancy

It is difficult to consider the land utilization question without making note of the trends in tenancy. Problems of tenancy in this county are not as serious as they are in many others of the state. More than 34 per cent of all the farm lands in the state of Maryland are operated by absentee land lords, that is, farmed by tenants. In your county only 10.7 per cent of the farms are operated by persons other than the owner of the land. In one county on the Eastern Shore more than 60 per cent of the land is being farmed by individuals who have no interest in it except that which they can get out of it during the interim of their lease. I doubt whether there is a single forward looking citizen in the state or a reputable rural economist or socialist who would consider an increase in tenancy as a desirable trend in our rural development.

The evils of tenancy are centered chiefly in the abuse of land, both with respect to its preservation and its immediate use. Unpreserved land places an unjustifiable debt on future generations. Improperly used land is taking an unfair advantage of people now living. Both of them are undesirable from the standpoint of the development of any state or region and sooner or later it will be necessary for the people at large to concern themselves with it.

The Human Problem

The human problem is probably the greatest of our rural problems. In touching upon this problem, I am of the opinion that it concerns the boys and girls who are now in high schools more than it does the adults of the community. A few qualities should be developed during school days.

The first of these is self discipline. One of the finest characteristics of youth is the refusal to admit the existence of limitations. But one of the very necessary and perhaps the most useful of your attainments is that of measuring accurately and early in life your mental capacity. To proceed in a state of mental illusion can result only in haunting failures and regrets for misguided efforts. To find and evaluate personal capabilities properly is the first important step in the education process. To discipline and develop the talents which we have becomes the purpose of subsequent effort.

The second factor is that of courage. It requires great courage to keep faith and confidence in yourself, that is, play fair with yourself, after you have discarded all the deception, the false show and the mocking pretense which so easily becomes a part of our moral and creative structure. Who has not been impressed with the simplicity, the frankness and the generosity of the truly great personality, and yet the development of such a character may require years of conscious effort combined with the utmost struggles in self discipline.

There is a constant conflict between the hero in us and the coward in us. Unfortunately this conflict begins in youth and equally unfortunately it does not pass from us as we go into manhood. It is a life long struggle—a constant battle. Courage is a mental attribute which only occasionally appears in the form of physical bravery. Moral courage is in itself not spectacular. In fact, some forms of it are decidedly drab and dull because of the accompanying routine.

There is an unwritten law among seamen to the effect that all calls of distress from a sister ship must be answered and that every possible aid must be given. Duty requires that sailors and officers go out to the distressed ship but it does not require them to come back. They are obliged to make an honest attempt at the rescue but they are not censored if the attempt fails. In like manner the parents who send you to school expect you to make an honest effort to succeed but they do not condemn you if in all fairness you have not measured up to their full expectations. A conscientious and courageous attempt may be expected logically of you; the results of such attempts are accepted by parents and teachers without blame or malice. There can be no ill will toward the individual who has made an effort commensurate with the ability, no matter how far below the prescribed standard he may fall.

Finally, loyalty designates the virtue that gives personality. It is the sinew and fiber of honest living and absolute integrity. A brilliant mind is not necessarily the mark of a great personality. Napoleon described Talleyrand as "a silk stocking full of mud." Aaron Burr graduated from Princeton University with the highest honors ever conferred by that institution upon any graduate. George Washington was a man of average brain power, but he exercised great fidelity in the trusts imposed upon him. He was honest with himself and with all people which meant nothing more than being loyal to his ideals and to the institutions that had rightful claims upon his fidelity. Loyalty to your home, to your school, to your church, to your country, and to your employer, these are the means through which you will be measuerd and evaluated as a citizen and as a member of society in general.

Success when honestly and fairly measured represents something a man is and not something a man has. It is what we make out of life rather than how we make a living. The research worker in the laboratory may he a greater factor in the success of a manufacturing corporation than the man who is president of the company. It is all a matter of what we do and how well we succeed in making effective our creative talents. It is not enough to acquire positions but it is also necessary to hold them. There is no greater incentive for honest effort and effective endeavor than the hope that we may eventually succeed. The expectation that you may be more successful and accomplish greater things in life is the hone and desire not only of your parents but of all good teachers.

The Flowers Count!

We have often received compliments on the care we give to the floral offerings at funerals. While this detail is sometimes neglected as unimportant, we feel that it is a duty we owe not only to the dead but to the surviving friends who have made sacrifices to provide this beautiful tribute of affection. For this reason we have purchased special equipment for arranging the flowers in the most attractive manner possible, and give the matter the most careful attention.

FEDERALIZED SCHOOLS

A double dangerous doctrin was advocated in New York this week by Dean William F. Russell, of Teachers College, Columbia University. First was the familiar plea for federal aid to education. Second, the threat that without it the schools of America will be unable to stem the tide of despotism in government or their students be adequately instructed in the enlightened purposes and principles of a planned economy.

It is despotism which is feared by the opponents of federal control of education, which is the ultimate aim of most of those who want the schools supported by federal funds. There is political despotism, the probable consequence of putting expenditures for education under bureaucratic control. There is the despotism of doctrinaries in education, given too much authority in a national school system.

It is a sophistry that the schools must be given federal aid so that they may instruct the citizens of tomorrow in their duties under the "new deal." Nothing much worse could happen to the schools than that they should be made the proving ground of economic policies or an outlet for propaganda.

Dean Russell, of course, urges that American education be rescued by Washington so that it may train "citizens who will have the background and knowledge sufficient to judge clearly the efforts of our leaders toward economic reconstruction." Does he believe that a federal department of education would encourage such a critical and judicious spirit in the schools? Will teachers under such conditions feel free to bite the federal hand that feeds them? Or will education become the most obvious of all instruments for swaying public opinion to the will of those in authority over its destinies, its purposes and—above all—its financial support?

Hard times have aggravated this issue, without changing its character. Free education in the United States is tempted to sell its soul for a mess of public money. When prosperity and stability return, the agitation may die a natural death. Until then the federalization of education must be fought by all who believe in real freedom for the schools and those who work and study in them.

THE FIRST GUN

The first Republican gun since the election of 1932 has been fired, the trigger having been pulled recently at a meeting of the Hamilton Club in Chicago by former Senator James E. Watson, of Indiana. There has been a division of opinion in Republican ranks as to just when organized criticism of the present Democratic policy should commence. Some have thought that the Republican National Committee should begin its activities at once while other leaders have counselled delay until after the first of the year and the approach of the 1934 congressional campaign.

While the address of Senator Watson is unofficial, in that it was not arranged by the Republican National Committee, it is of interest because it foreshadows just what the Republican line of attack will be in the campaign next year.

Senator Watson accused the administration of attempting to socialize industry through the NRA contrary to our scheme of government, stated that it had failed to reduce costs, failed to maintain a stable currency and failed to maintain the government credit. Touching on what he thought should be the future course of the Republican Party, Senator Watson is quoted as saying:

"I believe that the Republican Party should affirm its determination to stand by the Constitution of the United States, its fundamental principles to be preserved unaltered but to be applied to changing conditions so as to promote the equality of men in America, the basic thought underlying this instrument.

"We are said to have entered the last war to make the world safe for democracy, yet democracy was never less secure anywhere in the world than at the present time.

"This should teach us to cling to a representative republic such as our fathers founded and not bend our efforts toward making our government a pure democracy, every effort toward which has only weakened its cardinal principles."

Watson said that the wealth of the country "can not be wholly redistributed by taxation processes."

"We are opposed," said Watson, "to regimenting every young man entering active life putting him in a straightjacket, giving him an opportunity to be so much and no more."

Of course if the NRA program meets with a reasonable measure of success and most of the present friction can be ironed out, the Republicans will be under a serious handicap next year and will have to confine their attack to a criticism of the administration's monetary and socialization policies. But if the NRA fails there will be a general barrage all along the line, and one which will doubtless be effective. The future success of the administration in a political sense depends in a great measure on the success of the NRA because the President and his advisors have elected to pin their future to it in a big way.

There are, naturally, several handicaps. The biggest problem confronting the administration now is that of the farmer, whose income has not gone up commensurately with the cost of things he has to buy. Unless the farmer can be satisfied the going will be rough for the Democratic Party in the biennial election next year. Another handicap to the administration is the dissatisfaction over political appointments. This is something which every administration has to face, however, and is never as serious as the politicians themselves think it is. The voters in general are more interested in the return of normal conditions than they are in whether Bill Jones or John Smith gets an assistant secretaryship in Washington.

RITCHIE CHALLENGED

Fourteen years in office have developed elements of antagonism to Governor Albert C. Ritchie. Some of his own democratic friends say so. They urge he quit and leave the governorship for some of his supporters.

The Governor has kept his own counsel in the matter. If he determines still further to put his popularity to the test, he will face opposition in the primary, one candidate already having entered the lists against him.

Declaring that a fifth term is too many for any chief executive, or a fourth or even a third or second term, Dr. Charles H. Conley, a physician of Frederick, who charges that the Ritchie regime has unduly increased the cost of State government and created on office-holding aristocracy, has netered the fight against Ritchie. He raises the slogan of economy and a single term for any governor of Maryland.

His announcement has met with approval from a number of men active for years in democratic politics in Baltimore, whose sentiment, as expressed by one of them, was that the time is ripe for a good old-fashioned democratic primary fight.

Outside of mentioning Nice as the Republican candidate for governor, thus early, the G. O. P. of Maryland is quiescent, relishing a scrap between Ritchie, the would-be candidate for a fifth term, and Dr. Charles H. Conley, who says one term is enough. —Cumberland News.

Mrs. Blaine Newlon, of Akron, O., spent Sunday and Monday at the home of her uncle, S. W. Slabach.

Miss Roselle Brenneman, of Cumberland, was a guest of Mr. and Mrs. W. E. Spoerlein at their home in this community last week.

Mr. and Mrs. Harvey Gortner and daughters, of Grantsville, visited relatives here on Sunday.

Enos Swartzentruber and Mr. and Mrs. Lloyd Swartzentruber, of Iowa, who attended the funeral of their father at Norfolk, Va., last week, arrived here on Monday to remain with relatives a short time.

IN DAYS OF OLD

FORTY YEARS AGO

W. G. Riley, near Mt. Lake Park, entered The Republican office demanding the respect accorded a father, it being his first child in the family.

The first indication of approaching winter arrived in the form of scattering flakes of snow.

It was said to be definitely settled that the C. and O. railroad would be constructed from Friendsville to Oakland.

From the Hoyes letter, "W. A. Smith, the man that always smiles when a good sale is in reach, will move into his new dwelling soon."

About thirty cottages were to be occupied at the Park during the winter. The 1893 season was considered successful in spite of hard times and the World's Fair.

An O'Brien from Piedmont arrived in Oakland, got "jagged" and while in this condition drove off with Sincell Bros'. horse and wagon. He was overhauled at the flouring mill and after a little rough treatment he was allowed to continue his journey.

TWENTY YEARS AGO

Dudley King, 16, was accidentally shot while hunting near Thayerville with Joseph Ellig, the load from a shot gun entering his hip.

Congressman Lewis in a speech predicted that in the next two years Congress would authorize the Postoffice department to take over the telephone monopoly and operate it.

While engaged on C. F. Hammond's stone crusher John Ault fell twelve feet and was painfully injured.

Luther Nine's home at Underwood was destroyed by fire.

Gilbert Green, conductor on the Jennings railroad, had one leg cut off below the knee when he fell between the cars.

While tearing down a building near Sunnyside Oscar Ridder was struck by a falling piece of timber, breaking his wrist.

Rev. Archibald Moore preached his first sermon to his new congregation in St. Paul's M. E. church.

HOW TO SAVE MONEY ON YOUR MONTHLY GAS BILL

This is the fourth of a series of five articles describing methods of gas economy in the home. Other articles explained the adjustment of flames and burners, gas economy in cooking, and boiler, furnace, water and room heater efficiency.

Economic Use of the Oven

Oven-cooked meals are recommended as contributing to the economic use of gas, for they require less fuel than meals cooked principally on the top of the stove, according to gas company service departments.

Oven flames should burn a clear blue, free from yellow tips or sputtering. Adjustment of oven burners, however, should not be undertaken by an inexperienced person. The gas companies have experts who render this service.

An oven temperature regulator or thermostat assures constant temperature and saves gas, since it prevents greater heat being created than is required. It also makes it unnecessary to frequently open the oven. Whenever an oven is opened while in operation, it is cooled, and more gas is required to bring it back to the necessary temperature.

Time and temperature charts are intended to help save gas as well as aid the cook. They should be used as a further help in gas saving.

It is also needless to heat the oven too long before food is ready, as gas heats up more quickly than any other fuel. A little care in timing operations will reflect itself in the gas bill.

It's foolish to say sharp, hasty things, but it is a great deal more foolish to write them. When a man sends you an impudent letter, sit down and give it back to him with compound interest—and them throw both of the letters in the waste-basket.

CHRISTMAS SEALS ARE RECEIVED AT STATE OFFICE

Will Be On Sale Thanksgiving Day to Continue until Holidays

Thirty million Tuberculosis Christmas Seals arrived this week at the office of the Maryland Tuberculosis Association in Baltimore, and will be used during the coming annual Christmas Seal sale of the Association in Maryland. The sale will open on Thanksgiving Day and continue until Christmas, as has been the custom for twenty-seven years.

William B. Matthews, managing director of the Maryland Tuberculosis Association said that the 1933 Christmas Seals show in silhouette two figures drawing a yule log while a third blows a bugle to announce the opening of the holiday festivities.

An innovation this year is the use of the margin at the bottom of each sheet of one hundred seals for an educational message. In this space appear the words: "Buy Christmas Seals. Tuberculosis is Preventable." Thus the public is reminded of the purpose for which the Seals are sold.

In Maryland for more than two decades the Seals have helped support anti-tuberculosis activities. The Association clinics have been conducted in cooperation with the State Health Department for ten years. The Miracle House has been maintained as a preventatorium for children for fifteen years. The Association and its county affiliated units have also conducted a health educational program in schools, industry, and by means of meetings, motion pictures, health literature, etc., the seals have also assisted in the maintainance of nursing service and medical research.

Mrs. C. Milton Sincell, of Oakland, has again been named chairman for Garrett county.

DIED.

MRS. SARAH MASON

Mrs. Sarah Virginia Mason, aged a little more than 82 years, died at the home of her sister-in-law, Mrs. Patrick Mason, at Elk Garden, West Va., on Monday, following an illness of several weeks.

Mrs. Mason was a daughter of the late James and Margery Chisholm, of Preston county, West Va., having been born at Chisholm's Mill, on Route 50, just across the State line from Garrett county. She was the widow of the late David M. Mason, for many years agent for the Baltimore and Ohio Railroad in Oakland, whose death at an advanced age, occurred at his home on Third street more than ten years ago.

Following the death of her husband Mrs. Mason continued to reside at her home on Third street until about three years ago, when she went to live with her sister-in-law at Elk Garden where her passing took place. She was a member of the Oakland Presbyterian church in Oakland during her long life and was devoted to its interests.

Funeral services were conducted at the home of Mrs. Mason in Elk Garden yesterday afternoon, following which the remains were brought to Oakland and after brief graveside services conducted by the Rev. Walter B. Brock, interred by the side of her late husband in the local cemetery.

Has Poem Published

William Wonderly, Mt. Lake Park, has had a poem published in the Moody Bible Institute monthly magazine for November. The poem appears on the special page of religious verse. Its title is "Hope Amid Anxiety," and follows:

"What is mankind to do, and how?"
Our statesmen ask in fear;
While on their shelves, forgotten now,
The Bible makes it clear.

They sign long treaties to release
The world from its distresses;
But they forget the Prince of Peace,
Whose law mankind transgresses.

Our Bible says that wars will cease
When Christ comes back to reign;
Till then the world is not at ease,
But "travaileth in pain."

To us who have "the blessed hope"
There is no cause for fear;
In darkness we need not grope—
Redemption day is near.

Court Cases are Decided

At a hearing before Judge D. Lindley Sloan Mrs. Elsie Walter, Deer Park, widow of the late J. W. Walter, was permitted to continue the operation of tho filling station at Deer Park pending final hearing and disposition of the ease, and she will be responsible for all obligations incurred in its operation.

The ease involved Mrs. Walter against the children and grandchildren of the late J. W. Walter, for determining the property rights of the parties involved.

Judge Sloan also rendered verdicts for $1160 in the case of George Z. Dawson against the National Slovak society of the United States, which was heard during the September term of court.

The suit grew out of the failure of the defendant to pay Mr. Dawson his wages as watchman and caretaker at the Deer Park hotel during 1932 and 1933, the claim being slightly over $1,500.

THE MARYLAND BIBLE SOCIETY'S CORNER

"The Word of Our God Shall Stand Forever"

ST. MATTHEW

The Gospels tell the life story of the most wonderful person who ever lived in this world, Jesus the Christ. He is called the Son of Man, and also the son of God. He was sinless, yet loved and forgave sinners. He was all powerful, but resigned his power to live as an humble teacher of the wayward and ignorant. He was perfectly just, and yet suffered the cruelest injustice at the hands of those whom He came to help.

Matthew, whose Gospel is given the first place in the New Testament, was one of the twelve apostles chosen by Jesus Christ, to be the bearers of His message. Undoubtedly Matthew was a Jew, but of the hated class of Roman tax collectors. It was while seated at the house of customs that Jesus found him, and extended the invitation which caused him to leave all and follow his new Master.

Luke tells us that Matthew made a great feast in honor of Christ, who attended it despite the fact that publicans belonged to a despised class.

The Gospel of Matthew was addressed primarily to the Jews, with the evident purpose of convincing them that Messiah was at hand, and His Kingdom about to be established. This Gospel contains about sixty references to the Jewish prophecies, and something like forty quotations from the Old Testament. In Chapter 10, verses 5 and 6, after naming the disciples, Jesus commands them as follows: "Go not into the way of the Gentiles and into any city of the Samaritans enter ye not: but go rather to the lost sheep of the House of Israel." Again in chapter 15, verse 24, he says, when requested by a Canaanitish woman to heal her daughter, "I am not sent but unto the lost sheep of the house of Israel."However, seeing her great faith, he later said: "O woman, great is thy faith; be it unto thee even as thou wilt." And her daughter was made whole from that very hour.

The apparent purpose of this book is to show that Jesus of Nazareth was the Kingly Messiah of Jewish propheey. It contains a complete genealogy of Christ. Among its incomparable incidents and discourses are, the visit of the Magi, who were led from their Eastern home by the star to the manger of Bethlehem; the flight into Egypt; the slaughter of the Innoecnts; the return of Nazareth; the coming of the Pharisees and Sadducees to John the Baptist; the Sermon on the Mount; the loving invitation of the man of sorrows to all the sorrowing; "Come unto me, all ye that labor and are heavy laden, and I will give you rest."

Certain parables of the Master are found only in Matthew. Among these are The Tares, the hid treasurer, the goodly pearl, the draw net, in Chapter 13; the unmerciful servant, chapter 18; the laborers in the vineyard, chapter 20; the two sons, chapter 21; the marriage of the king's son, chapter 22; the ten virgins, the talents, the sheep and the goats, chapter 25.

What all of us need for spiritual culture is not to read about this great gospel, but to read and re-read it until its messages live daily in our thought and action.

THE PASSING SHOW

By the Man in the Street

(From the Baltimore Observer)

At the Dr. Conley dinner on last Wednesday evening the name of Governor Ritchie was mentioned by only one speaker except the casual mention by William Curran. That was when the diners were rising from the tables to go home. And William J. Grove of Lime Kiln, Frederick County, was the unannounced orator.

He wasn't on the program at all but he didn't mind that. He got right up in the meeting and asked to be heard and heard he was. Mr. Grove eulogized Dr. Conley as a Democratic candidate for Governor and bowled out that Governor Ritchie had "been there long enough." And with this sentiment the crowd evidently agreed for there was great approval. Mr. Grove is more plain spoken than some others.

True it was that Mr. Curran said about the same thing in another way when he referred to the same people being at the public trough for years and years. And it is Ritchie who has kept them at the trough along with himself as chief beneficiary. The diners knew that, too.

The sponsors for the dinner thought they had done a great deal when they got Mr. Curran to speak and say what he did at what might well be called a non-union Democratic gathering. Mr. Curran was cautious. He didn't want to get "too far out in front." He thought the people should set the pace and that the Democratic leaders (real or so-called) would have to follow. Four years ago Mr. Curran was one of the cautious. He didn't want to be looked upon as a Democratic "scab." The well-informed know just how that is—and so Curran did not indorse the candidate in whose honor the dinner was given by Baltimore Democrats who think (like Mr. Grove) that Ritchie has been there long enough.

Dr. Conley was concise in what he said and convinced his hearers of his earnestness. He declared himself in the race to stay and that sounded all right. Nobody cares for quitters in politics nor for that matter in anything else.

Accompanying the candidate was his wife and several children—all evidently political as well as social assets.

The old Blanket published a rather peculiar account of the dinner. It singled out certain names from the list of diners, apparently seeking to make the affair one gotten up by followers of the late Senator John Walter Smith. And the same old Blanket, for what purpose we cannot see, said that about half the diners were women. This was not true. One-fourth would have been a liberal estimate but then, one can always see, the ex-luminary has designs of its own in publishing accounts of political matters.

That same Wednesday night Isaac Lobe Straus, former Attorney General, went out to Larry Lockwood's club on the edge of town and delivered what is described by hearers as the best speech of all his life. He threw caution out of the window and went right after not only the Ritchie administration but after the Governor himself and placed responsibility where it has always belonged. He called a spade a spade and suggested the impeachment of His Excellency, a suggestion that has been made before—at Annapolis.

The former Attorney General was on fire. He was eloquent beyond measure and brought his audience to a high pitch of enthusiasm. He was not a machine gun but a Big Bertha of politics. But the old Wet Blanket? It gave Mr. Straus a few lines on an inside page gingerly.

We know what it was about. The Blanket, we understand, is still pretty well Ritchiefied from press room to brainery. But that is not all. A few years back Mr. Straus dared to represent Mrs. Donald Hooker in a libel suit against the publishers of the Great Journal and won the verdict. Since that he gets little space in that journal. He is apparently on the black list, like the one James Gordon Bennett the elder had for Phineas T. Barnum, showman, many years ago.

There was a desire to put the address of Mr. Straus on the radio but it could not be done as there was not sufficient time in which to string the wires, so we are told. Perhaps Mr. Straus will soon again unloose his thunder bolts and with radio service. If so, he will be circumventing the news suppressing division of the Black Patterson would-be journalistic dictatorship.

For the Scripps-Howard Baltimore Post we must say it gave the Straus address fair space even though two big political events occurred on the same night. The Hearst News evidently did not know what it was all about or possibly the space had to be saved for A. Brisbane's daily mutterings and real estate puffs.

The Conley dinner may have seemed tame to some as there was no firewater—not even beer. Those present seemed to be bent on serious business—that of undertaking to dethrone a dictator. It was no time for merry making.

The Bel Air Aegis has an editorial calling attention to the fact that few of the State's judges have offered to accept a reduction in salary to meet the needs in these days of overburdened taxpayers. And in so doing the Aegis seeks to focus attention on the action of the Governor in reducing his own salary of $4,500 by fifteen per cent, or $675.

The Aegis evidently forgets the real official income of His Excellency. When he went into office one of his first acts was to increase the mansion allowance from $10,000 a year to $15,000. And on top of that are various other allowances so that the pay of the Governor has actually been about $32,000 a year. So what does the $675 amount to when compared with the fat pickings the Governor has been having these many years?

True, many think the judges very well paid in comparison with what most of them were able to earn before they reached the bench, but not one gets $32,000 a year. And there are judges on the bench, we are sure, who would not have made of the Governorship the sad mess Ritchie has managed to concoct.

There is speculation a-plenty about the further distribution of the Federal offices in Maryland. A rumor that Senator Tydings would back William I. Norris for city postmaster and Bernard J. Flynn for U. S. Attorney sets the tongues to wagging more rapidly.

What many are asking is how far the national administration will go in rewarding the Maryland backers of the Stop-Roosevelt movement of last year. Maryland did nothing for Roosevelt but Ritchie did manage to collect a considerable fund to be used in the effort to head off the New Yorker. No account of the expenditure of this political fund has ever been made public and we do not think that anyone would dare to state how the cash was used. This fund, it appears, was outside the law although legal.

We suggest that before any more Maryland appointments are made the proposed appointees should be required to state how much money (if any) they contributed to the Stop-Roosevelt fund raised in Maryland.

Such a procedure might bring surprising information to National Chairman Farley.

As for the originial Roosevelt men in Maryland, they have been left in the cold. And out in the cold they may well expect to stay. Such is politics.

The Somerset lynching investigation goes on and on like the babbling brook but there will not be sufficient babbling of witnesses to bring about the conviction of anyone for taking a hand in the speeding up of justice, too often leaden-heeled.

An investigation is in keeping with the Ritchie method of making a great display of trying to lock the door after the horse has been stolen.

The Governor, as might be expected, will continue to blame Judge Duer. The Judge, if he made a mistake in this case, relied too much on the Governor's highly-uniformed State police. Judge Duer did not name the policemen. This force was under the Governor's control just as much as is a rabbit warden or a county road supervisor in the enlarged party machine over which His Excellency presides.

But the greatest farce of all was the announcement of a commission by the Governor to see what can be done to speed up criminal procedure. A reform, indeed, to be started by Ritchie after Ritchie has been Attorney General four years and Governor for nearly fourteen years!

Could anything be more ridiculous?

Can official clownery go much farther?

The sober citizen will do well to take note of what Dr. Conley said in his address on Wednesday evening. Without any effort at oratory he told of the conditions confronting the people of this State, of the burden of taxation that has been heaped upon them for more than a decade, and of the brazen attitude of those now in control.

Certainly it is time to stop and think.

Writes From Cuba

Charles Bevans, a native of Grantsville, who has been employed in the U. S. State Department, in Washington, D. C., for the past several years, has been transferred to Cuba during the unsettled condition there. He was chosen from among others in the State Department to go to Cuba. The following letter describing the City of Havana, was written to his brother, here.

Hotal Ambos Mundos,
Habana, Cuba.

Dear Jim:

Last Sunday morning I had quite an interesting and enjoyable time traveling around with one of the men from the Embassy. We hired a boat to take us all around the harbor first. It took us by the big battleship Richmond and the Coast Guard destroyers stationed here to protect the Americans. We crossed the spot where the battleship Maine was sunk about forty years ago, during the Spanish-American War. In the water we could see the tops of the masts of a large number of sailing vessels that sank during the storms a few weeks ago. A number of schooners still floating were battered, splintered and had their masts broken in the storm. Over to one side were several old steel ships that have been run aground and left rusting in the shallow water. At one place along the harbor front they were unloading a seatrain. A seatrain is a ship that carries freight cars loaded with merchandise that is expensive to handle and hard to pack. The cars were being unloaded with hugh cranes that pick them up, lift them out of the ship and set them down on the railroad track. Along the docks were a lot of boys fishing. They were not using poles but would simply drop a line down in the water and some of them were catching whoppers about a foot long. At one of the piers was a big ocean liner and from the lower part freight was being transferred to the dock, while on an upper level passengers were going across a gangplank from the ship to the pier. All around the harbor were bales of hay, washed there during the storm. A ship loaded with hay for the horses in the army was so battered by the wind and rain that the hay on the deck was washed away.

After going all around the harbor we had the boatman take us to the opposite side where we got off to see the old fort called Morro Castle. We walked up the roadway, through a little arched doorway where we were stopped by some soldiers, but they were very courteous and were glad to let us go in and look around.

Inclining roadways and old stone steps, we climbed until we were on top of the high walls. The walls are about twenty feet wide and a hundred or more feet high and made of limestone. Nearby in the greenish-blue water we saw a lot of sailing boats skipping along in the wind, gliding across the choppy waves. Often when going home at night from work I see the big sailing vessels sailing down the harbor like big white ghosts, on their way out to fish. They usually bring back about ten tons of fish, all of them alive. In a part of the ship is what is called a well which is filled with water, and into which water from the ocean flows continuously.

After going around over all the walls and looking at the old rusty canons, some of which are four hundred years old, we went through some of the big rooms on the inside. At one place we saw smoke coming out of a high window and we went in to see what was there. Over a wood fire on the stone floor was an iron grate about ten feet square, raised about a foot above the floor. On the grate were four large kettles in which the soldiers' food was cooking. There were no other pots and pans, only a few large bowls in which the raw vegetables and meats were brought in and the cooked food carried in to the mess hall. In the mess hall was a large sign in Spanish, saying that a person's manners at the table show what kind of training he received at home.

We walked through the high walled courtyards and down stone steps to the bottom of the fort. At one place there was a stone stairway leading down to the sea. On each side of this stairway in larger steps were big stone jars, nearly as large as barrels, which we suppose were once used for storing water or food.

On the highest part of the fort in one of the rooms was a large telescope that the keeper let us look thru at the city. In the same room we saw a Spanish drinking jug hanging in a window. The jug had a hole at the top to fill it and on the opposite side at the same level was a little spout with a hole about a quarter of an inch in diameter. To drink from the jug, one tilts it up about a foot from the mouth and catches the water as it pours out. A fellow sure has to drink fast to keep up with the water.

Having seen the fort we decided to walk up along the ocean. In going out we went through a long passageway lighted by the sun coming through little slanted windows. At the end of the passage was a moat and an old-time drawbridge. We crossed over and went for a walk along the sea.

Along the edge of the ocean the waves would come dashing against the rough coral rock and would throw up showers of white spray. On the rocks were several large green crabs crawling around. Back a short distance from the water I found some pretty pieces of coral and two little seashells which I am bringing home.

Near dinner time we went back to the harbor, crossed it in a rowboat and went home, a little tired and very hungry.

Hoping this finds all the home folks well and happy. Yours sincerely,
Charles.

AVOID BEING CAUGHT BY A COLD BY KEEPING FIT

Cold Catches One When He's Off Guard or Below Par Physically

With fall colds much in evidence, Dr. R. H. Riley, director department of health for Maryland, was asked for advice as to ways by which one could keep from catching cold. "It is a mistake," he answered, "to say that you 'catch' cold. Nobody would deliberately run after a cold. The cold catches you—when you are off guard and below par physically.

"To avoid being caught, the best thing to do is to keep yourself thoroughly fit. Then you have it within your power to make an obstruction race of it—to put certain hurdles in the way that will help you to win the contest.

"Colds and other diseases of the breathing system, are spread by discharges from the nose and throat. The germs against which you want to protect yourself are broadcast into the air through the careless sneezing or coughing of those who have colds. Here are some of the ways in which you can help yourself from being 'caught'.

"Don't shake hands with people who have a cold unless you wash your hands carefully immediately afterwards.

"Don't borrow your neighbor's drinking cup or his towel, or his pencil or anything else that may have come in contact with the secretions from the nose, or throat.

"Have your own handkerchief; don't borrow another person's.

"Keep your fingers away from your nose and mouth.

"Wash your hands often and thoroughly; and always before eating.

"Dress according to the weather.

"Take some exercise out of doors every day.

"Have plenty of sleep; try not to get over-tired.

"Eat nourishing food, but don't overeat; drink plenty of water.

"Avoid sudden chilling.

"If you don't win out—and the germ overtakes you—have as much consideration for your family, friends, neighbors, school mates, business associates, and the rest of the people with whom you come in contact—as you would want them to have for you.

"Don't broadcast your germs.

"Cover your mouth and nose with your handkerchief when you cough or sneeze.

"The quickest way to get well is to go to bed, if possible, and to stay there until you are better and are no longer a source of danger to others. If you ache all over and have any signs of fever, send for your doctor—then do as he tells you to do."

BITTINGER

On Wednesday afternoon of last week, favored by ideal weather, the neighbors gathered at the farm of George Stark, near this village, and spent several hours in the corn field husking corn. In the evening, with the older folks as an audience, the young folks initiated a newly constructed poultry house on the Stark farm by staging a dance. George Stark and Elmer Hoover, with violin and guitar, furnished the music, while Lester Green, of the Dry Run settlement, acted as traffic director on the floor and Elbert Buckle marshaled the uninstructed ladies through the intricate movements of the square dance, which in other days was rurally spoken of as a "hop." All enjoyed the evening and the delightful supper and refreshments served by Mrs. Stark.

Charles H. Wiley motored to Baltimore last Sunday with his young daughter Fannie, who will undergo a course of treatment in that city. Mr. Wiley was accompanied by Lawrence Brenneman, a neighbor, the return being made on Monday.

Mr. and Mrs. O. C. Buckle and Mr. and Mrs. Herbert Buckle motored to Oakland last Sunday afternoon to attend the Reformation service in the Lutheran church in that city.

All of last Sunday the whole out-of-doors took on the appearance of winter. A fine drizzling rain fell throughout the day and as the temperature hovered around the freezing point fences and shrubbery were thickly laden with ice by evening.

John Swauger, of Jennings, was a business caller in Bittinger last Saturday evening.

Constable Andrew Shartzer, of Oakland, was one of the out-of-town business visitors in Bittinger last week.

Robert Broadwater, of Dry Run, was here on business last Saturday evening.

Simon Brenneman was employed at some carpenter work in the North Glade community last week.

Mr. H. B. Walker, of Pittsburgh, spent a few days last week as the guest of Mr. and Mrs. Silas C. Beachy.

NATIONAL AFFAIRS

By FRANK P. LITSCHERT

Some newspaper man the other day, in commenting tersely on the differences of opinion which have grown up between Henry Ford and General Johnson, suggested that if everyone who is dissatisfied because the NRA has raised the cost of living more than it has raised his income, were to buy a Ford car, the famous Detroit manufacturer would not be injured to any great extent by a proposed boycott of his products.

While there is neither the time nor the space available here to discuss the whys and wherefores of the controversy between Henry Ford and the NRA, it is undoubtedly true that a great deal of such dissatisfaction as may exist among the rank and file of our people today is due to the fact that generally incomes have not risen as fast as the cost of living. That is behind the latest wave of farm discontent, and the complaint can be heard on the street corner in the city as well as in the rural districts. While it is undoubtedly true that the recovery program in shortening hours and increasing wages has helped the workers in many industries, it is equally true that such workers represent only a small percentage of the great body of American consumers, even in urban districts.

That the rise in the price of finished products has outrun the rise in the price which the farmer gets for his produce is undoubtedly true, and this furnishes the inspiration for a great deal of the present demand for inflation. In the towns and cities too there are many workers who have received no increase in wages commensurate with the increase in the price of the commodities they have to buy, and there is another great class of consumers who live on fixed salaries or fixed incomes who are undergoing the some unpleasant experience. The government has sought to help the farmer with a processing tax on wheat and cotton, but up to this time the policy has only succeeded in raising the price of necessities in the city without aiding the farmer to any great extent. And the processing tax on wheat, for example, is not a sound method for increasing the consumption of flour, no matter how it may be viewed from other angles.

Evidently on the theory that the new farm recovery plan has not had sufficient time to work itself out, the government is going ahead with an extension of processing taxes. The latest pronouncement of Secretary Wallace is for an allotment plan for corn and hogs. The procedure is similar to that in the wheat plan for cutting down production, and to pay the cost of hiring the farmers to reduce hog production, a processing tax which will amount to two dollars a hundred pounds by February 1, 1934, to be levied on live hogs. Just how this will work out remains to be seen. It used to be the theory that when there was a surplus in the country one way to remedy the situation was to increase the demand. This is evidently not the present theory, however, as raising the retail price of pork in the markets of the country will not tend to induce the ultimate consumer, who is already a little peeved, to increase his consumption of pork. And it is not to be forgotten that a tax of two cents a pound on live hogs is apt to be multiplied many times before it gets to the ultimate consumer.

One thing leads to another. Since they realize that higher pork prices may tend to induce people to turn to beef, some so-called economic experts are now suggesting a small processing tax on beef in order to "even up" when the price of pork goes up, although it is generally admitted that there is no great surplus of beef cattle in the country.

The entire governmental recovery plan with its many ramifications has now become so involved that a great many students of economics are beginning to wonder just where we are going to come out. Some of them are wondering whether it wouldn't have been a better, as it certainly would have been a simpler recovery plan, to have passed minimum wage and minimum hour laws in the first place, subject to review and modification by competent authority, and let it go at that, trusting to the good sense of the American people to finish the work, aided as they would have been, by federal construction and the natural forces of recovery which have been trying to improve the situation in America for several months now, just as they have been improving it in England, in France, in Germany, in Italy and in South Amercia.

MT. LAKE PARK

We wonder if we are not overlooking a bet! The following idea may be fantastic—but this is a fantastic period. Things are happening that never happened before—and let us hope will not happen again. What we mean is, that the government, thru one of its newly created agencies has purchased a thousand acre tract of land in the adjoining county of Preston, in West Virginia, near Reedsville. On this acreage it proposes to set up another of its experiments in the general plan of recovery. It is more or less a back to land movement, and will feature the establishment of an agricultural-manufacturing center. It will take its personnel in the present instance from the overmanned mining industry in West Virginia, and we understand the first contingent is already on the ground doing the preliminary work.

Near Mountain Lake Park and Oakland, and in other sections of Garrett county thousands of acres of tillable land, suitable both for farming and manufacturing purposes, are now not earning the taxes assessed against them. It has occurred that there may be a chance—a remote possibility, but still a chance—that a similar project might be secured for this county.

By the way, Bushrod (Jack) Grimes is one of the prime movers of the project, which is located on the old Fairfax homestead, said to have been originally surveyed by George Washington.

The coincidence is that Mr. Grimes' forebears were friends and neighbors of Bushrod Washington, hence the name—Bushrod.

The benefits of the work done on the streets with RFC funds, under the direction of the town authorities, are apparent. Sections of the roads, which last winter were all but impassable, were stoned and will now afford some measure of safety and comfort to automobilists and others having occasion to use them.

Many sidewalks, however, are in a bad state of repair and some, indeed, are difficult to negotiate in bad, sloppy weather. But improvement in this respect will come in time.

Homemakers Column

Some foods, like some people, are good mixers. Rice is one. It mixes well with almost anything. It readily takes on flavor from other foods, and lends its delicate texture to modify theirs, but keeps its own identity. Thus it makes good flavors go farther. It is an economical food for this reason as well as because of its price. In food value, white rice is an energy giver. That is to say, it plays the same part the other grains play in the diet, and serves that purpose admirably. Polished rice, the ordinary white rice, has about the same food value as highly milled wheat flour. It is composed chiefly of a very digestible starch. For this reason, says the bureau of Home Economics, if you are trying to keep down food costs, it is a good thing to cook rice in milk. In that combination you have a good start for a well-rounded diet. As with other cereals and milk, you can get along with fewer foods, and cheaper ones, than if you begin with any other combination. The cheapest rice is white rice, sold in bulk. This is the rice grain after it is milled and polished.

Rice cooked in milk for breakfast; rice in soups; rice with gravy; rice and fish; meat stews in a rice ring; rice in hot breads; fritters, or pancakes; rice scalloped with tomatoes; rice creole; rice and cheese croquettes; rice with prunes or raisins; rice puddings—these are some of the almost countless rice dishes the housekeeper can provide at very modest cost to the great satisfaction of most families. To cook rice, boil it gently in plenty of water (2 quarts of salted water to 1 cup of rice). When cooked the grains should be tender but unbroken, and should stand apart. For best results with brown rice, cover it after 30 minutes of gentle boiling, and let it simmer until it is cooked through and the water is absorbed. Rice was not growing in this country when the first settlers came, but was introduced from Madisgascar by a roving sea captain in 1694. Now, we grow nearly 39 million bushels a year, chiefly in Louisiana, Texas, California and Arkansas.

Beef and Ham Gumho in Rice Ring

½ pound eured ham, 2 tablespoons chopped parsley, 1 onion, sliced, 1 qt. okra, canned or dried and soaked, ¾ pound beef, diced; 1 green pepper, chopped fine; celery seed, if desired; 1 pint water, 1 quart tomatoes, fresh or canned; ½ cup chopped celery, salt and pepper to taste.

Cook the ham and heef until browned in a large heavy frying pan. Add the parsley, onion, green pepper, and cook for a few minutes. Add the water and tomatoes, cover, and simmer until the meat is almost tender. Then add the okra. Season to taste and simmer uncovered until the okra is tender and the stew has thickened. Serve the gumbo in a rice ring made as follows:

Rice Ring

1 cup rice, 4 cups water, 1 teaspoon salt, 2 tablespoons butter, 2 dashes Tabasco sauee.

Wash the rice well, and sprinkle it into the rapidly boiling salted water. Cook for about 20 minutes, or until the rice is tender and the water absorbed. Add the seasoning, put the rice into a well-greased ring mold, and pat it down. Reheat in the oven, turn onto a round platter, fill the center with the gumbo, and serve at once.

Muffins

2 cups corn meal, 1 tablespoon sugar, ½ teaspoon salt, 2½ teaspoons baking powder, 1 cup cooked rice, 2 cups sweet milk. 1 egg, 1 tablespoon fat.

Sift the meal, the sugar, the salt, and the baking powder together. Mix the rice, the milk, the well-beaten egg, and the melted fat; then add the meal and other dry ingredients. Bake the mixture in well-greased muffin pans. This will make 14 to 18 average muffins.

Wheat Facts

Whole-ground wheat, or the whole grains themselves, cooked until tender, make an excellent breakfast food. You can get the wheat grain at a feed store. Clean, whole wheat will keep for several weeks in a cool, dry place.

One pound of whole wheat cooked will make breakfast cereal for a family of five for two days at a cost of two cents.

Fifteen pounds (or 1 peck) will make breakfast cereal for a family of five for one month at a cost of 30 cents.

To cook the whole wheat grain, soak it over night, add water and salt, then boil gently for 3 or 4 hours or until tender.

A coffee mill or a food grinder can be used for grinding wheat at home. For cooking over direct heat, use 6 pints of water to a pound of wheat, with 3 teaspoonsful of salt. Simmer for 1 or 1½ hours.

Cooked whole wheat is good in chowder, in scrapple, in stews, muffins, pudding or cookies. Can be served at dinner as rice or hominy is served. Is good in salt pork hash.

Whole-wheat bread makes economical sandwiches for the children's lunch, if they carry lunch to school, because of the extra food value in whole-wheat flour.

Graham flour, whole-wheat or entire-wheat flour has all the food value of wheat, because they include germ and bran. Wheat flour, highly milled, contains no germ or bran.

Hard-wheat flours have the best gluten, feel slightly gritty to the fingers, make the best yeast breads. Soft-wheat flours have less gluten, feel velvety like cornstarch; make the best eake and pastry. Either kind of flour is good for muffins, biscuits, or other quick breads.

All-purpose flours are generally blends of hard- and soft-wheat flours; make good bread, cake and pastry.

Whole-Wheat Chowder

2 cups diced carrots, 1 pint boiling water, ½ cup diced salt pork, 4 tablespoons chopped onion, 1 tablespoon flour, 1 pint milk, 2 cups cooked wholewhcat, 1 teaspoon salt, pepper, 1 tablespoon chopped parsley.

Cook the carrots in the boiling water until tender. Fry the salt pork until crisp, remove it from the fat, and cook the onions in the fat. Stir in the flour and cook a few minutes longer. Mix all the ingredients in the upper part of a double boiler, stir until well blended, and cook for about 10 minutes.

Whole-Wheat Pudding

To 1 cup of cooked whole-wheat, add 2 unbeaten eggs, 2 cups milk, 2 to 4 T. sugar, ½ cup raisins or fruit (dried or canned). Stir enough to mix. Pour into eustard cups or a baking dish. Bake in moderate oven as for eustard.

Scalloped Liver and Whole-Wheat

4 thin slices bacon, or salt pork, 1 onion, sliced; salt, pepper, ½ pound liver, 2 cups eooked whole-wheat, ½ cup hot water, flour.

Fry the bacon or salt pork until crisp, remove it, brown the onion in the fat, and push to one side. Salt, pepper, and lightly flour the liver and fry slowly in the fat until the red color disappears, turning it frequently. Cut up the liver and the bacon or salt pork, mix with the onion, and add more salt if needed. Put the wheat and liver in a greased baking dish in alternate layers. Pour the water around the sides of the dish, cover, and bake for about 30 minutes. Serve from the dish.
